U. S. SLAPS ON BOOZE LID

RUSSIA TODAY AS SEEN BY A FAMOUS WRITER

H. G. Wells Tells of Nation's Collapse.

H. G. Wells, the famous British novelist, and his son have just returned from Russia, where Mr. Wells made an intensive study of the conditions under soviet rule. Their visit carried them to all sections of the country and their information was gained from personal investigation and interviews with all classes of people. The Tribune today presents the first of a series of articles from Mr. Wells. It deals with conditions in Petrograd. Other articles are to follow (the first of them in next Sunday's Tribune), dealing with conditions in other sections of the country.

RUSSIA IN THE SHADOW

FIRST ARTICLE.

BY H. G. WELLS.

[Copyright: 1920: By the New York Times Company. Copyright in Canada.]

In January, 1914, I visited St. Petersburg and Moscow for a couple of weeks. In September, 1920, I was asked to repeat this visit by Mr. Kamenoff of the Russian trade delegation in London. I snatched at this suggestion and went to Russia at the end of September with my son, who speaks a little Russian.

We spent a fortnight and a day in Russia, passing most of our time in St. Petersburg, where we went about freely by ourselves and were shown nearly everything we asked to see. We visited Moscow, and I had a long conversation with Mr. Lenin, which I shall relate.

Guest of Maxim Gorky.

In St. Petersburg I did not stay at the Hotel International, to which foreign visitors are usually sent, but with my old friend Maxim Gorky. The guide and interpreter assigned to assist us was a lady I had met in Russia in 1914, the niece of a former Russian ambassador to London. She was educated at Newnham.

She has been imprisoned five times by the bolshevist government. She is not allowed to leave St. Petersburg because of an attempt to cross the frontier to her children in Esthonia, and she was therefore the last person likely to lend herself to any attempt to hoodwink me.

As a matter of fact, the harsh and terrible realities of the situation in Russia cannot be camouflaged.

Naturally when one demands to see a school or a prison one is not shown the worst. Any country would in the circumstances show the best it had.

Our dominant impression of things Russian is an impression of a vast irreparable breakdown. The great monarchy that was here in 1914, and the administrative, social, financial, and commercial systems congregated with it, have under the strains of six years of incessant war fallen down and smashed utterly.

Peasant Still Unchanged.

Never in all history has there been so great a débâcle before. The fact of the revolution is to our minds altogether dwarfed by the fact of this downfall. By its own inherent rottenness and by the thrusts and strains of aggressive imperialism the Russian part of the old civilized world that existed before 1914 fell and is now gone. The peasant, who was the base of the old pyramid, remains upon the land, living very much as he has always lived. Everything else is broken down, or is breaking down.

Amid this vast disorganization an emergency government, supported by a disciplined party of perhaps 150,000 adherents, the Communist party, has taken control. It has, at the price of much shooting, suppressed brigandage, established a sort of order and security in exhausted towns and set up a crude rationing system. It is, I would say at once, the only possible government in Russia at the present time. It is the only idea. It supplies the only solidarity left in Russia. But it is a secondary fact. The dominant fact for the western reader, a threatening and disconcerting fact, is that a social and economic system very like our own and intimately connected with ours has crashed.

St. Petersburg Striking Example.

Nowhere in all Russia is the fact of that crash so completely evident as it is in St. Petersburg. St. Petersburg was an artificial creation of Peter the Great. His bronze statue, in a little garden near the admiralty, still prances amid the ebbing life of the city. Its palaces are still and empty, or strangely furnished with typewriters and ta-

SERVE AMERICA BY PARTY RULE, HARDING'S PLAN

President Elect Off for Rest in Texas.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 6.—[Special.]—Government by party, not for the sake of the party, but the whole people, was the promise made by Senator Harding today in brief talks made in a dozen station stops on the first day of his vacation journey from Marion to Point Isabel, Tex.

The election is over, and we're no longer merely Republicans and Democrats, but all Americans, he said. There was no trace of partisanship in his talks.

Like Campaign Days.

"While I have preached the gospel of party government," he told crowds in Indiana, Ohio, and Illinois, "that is, government through the sponsorship of party, I may tell you now that I do not want my party to be serving to keep itself in power or to perpetuate the placeholding of any members. I want my party to serve America for the American people."

The first day's journey of the president elect was remindful of the crowded days of the campaign, yet with an interesting difference. There were the same throngs at the railroad stations in the cities along the line of the Big Four railroad, the same eager rush to crowd around the platform of Senator Harding's private car. But the attitude of the people was obviously different.

Senator Harding's Talks.

To most of the welcoming crowds at various points Senator Harding had something to say. The gist of his talks was:

"I can understand why you come to see me. It is because the people in our America are interested in popular government, and when the people are interested in popular government you can be sure that we shall maintain it. We have just been through a national campaign. I am pretty well satisfied with the result, and I hope you are. Nay, more, I hope the great party for which I have spoken will not be a disappointment to the people of America when we come into power on the fourth of March. We won our victory for Republican policies, and Republican candidates, but from this time on it is to be a victory for American policies and the American people."

The old crowds looked on with appraising eye, weighing and studying the candidate, making up their minds whether they liked him or not. The new crowds had dropped that attitude of appraisal. They had accepted the man. Therefore, they were all his friends and well wishers and supporters. They looked upon him as the president and they stood hat in hand, liking and confidence in their faces. They were not so noisy. They were a shade more respectful.

Those Making Journey.

Senator Harding left Marion at 8 a. m. today in a special train of five cars. With the senator in the private car Superb were Mrs. Harding, Dr. and Mrs. C. W. Sawyer of Marion, Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Jennings of Columbus, Senator Frederick C. Hale of Maine, George B. Christian, Senator Harding's secretary and who will be secretary to the president, a post now held by Joseph P. Tumulty with President Wilson, and James Sloan, formerly of the secret service, who has been Senator Harding's bodyguard during the campaign.

In the private car Berwick were Mr. and Mrs. Edward B. McLean of Washington, Harry M. Daugherty, Senator Davis Elkins of West Virginia, and Jess W. Smith of Washington Court House, O., a close friend of Daugherty and of Senator Harding. In the compartment car Calluro were the correspondents of the larger papers and press associations, with secret service agents designated by the government to accompany the president elect. With a baggage car and a dining car these cars made up the train.

Reaches Destination Monday.

The special train reached this city at 7:30 p. m., after making many brief pauses, all of which palpably convinced the senator of the satisfaction of the people over his victory. He left St. Louis half an hour later over the Iron Mountain railroad and will pass through Little Rock, Ark.; Texarkana, Palestine, and Austin before reaching San Antonio late tomorrow night. He will arrive at Brownsville, twenty miles from his vacation destination, Point Isabel, at 11:30 a. m. on Monday.

Senator Harding again expressed a hope today that he can secure a thorough rest in Texas and during his sea voyages to and from the Canal Zone.

While in the south he will avoid political discussions and not attempt to work on matters connected with his presidential plans, leaving these duties for the period he will spend in Marion between Dec. 8 and March 4. He wants to play golf and catch a tarpon and breathe good air.

THE PRESENT DEMOCRATIC ADMINISTRATION, SEEKING ENDORSEMENT WAS REPUDIATED BY A CONDEMNATORY VOTE GREATER THAN ANYTHING IN THE ANNALS OF OUR HISTORY.

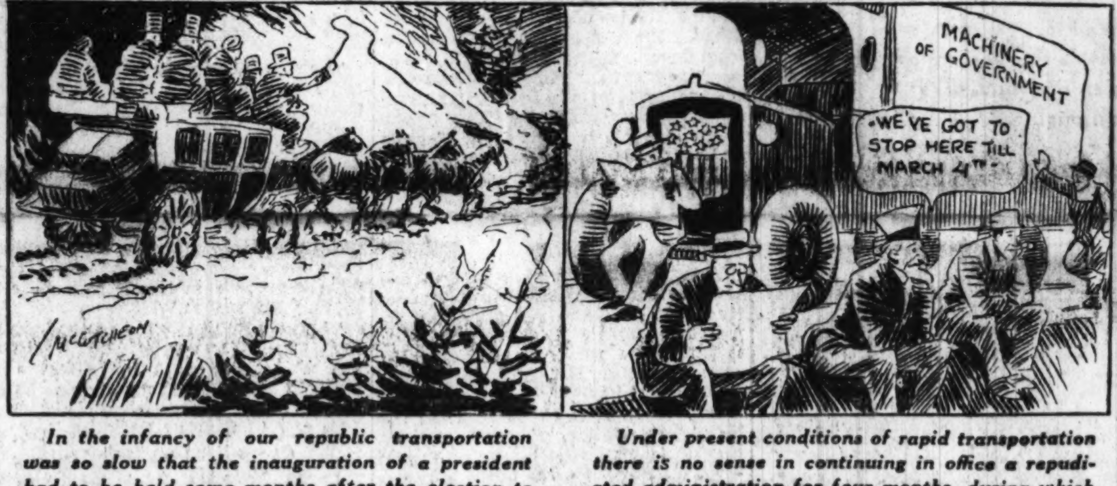
As history chronicles the defeat of the present Democratic administration.



In the infancy of our republic transportation was so slow that the inauguration of a president had to be held some months after the election to enable distant legislators to reach Washington in time.

Under present conditions of rapid transportation there is no sense in continuing in office a repudiated administration for four months, during which the nation is obliged to mark time.

SHRINKING RUPEE THREATENS INDIA WITH DIRE PANIC

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

DELHI, Nov. 6.—Depreciation of the rupee has demoralized all Indian foreign trade and the country faces the grave possibility of financial panic. The warehouses in all ports are choked with American and British goods, which the merchants refuse to accept. The banks find millions of dollars in bills they are unable to collect and a number of firms already have entered bankruptcy.

The Lahore Merchants' association has formally pledged its members not to accept foreign shipments until the rupee is restored to favorable exchange. Cotton goods exchange has been hit the hardest blow, but all English and American imports are included in the lists of goods in India, whose bills are long overdue with payment having been refused. The merchants also announce that they will not bid the goods in if they are foreclosed.

Many American merchants are returning to the United States on account of the complete stagnation of the markets. The Indian government has been appealed to in an effort to obtain a definite and favorable rate of exchange.

Matters are worse than had been expected as a result of the reaction following war prosperity. Slow retail buying coupled with the political uncertainty and general unrest all make a most depressing situation. The bankers predict a crash unless exchange rises.

Lansing's Sisters Hurt in Automobile Crash

Syracuse, N. Y., Nov. 6.—[Special.]—Hurled from their seats when their automobile collided with a steam roller near Watertown, N. Y., late yesterday afternoon, the Misses Emma and Katherine Lansing, sister of the former secretary of state, narrowly escaped death. They were badly bruised and shaken up.

Men in Auto Fall 100 Feet; 1 Unhurt; 1 Injured

Kansas City, Mo., Nov. 6.—Two men, riding in a large motor truck, today ran off the inter-city viaduct and fell 100 feet, the machine landing upside down on railroad tracks below. The driver, J. L. Knaus, was seriously injured. His helper, Adain Lejay, crawled uninjured from beneath the wreck.

ROADHOUSE MAN SLAIN BY PASTOR

Friends Threaten to Kill Canadian Dry Raider.

Windsor, Ont., Nov. 6.—Whether the Rev. J. O. L. Spracklin, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church of Sandwich and a leader of prohibition enforcement agents along the border, must stand trial for the slaying early today of Beverly Trumble, an inn proprietor, was to be determined at a coroner's inquest still in session at a late hour tonight.

Crown Attorney Rodd announced he would take no action against the minister-license inspector until the coroner's jury had given a verdict.

In a statement to police officers Spracklin claimed he shot only in self-defense and his version of the raid on Trumble's place was corroborated by three other officers who were with him.

"Murder," Widow Says.

Trumble's widow and several friends who were called to testify, however, declared Trumble was unarmed.

Local police who made an investigation said they had been unable to find the pistol Spracklin claims the dead man had drawn.

Feeling ran high throughout the border cities tonight, and the police said they had heard open threats to "shoot Spracklin on sight."

The minister was being detained at police headquarters for his own safety. Provincial officers took extraordinary precautions to prevent disorders at the inquest, which attracted a large crowd.

$300,000 Church Fund.

During the day members of Spracklin's congregation raised $10,000 for his defense should charges be brought against him, and pledged $300,000 for his bond and defense in court.

Spracklin was appointed a special officer following his charges several months ago that regular authorities were making but little effort to enforce the Ontario temperance act. He had headed many spectacular raids and patrolled the Detroit river in a motorboat for rum runners, with whom he has engaged in several gun fights.

SAID SHE'D GET A PRINCE. DID. JOACHIM'S "IT"

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

BERLIN, Nov. 6.—Germany's latest scandal concerns Prince Joachim Albrecht, who is already notorious for his behavior in Hotel Adlon recently when he threw several glasses at French officers, who did not rise when "Deutschland uber Alles" was played.

Prince Joachim is reported to have been married this week to Baroness von Nostitz, whose maiden name was Stockhammer and who is well known in Berlin hotels and cafés. Police records show that a woman named Stockhammer is one of the thousands under the police vice control system.

Hotel employés declare she has frequented the Adlon bar and lobby for years and she is alleged to have remarked after marrying the baron, "The next time I am going to get a prince."

Recently the baroness was reported to be "vamping" Prince Henry of Reuss.

POLICE CLOSE FOOD SHOPS IN IRISH VILLAGE

Tralee Hit by New Reprisal.

BY JOHN LESTER.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1920: By The Chicago Tribune.]

DUBLIN, Nov. 6.—The population of Tralee is starving. For three days the police have forbidden the bakeries to produce bread or the shops to sell food. All business has been suspended.

Fairs or markets are forbidden by the military and no farm produce is allowed to enter the town.

Police lorries today dashed through the streets firing volleys in all directions. Auxiliaries were left on guard outside the bakeries and they drove hungry women and children from the doors at bayonet points.

A 15 year old girl was shot dead and the town's merchants have telegraphed to the British ministers describing the situation, but no reply has been received.

American Citizen Slain.

John O'Brien of Castle street, an American citizen, was shot dead by British soliders in the reprisals at Tralee following the murder of a British officer.

An official version of the affair says two other O'Briens, brothers, who fled the country during the burning and bombing of the town were arrested with their brother, Thomas, but attempted to escape from a police lorry and both were shot dead. No charge was made against either when arrested.

The American consul at Queenstown has telegraphed the British authorities requesting that they provide protection to the family.

The blockade of the interior of Ireland by the British is being rapidly enforced. Already railway service has been entirely stopped or crippled in some Irish districts, and next week the Midland and Great Western companies will be completely closed down.

Mail Service to Cease.

All the employés of these roads received notice today of this intention.

This step involves cessation of trade and will threaten with starvation many inland towns. The British postal systems will be automatically suspended and the telegraph communications will be closed at the same time, according to the plan of Transport Minister Geddes in conjunction with Dublin castle.

The alleged object of the step is to use a hunger blockade as an additional means in the campaign of Britain to break the national movement in Ireland.

GIRL SLAIN IN FIGHT.

CORK, Nov. 6.—One girl is reported to have been killed and a number of civilians wounded in a pitched battle between police and civilians at Ardfert today. Twenty civilians were said to have been arrested. Several houses were also reported to have been burned in Dingle, and conflicts have occurred in Causeway and Ballylongford.

SWISS COPS GAS, BLAST AND THEN PINCH BAD MAN

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

GENEVA, Switzerland, Nov. 6.—A bandit, Louis Siza, who killed several Swiss gendarmes and then barricaded himself in a villa in the suburbs of Geneva, was captured today after police from adjoining housetops shottered the roof of Siza's refuge with hand grenades and then tossed asphyxiating gas bombs inside. The bandit became unconscious and the gendarmes arrested him.

The bank will specialize in loans to women who want to go in business. All officers will be women. It is to be known as the Women's bank and will be located in the heart of the business district.

Auto Wrecked, Passengers Escape, Walker Killed

Rowdies Beat Choir Singers; Pastor Nabs 1

Several members of the choir of St. Bartholomew's Episcopal church at Sixty-seventh street and Stewart avenue were attacked and badly beaten up last night by ten rowdies who dashed up in front of the church in two automobiles and leaped upon them as they were leaving choir practice.

A short while later the Rev. Dr. E. L. Rowland, rector of the church, swinging from the back of an auto patrol of the Englewood station, captured one of the assailants single handed after an automobile in which the gangsters were escaping had overturned. No motive for the attack could be offered by the minister.

Rowdies Appear.

There are sixty men, women, and boys in the surpliced choir at the church. They were filing from the church shortly after 9 o'clock when two cars, each containing five young men, stopped directly in front of the edifice.

Without warning the gangsters leaped out and began slugging the men and boys right and left. Robert Behrens of 7042 Stewart avenue had his nose broken. Myron Boehn, 7320 Stewart avenue, was struck over the head with a blackjack, knocked down and kicked in the face. Several women were knocked down and badly bruised.

Rescued by Choirmaster.

The fury of the rowdies appeared to be centered against Behrens and Beohn, who were being dragged towards the waiting automobiles when they were rescued by Charles Kirk, choirmaster, and others who came to their aid. While Dr. Rowland was phoning the Englewood station, the men leaped back into their machines and drove away.

Two patrols were sent from the station. In the meanwhile one of the cars had returned and stopped. Dr. Rowland began talking to the men in an effort to detain them until the police arrived.

He recognized them as the men who had taken part in the affray. While he was talking one of the auto patrols rounded the corner and the driver of the car stepped on the gas. The minister leaped on the rear step of the auto and ordered the driver to give chase. For nearly a mile the machine and pursuing patrol zigzagged through south side streets.

Leaps from Patrol; Grabs One.

Finally, at Sixty-eighth street and Yale avenue, the gangsters' machine struck the curbstone in rounding a corner and upset. Dr. Rowland leaped off and collared one of the men before he could get away. The other four scattered and escaped down alleyways.

At the station the prisoner gave the name of Charles Wagner and said he lived in South Chicago. He was found to have a gun in his possession. He refused to give the names of his companions or the motive of the attack.

"They hired me as chauffeur to drive 'em around," he said. "I don't know who they are."

Trouble Over Girls?

Dr. Rowland declared he knew of no enemies of the church who would be responsible for the assault. He said he obtained a good look at most of the gangsters and never had seen any of them before. He denied that the church had been instrumental in closing up any athletic clubs, pool halls or other gathering places of rowdies in the neighborhood.

"The only theory I can advance," he said, "is that the trouble may have been over some girls to whom members of the choir have been paying attention."

ARMY OF RUM AGENTS GRABS "HIP" LIQUOR

Cafes and Saloons Under Guard.

Chicago's booze lid was clamped down for good last night.

At every cabaret, café, and dry saloon federal agents went on guard at dark and stayed until closing time.

Thousands of the regular Saturday night café patrons were examined for flasks and bottles "on the hip." Signs were posted in big resorts ordering no drinking of your own "hip" liquor.

Numerous "near beer" saloons that have been selling liquor were closed.

Breweries that had been supplying beer to restaurants and other resorts ceased deliveries.

Mobile squadrons of federal agents reinforced their permanently stationed brother agents at all strategical points. Another squadron concentrated on hostelries and refreshment palaces in the loop.

"Prison for Whisky Crooks."

It was the vanguard of a federal drive on booze selling and booze bribery. Its aim was the accumulation of evidence of violations sufficient to warrant pentitentiary sentences in Leavenworth.

The federal officials announced they were working under a new policy. "A prison sentence for every whisky crook" is their new motto.

The special corps of agents was last night seeking evidence similar to that which sent "Charlie" Sommers, owner of the St. James Grill and Birchmont hotel, to Leavenworth with a sentence of thirty months at hard labor and a $10,500 fine.

Hectic Day for Booze.

The new policy and its aftermath of search and seizure represented the evolution of a day of determined federal action. Among the developments were:

Coördination of evidence now in possession of the district attorney's office relative to the notorious "Mike de Pike" Heitler $200,000 "coup de booze," in preparation for its submission Monday morning to the special grand jury awaiting it.

Listing of thirty-one policemen, several police captains, at least one higher up in police circles, more than a dozen saloonkeepers, numerous whisky runners and other delvers in the booze muck in preparation for the early issuance of federal warrants.

Appearance of Harry and "Mickey" Frank at the federal building again yesterday. They are believed to have confessed their share in the whisky ring.

Announcement that two and possibly three police captains would be summoned to the federal building tomorrow for questioning. Chief of Detectives Mooney will be quizzed again, it was said.

Picked Squads on Job.

The federal squadrons that swooped down on the booze haunts last night were composed of special agents from virtually every federal investigating department. They were headed in some cases by operatives of the bureau of investigation. In other cases they came from the prohibition and revenue forces.

The city was divided into districts. The location of each of the places to be watched was determined in advance. Men were assigned to each place specifically.

The overflow of agents was divided into four groups. Three groups patrolled the north, south and west sides in search of minor offenders. The fourth, by far the largest, quietly separated, later to visit every downtown place where liquid refreshment is dispensed.

Seize "Hip Liquor."

The result of the widespread search was not announced. It was known, however, that some "hip liquor" was confiscated and that arrests will follow.

District Attorney Clyne during the day issued a final warning to "hip liquor toters." He said sentences in the bridewell or the county jail at Wheaton would be asked on convictions.

The process of surveillance, it was learned, is not for a single night. Tonight and for many nights thereafter as close a scrutiny will prevail. In addition to the arrest of the "toters," the closing of the places they frequent will be asked on the ground that they are public nuisances.

While this lightning-like movement struck the city, it was learned that the Heitler case was virtually ready for submission to the federal grand jurors tomorrow morning.

While they are considering the case, it is said, the federal authorities plan to ask warrants for those against whom they consider they have evidence sufficient to indict and convict. The warrants will be issued secretly. They will be served simultaneously by a corps of picked men.

Those arrested will be brought to the federal building, and after being questioned will be given the opportunity to get bail. But, in order that none may leave the city following their liberation, the federal authorities plan to ask big surety.

Two Franks "Squawk"?

Appearance of Harry and "Mickey" Frank at the district attorney's office again yesterday was regarded as significant. It was their fifth trip in two weeks. They were accompanied by their counsel, Timothy J. Fell. When asked whether they had added their confessions to the long list obtained by the district attorney's office, Mr. Fell threw up his hands, shrugged his shoulders, and declared: "I have nothing to say."

A new wrinkle in booze arrivals came to the attention of the prohibition officers a week ago. It was the shipment of a carload of liquor into the city in the guise of barrels of apples. The sender was located. Through him the names of the potential recipients were learned. Their telephone wires were promptly tapped, it is said, and as a result a score more arrests may be expected.

U. S. Merges Forces Here.

Edward S. Brennan, division chief of the bureau of investigation; Harry W. Mager, collector of internal revenue, and Special Intelligence Officer Frank D. Richardson, all of whom are in Washington on the booze situation, yesterday conferred there and mapped out a program of coöperation among the various departments in Chicago, it is said.

This coöperation, together with the liaison recently established between the offices of District Attorney Clyne and Acting Prohibition Director Jesse R. Brown, will mean a lessening of the burdens heretofore resting on the shoulders of the prohibition enforcement officers and a great addition to the army of investigators now combatting the booze muck in the central states.

Steal $10,000 Liquor.

Five armed bandits entered the wholesale establishment of Michael Bernstein, 3032 West Madison street, early yesterday morning and escaped with 170 cases of liquor valued at $10,000. Bernstein told the police he believed he recognized one of the bandits as an express driver who had delivered the booze.

Following another minor booze escapade, two policemen and a federal prohibition agent were riding loopward in a patrol wagon.

"Say," said the prohibition agent to one of the policemen, "Assistant United States Attorney Kelly wants you."

The policeman fainted.

FRENCH-BRITISH IN AGREEMENT ON REPARATIONS

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, Nov. 6.—The Franco-British rupture was healed this morning when Lord Derby told Premier Leygues of Prime Minister Lloyd George's acquiescence that France should insist upon certain guarantees, including occupation of the Ruhr district in return for fixation of definite figures for German reparations if paid in the near future.

The French were reluctant to name the concrete sum if paid immediately, preferring to insist upon annual payments increasing in size as Germany's ability to pay more increased, but in view of the British concession, France will insist upon guarantees for payment of the indemnity if Premier Leygues' abated position is accepted.

Allied and German experts will meet at Brussels Nov. 15 to study the technical problems and will report to their governments.

Then the allied finance ministers will meet at Geneva with the German finance minister and his experts.

A third conference at Paris will follow when the reparations commission will examine the reports from the first two conferences.

Finally the prime ministers will meet to ratify decision taken previously and to transmit the figures agreed upon to the German government and to agree upon the nature of guarantees if payments should be defaulted. The four conferences will not be concluded before February and the allied governments do not anticipate any American participation.

Three Movie Fans Fire to Save Screen Heroine

Kansas City, Mo., Nov. 6.—[Special.]—"Come quick, they're trying to shoot up this place," came a police call from a motion picture theater at 707 Independence avenue tonight. Three detectives, armed with riot guns, hurried to the theater. When the detectives entered the theater they found a Negro firing a revolver at the screen on which a villain was strangling a heroine to death. In another part of the theater three other Negroes were firing at the screen. As the detectives advanced the lights in the place went out. Later they arrested five young Negroes.

GERMANS HOPE TO CIRCLE WORLD BY AIRSHIP LINES

Expect U. S. to Help in Plans Now Made.

BY GEORGE SELDES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1920: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BERLIN, Nov. 6.—Harding's victory, with the promise of an early peace between Germany and the United States, has awakened the liveliest interest in aviation circles. That is true especially among officials of the Zeppelin company, whose hopes of circling the world with airships, larger than any existing, are revived.

I talked today with Dr. Hugh Eckener, a director of the company, who has just come from Friedrichshafen. He explained the airship situation. Most important was his statement that the Zeppelin airship set aside for America was allotted to Italy, as the United States had failed to join the reparations commission.

Hopes to Build for United States.

Dr. Eckener also declared the American army and navy had entered into negotiations for aircraft, but the parleys failed for the same reason. The company now hopes to have the opportunity to build for the United States.

Furthermore, he declared that two American firms sent representatives to Germany last year, but no deal was made. He hopes that peace will be followed by the resumption of negotiations, which eventually will lead to make a reality of the rumored Spain, New York, Chicago, San Francisco Air Line, the first link in the plan to circle the world.

"Work on the first Zeppelin intended for the American trip was suspended in January by orders of the allied mission," declared Dr. Eckener, "but it is possible to complete it within eight months if we receive permission to go ahead. This ship will have a gas capacity of 100,000 cubic meters. It will be the largest airship in the world and will be capable of making three Atlantic crossings without stopping.

Ordered Not to Build.

"According to the treaty of Versailles we were not to be permitted to resume civilian operations for six months, but when the time limit elapsed we were ordered not to recommence. Various reasons for this order were given, but we have suspicions that it was the hope of certain of the allies to prevent Germany building until they had established commercial air lines and made competition impossible.

"Today all the Zeppelins, except Japan's, have been delivered. Zeppelin 113, which was intended for America, was given to Italy. Two have been given to France, two to England, and two to Italy.

"The one intended for Japan will not be shipped intact because Japanese officers who were here studying the construction ordered us to ship only the small parts, which we are doing.

Two Civilian Ships Left.

"We have two civilian ships left, one named the North Star and the other the Bodensee, which the entente have prevented us from flying. Today we received word from Gen. Masterman, the Briton heading the reparations commission, saying we could fly these ships.

"We replied asking two guarantees, that the ships would not be confiscated, and that the sheds and wharfs would be left intact. When these guarantees are given we shall open a line between Stockholm, Berlin, and a point in Switzerland.

"I hope that when America declares peace and has members on the reparations commission it will confirm the order because unless we have sheds and wharfs we cannot operate.

"When Americans are on the reparations commission we are sure that United States interests will take up the plan for the formation of an international syndicate establishing a line between Europe and America.

VIKING SHIP FINDS VALHALLA

THE VIKING SHIP.

A Relic of 1000 A. D.

MORE than 900 years ago, about the year 1000 A. D., Leif Erickson and his crew of thirty-five Norsemen sailed from Greenland in a staunch old galley and landed in "Vinland"—America. The galley is at the National university at Christiania, Norway.

But in a replica of it Capt. Magnus and a crew of thirty-five repeated the feat in 1893, anchoring at the gates of the World's Columbian Exposition, Jackson park. The replica, known as the Viking ship, has since reposed in a shed beside the old Field museum.

Yesterday it was presented to the state of Illinois by the Chicago Norske Klub. It had been repainted and repaired at a cost of $10,000 and had been sailed to an anchorage off Lincoln park, where the ceremonies were conducted.

President Alfred O. Erickson of the Norwegian National league delivered the dedicatory speech. Miss Ingrid Holmboe presented the deeds to representatives of the state. H. H. Bryn, Norwegian minister to the United States, spoke for his government.

YANKEE JOCKEYS NAMED IN FRENCH RACING SCANDAL

Bookies' Trust Cleans Up 1,000,000,000 Francs.

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1920: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, Nov. 6.—A gigantic race track scandal, which smacks of pulled horses and crooked races on French tracks, is developing rapidly, following the recent decision of the racing stewards to get at the bottom of a chain of circumstances on the French turf which are said to have involved the huge sum of 1,000,000,000 francs in illicit gains.

Following the Jockey club's recent action in setting down Jockey Matthew Magee of Cincinnati for three days, they have now taken away the license of Marcel Allemand, a noted French race rider, and today they announced that Frankie O'Neill of St. Louis cannot ride again this year.

Pulls 100 to 1 Shot.

Magee was set down because he pulled up in front of the grand stand when he was winning easily on a 100 to 1 shot. The American jockey explained that he had mistaken the finishing post. O'Neill was suspended because he was left at the post on an odds-on favorite in a race which was won handily by Magee on a 13 to 1 rank outsider.

For several months Paris has been rife with reports that a bookmakers' trust was fixing races and reaping a golden harvest on French race tracks. Two Americans who formerly made book in the United States are reported to be members of the alleged ring, who are said to have had agents at every hotel and American bar and restaurant accepting the bets of rich clients, chiefly American tourists. Numerous women are said to have been among their victims.

No Chance to Lose.

This is the alleged method of the "trust." Meeting at the track before the day's racing, the bookmakers would compare notes, determine upon the favorite, and then, if they were sure of their ground, made arrangements with owner, trainer, and jockey riding this favorite for the horse to be pulled or otherwise caused to lose.

If these arrangements were made, the bookmakers would "hold out" all money bet with them on the favorites, but if the race was run on its merits, the money received as wagers was placed with the pari-mutuel machines, thus suffering no losses.

Nearly Wins, Anyway.

The first inkling of something wrong came last spring when Apprentice Brethes was set down after pulling a hot favorite, which was winning easily. The little jockey afterward told the stewards that the bookmakers gave him 30,000 francs to lose the race, but he was hardly able to hold in the horse, which got away from the post in front and took an early lead, nearly winning in spite of the lad's desperate and apparent efforts to pull his mount.

The case of Jockey Allemand confirmed the stewards' suspicions. This star French rider failed to secure a place in the money, riding Landman, a hot favorite, beaten off by La Ordre, with O'Neill up.

Opens War on Bookies.

Baron Maurice de Rothschild, a French deputy, has started a campaign in the chamber to open pari mutual booths in various parts of Paris, to permit the people who are unable to attend the races to place wagers, thus killing the bookmaking "game" in this city. His plan is receiving strong support in the chamber of deputies following the disclosures of crooked tactics.

Since the death of William K. Vanderbilt Frankie O'Neill has been riding for A. K. Macomber of Los Angeles, a brother-in-law of Harry Payne Whitney. He has been the leading jockey on the French turf for several years, with Matt Magee or Barton Edward, De Rothschild's premier boy, usually ranking second.

Expect Further Action.

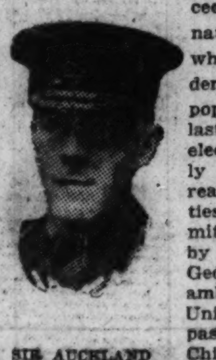
The rumors now current here include the names of Guy Gardner of Centerville, Ia., and Albert Sharp, an English jockey, but neither has been set down so far.

Race track followers have publicly declared that races which seem to them to have been palpably crooked so far this year must have netted the bookmakers upward of 1,000,000,000 francs.

The divorced wife of Milton Henry, a well known American jockey, has just bought for 300,000 francs the American bar established in Paris before the war by Tod Sloan. She will conduct the place as a "turf headquarters."

BRITISH ENVOY SEES HOPE FOR A 'HARDING LEAGUE'

An association of nations, as proposed by President Elect Warren G. Harding to succeed the league of nations, so overwhelmingly condemned by the popular vote at last Tuesday's elections, is clearly within the realm of possibilities. This was admitted yesterday by Sir Auckland Geddes, British ambassador to the United States, who passed through Chicago en route to Cincinnati from St. Paul, Minn.



SIR AUCKLAND GEDDES.

Sir Auckland, who stands more than 6 feet tall, a deep chested man of imposing appearance and gripping personality, refused to comment upon the Irish question or the presidential election.

"Is an association of nations possible?" he was asked.

"Undoubtedly quite possible," he replied. "But I may say the league of nations is functioning quite healthily at present. The league of nations is not dead. On the contrary, it is still very much alive."

TARDIEU TELLS OF ARMISTICE NEGOTIATIONS

Declares U. S. Wanted Harsher Terms.

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1920: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, Nov. 6.—Andre Tardieu today in l'Excelsior in an editorial describing the armistice negotiations, reveals that it was not President Wilson, Col. House, Gen. Bliss, or Gen. Pershing who insisted that hostilities should end as soon as Germany accepted the fourteen points, but that Sir Douglas Haig, Mr. Lloyd George, and Generalissimo Foch himself argued against the armistice terms being made so harsh that the Germans might reject them.

Gen. Bliss, the article states, proposed that the armistice contain these two clauses—total disarmament and complete demobilization.

Gen. Foch objected bitterly when Admiral Jellicoe insisted upon the surrender of the German fleet, asserting that this was only a sop to the public, and Mr. Lloyd George warned the naval members not to push Germany too far.

Wilson Asks Allies' Desires.

"On Oct. 23, 1918, President Wilson asked the allies first, if they should suspend or continue hostilities; second, if an armistice seemed desirable what conditions would be necessary to prevent Germany from renewing the war and to allow the allies to impose the peace terms," the article continues.

"Gen. Foch summoned Gen. Petain, Sir Douglas Haig, and Gen. Pershing to Senlis on Oct. 25 and asked them what they thought of an armistice. No one proposed refusal of the German proposal, but divergence was found over the clauses. Gen. Haig spoke first.

"'It is necessary to conclude an armistice under the most moderate conditions,' he said. 'The victorious allied armies are exhausted. Our various units must be reformed and newly constituted. Germany is not a broken military power. During the last few weeks their armies have retired in the best of order, fighting bravely.

Haig Counsels Caution.

"'If we really want an armistice, and we do, we must propose clauses Germany will accept—the evacuation of invaded France and Belgium; restoration of Alsace-Lorraine, and restitution of destroyed rolling stock. If we demand more, we risk prolonging the war which already has been so costly and chance exasperating the German public opinion for a doubtful result. Evacuation of the invaded regions and restoration of Alsace-Lorraine will consecrate our victory sufficiently.'

"Gen. Pershing declared that he desired to listen to Gen. Petain before expressing his opinion.

"Thereupon Gen. Petain said:

"'If we conclude an armistice there must be complete assurance that the enemy is prevented from recommencing the war. The German army must return to Germany without a single cannon or tank, with only their sidearms. I suggest as a practical method to achieve this assurance the fixing of a short evacuation term to prevent the enemy from carting off his war material and a provision that the allies shall occupy the left bank of the Rhine and a zone fifty kilometers deep on the right bank. At the same time we must demand 50,000 locomotives and 100,000 freight cars.

Gen. Pershing Agrees.

"'These conditions are indispensable, but I doubt that Germany will accept them,'

"Gen. Pershing declared himself in accord with Gen. Petain.

"On the next day Gen. Foch wrote M. Clemenceau the definitive conclusions.

"Between Oct. 23 and 26 the chiefs of the allies arrived in Paris, Col. House reinforcing Gen. Bliss, who was the American member of the supreme war council.

"The Versailles conference did not find the conditions to be harsh enough. The British demanded that the entire German high seas fleet and all submarines be surrendered.

"Col. House asked Gen. Foch: 'From the military point of view alone and regardless of all other considerations, would you prefer that Germany accept or reject this armistice?'

War's Aims Accomplished.

"Gen. Foch replied: 'We make war for desired results. If Germany signs an armistice wherein the general conditions are what we have determined upon we will have obtained these results. Our aims being achieved, we have no right to shed a single other drop of blood.'

"Gen. Foch opposed Gen. Bliss and Mr. Lloyd George, who at first wished to add more demands to the original armistice.

"'To propose or even to impose demands on paper is the easiest thing in the world,' he said, 'but we now face the realities. It is a simple and logical demand for disarmament of the German army in the field, but how can we verify it?'

"'I would like demobilization very much, but do you want to occupy all Germany? If we don't occupy all German territory we can never be sure that demobilization really has been effective.

"'Why make the armistice harsher when its sole object is to put Germany hors de combat? What will you do if Germany, after accepting the severe and sufficient conditions I propose, refuses these new humiliations that you suggest? Will you risk a resumption of hostilities and the useless sacrifice of several thousand lives?'

"Col. House, Mr. Lloyd George, and M. Clemenceau were disposed to insist upon the maximum if the military authorities believed the maximum necessary, and demanded Gen. Foch's opinion.

"Gen. Foch replied:

"'No one can say positively. The war would endure three months, perhaps four or five. I can only say that the armistice conditions we have already drafted are those we should and could impose after the next offensive operations, if they are successful. If Germany accepts now, it is useless to continue the battle.'

Lloyd George for Peace.

"Despite Gen. Foch's protest, the naval members insisted that the German surface fleet be surrendered, but Mr. Lloyd George interposed and demanded that the naval experts take no chances of continuation of the war uselessly, insisting upon holding up a decsion until it became known if Austria had capitulated. Mr. Lloyd George said:

"'We must ask ourselves if we want peace immediately or wish to continue the struggle for another year. It is tempting to contemplate taking a number of warships, but that is not the question. Each one of our armies is losing more men weekly than it ever lost in any week throughout the four years of war.'

The evident American prodigality in lives shown by advancing against machine guns, despite fearful casualities, spurred on the French and British to drive home the advance regardless of cost, in the same way. Gen. Foch's reference to the fact that he would offer the same armistice conditions if the next offensive proved successful, referred to the Luneville attack with ten American divisions which was scheduled to be launched Nov. 15."

FOE OF H. C. OF L. TO QUIT, SAYING FIGHT IS WON

Washington, D. C., Nov. 6.—Commodity prices have indicated such a downward trend that the department of justice is "largely content to let the downward trend carry on by its won momentum," according to a statement tonight by Howard Figg, special assistant attorney general in charge of the war on H. C. of L. He has resigned, effective Nov. 15.

"The department feels that its sane policy of steady pressure is vindicated by the results achieved," Mr. Figg said, "and announces that its action will continue along that line to get business to readjust itself in accordance with popular necessity, but avoiding endangering the underlying sound prosperity of the nation."

Chinese Plan Big Harbor to Compete with Japanese

SHANGHAI, Nov. 6.—Dutch and Belgian engineers will arrive in China next week to begin surveys for the construction of a modern ocean harbor at Haachow on the northern coast of Kiangsu province. The Chinese hope through the development of Haachow harbor to undermine the importance of Tsingtao, now under Japanese control.

MR. KILCOURSE FINDS HOME BREW IS TRICKY STUFF

Lawrence Kilcourse, assistant dry chief and custodian of "home brew" mixtures seized by federal agents, handles his charges with the careless abandon of an old beekeeper. His desk is littered with bottles of every description. He uses them for paper weights. His stenographer's desks are covered with fancy colored brews. The floor is carpeted with mason jars, medicine bottles, even ink containers that have known better days.

"It's all bosh," he said to his stenographer yesterday as he picked up a newspaper cartoon depicting a beginner's experience with explosive home brew.

"Ever hear of an old beekeeper getting stung? No? Well," and the dry agent leaned back in his chair as a reminiscent look sparkled in his eyes, "I've handled 10,000 samples and never had an explosion. I've——"

Bang! Bang! Bang!

A triple explosion covered the ceiling, the table, and occupants of the room with yeast and raisins.

Mr. Kilcourse finished his lecture under the shower bath.

RUSSIANS REPORT TAKING YANKEES FROM WRANGEL

U. S. Knows Nothing of Such a Group.

LONDON, Nov. 6.—An American mission in south Russia has fallen into the hands of the soviet forces, according to the Moscow newspaper Pravda, as quoted in a wireless dispatch today from the soviet capital. The mission, says the newspaper, was headed by "Gen. Morel."

The paragraph dealing with this "mission" said:

"At Alexievka station, which was taken without a shot, an American mission fell into our hands, at the head of which was Gen. Morel, who had the task of combating bandits in the White army."

Not American General.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 6.—State and war department officials said today they had no knowledge of an official American mission being within the war zone in southern Russia, nor of the capture of any by the soviet forces.

It was said unofficially that the "Gen. Morel" might be either a French officer commanding a detachment in the Wrangel army or M. de Martel, chief of the French diplomatic mission accredited to Wrangel.

The French embassy expressed doubt that their diplomatic mission had been captured.

The only official American mission in Russia is that at Sebastopol. Various American relief commissions are operating on the frontier.

Not Relief Worker.

New York, Nov. 6.—Near East Relief officials here stated today they had no record of an American relief mission in south Russia headed by a "Gen. Morel."

RETREAT FOLLOWS PLAN

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 6.—Gen. Baron Wrangel announced today that the retreat of the White armies behind the fortifications of the Perekop isthmus was continuing under pressure, but without losses. Gen. Wrangel admitted that war material trains were abandoned by him in the Nikopol region. Gen. Wrangel claims that the Whites are inflicting heavy losses upon the enemy, which still is attacking on three sides in overwhelming numbers. The retreat, he adds, is proceeding exactly as planned.

Warship Orders Awaited.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Nov. 4.—[By Associated Press.] — Delayed.—French and British representatives here have asked their governments if their warships in Black sea water should support Gen. Wrangel at Perekop and Salkovo, where the soviet forces are pressing upon the Crimean peninsula. Meanwhile, fresh supplies of rifles and cartridges are being hurried to Sebastopol.

Killing of Jews Reported.

SEBASTOPOL, Nov. 4.—[By the Associated Press.] — Delayed. — Gen. Wrangel's troops, after their victories on Nov. 1 and Nov. 2, and before their withdrawal, are said to have sorted from the prisoners and shot hundreds of Jewish bolshevik commissaries, as well as Hungarians, Roumanians, Chinese and Germans.

Gen. Wrangel's counterattack on 10,000 of Gen. Budenny's cavalry, the soviet vanguard, at Salkovo, a few days ago, resulted in their surrender, but five columns of soviet troops, advancing on a 200 mile front, forced Wrangel's retreat into the Crimean peninsula. Snowstorms are delaying operations.

Since the passing of the first panic, during which excited people and speculators paid enormous prices for places on Black sea ships, the city has become quiet.

BRITISH IN CHINA SAY THEY FAVOR NEW CONSORTIUM

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

SHANGHAI, Nov. 6.—British chambers of commerce representing all the British interests in China, in session this week in Shanghai, adopted a resolution today favoring the new banking consortium organized by America and other powers for the purpose of financing China.

The delegates also adopted resolutions censuring China for her unsettled political conditions that greatly handicap her foreign and domestic trade.

The meeting recommends that China immediately reform her currency and her scheme of internal taxation and trade mark laws and also recommends that the British government construct high power wireless stations in China capable of communication with England and other parts of the British empire.

SHOT TO DEATH IN SALOON; TWO VERSIONS TOLD

Slayer Says Holdup, but Police Hold Him.

Cornelius Van Laten, 24 years old, a millwright employed by the board of education, was shot and fatally injured last night in a saloon at 1158 West Sixty-third street under circumstances which prompted Capt. John Ryan of the Englewood station to take the proprietors of the place and a customer into custody for further examination.

Walter Jordan, who with his brother Edward owns the saloon, admitted he killed Van Laten. He claimed he engaged in a gun battle with the victim when the later attempted to hold up the saloon. His statements were corroborated by Oscar Westrom, 6428 South May street, a customer, who happened to be in the saloon at the time.

Westrom Gives the Alarm.

According to Jordan and Westrom, Van Laten entered the place with another man known as McCabe.

"I heard them talking together at the bar about sticking up the place," said Westrom. "I slipped up and told Jordan I thought there was going to be trouble. I saw McCabe place a chair near the bar so the two could jump over it.

"There were four other men drinking at the bar, but they ran out as soon as the trouble started. Van Laten leaped over the bar and McCabe followed. Jordan was ready for them and smashed Van Laten in the jaw, knocking him down. McCabe grabbed a revolver from Van Laten's pocket, forced Jordan back, and then grabbed about $10 from the register, spilling dimes all over the floor. Then he backed out of the saloon, keeping Jordan covered.

"Van Laten got up and came at Jordan again, but Jordan got his own gun and shot him."

Van Laten was shot twice below the heart and died within twenty minutes after reaching the Englewood hospital without regaining consciousness.

Sister Tells Another Story.

Miss Anna Van Laten, 6526 South May street, sister of the victim, told an entirely different version of the affair. She said she was returning home on a street car which passed the saloon just after the shooting occurred.

"I saw a small crowd outside and got off to see what the trouble was," she said. "I looked through the glass door and saw Jordan and Westrom carrying a man from the front part of the saloon to a spot back of the bar, where they laid him down. A man told me my brother had been shot.

"Conney never carried a gun in his life and he knew the Jordans. We've lived here in the neighborhood for years and my brother certainly wouldn't be so foolish as to try to rob Jordan's place."

SMALL TO RULE IN HIS OWN WAY, FRIENDS PREDICT

Warnings Out He Won't Tail City Hall Kite.

BY E. O. PHILLIPS.

Governor-elect Len Small will play an independent hand both as to policies and patronage whep he assumes office at Springfield next January. This is the confident prediction of conservatively minded Republicans who have talked with Mr. Small since the election.

Such prediction goes so far as to say that Mr. Small already has given warning signals to the city hall organization in Chicago quite indicative that the governor's office is not to become a mere annex to the city hall. It is problematic even, according to excellent sources of information, whether Mr. Small will consent to any combination with the hall that contemplates a state-administration organization of the house and senate.

Small's Statement Recalled.

Mr. Small, in a formal statement issued on the night of his election, and in a speech to 5,000 of his neighbors at the Kankakee celebration Thursday night, made it plain that his chief ambition is to furnish an administration that will be a credit to the state and one of which his fmaily and friends may be proud.

His inaugural message undoubtedly will follow the main planks of his platform in making recommendations to the legislature. Whether he, with the power of the governorship and the immense patronage about to be at his disposal, proposes to "strong arm" the general assembly into developing that platform into legislation is quite another question.

Warnings from the Past.

Experienced politicians realize that Mr. Small, as an old timer in the state political game, knows what happened to the Tanner administration and to the Yates administration when those governors attempted to dictate the performance of the general assembly.

The Allen bill is about all that is recalled of the Tanner period, and the John Henry Miller speakership and the revolt of the Sherman 39 remains as the outstanding feature of the Yates regime. Mr. Small, it is known, has different ideas of running affairs at Springfield.

Some definite indication of this is expected when the Republican chieftains get together this week at West Baden. The city hall will be there in force, headed by Mayor Thompson. Mr. Small is expected to be present. Col. Frank L. Smith, the state chairman, who now looms as the arbiter between the city and the downstate in the battle for the jobs that is already on, will be there.

Federal Jobs and Issue.

The federal appointments in city and downstate present another angle caused by the sweeping Republican victory of last Tuesday. The popular impression has been that there is a working agreement already in existence between Senator McCormick, Senator-elect McKinley and Attorney General Brundage, in which the retiring senator, Lawrence Y. Sherman, who is now Republican national committeeman, is a silent partner.

A later theory is that Mr. McKinley, as a practical result of the primaries, is not disposed to combat the Thompson organization in Chicago when it comes to the assignment of the long line of federal appointments that have been held by Democrats for the last eight years. Wily Republicans figure that President-elect Harding may have a serious problem on hand when the time arrives to pick the Illinois appointees and satisfy the two Republican senators.

The official canvass of the votes in Chicago starts tomorrow morning.

ARTISTRY IN GOWNS

Mme. Maria Monaci Gallenga, who will lecture on how women of Chicago should dress, at the Art institute.

HAVING met with considerable success in teaching farmers' wives how to dress artistically last summer, the directors of the Art institute have now turned their attention to milady of the boulevards.

On Nov. 9 more than a score of modern Roman costumes will be placed on exhibition in Gunsaulus hall, Art institute. On Nov. 11 the gowns and wraps will be exhibited on live models chosen from the ranks of the girl students of the art school. The models will be shown on the stage of Fullerton hall, while Miss Mary Nixon and Mme. Maria Monaci Gallenga, their originator, will lecture.

Mme. Gallenga was a painter in Rome until about twelve years ago, when she turned her attention to fabrics. She has achieved fame by applying gold and silver to velvet, satin and crêpe de chine and delicate chiffons without changing the beauty or texture of the material.

CHOICE OF ROOT FOR THE CABINET NOT LOOKED FOR Harding Will Name His Own Aids.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 6.—[Special.]—Elihu Root is not to be a member of the cabinet of President Harding, in the judgment of men who are accurately informed as to the progress of cabinet construction.

The new secretary of state is to be a Republican who is not committed in any way to a league of nations. On the contrary, the president elect seeks a man who is aligned with a policy conformable to views expressed by Senators Knox and McCormick, who have not objected to a separate Hague tribunal or to an annual conference of the powers.

Senator Harding's speech at Marion is taken to eliminate the possibility of Mr. Root's entrance into the cabinet.

Will Choose Own Cabinet.

Senator Harding will make up his own cabinet. His purpose, it is understood, is to ask men to serve with him rather than to have counsels thrust upon him by political organizations or elements in any state or states.

The president elect faces two conditions in approaching consideration of his cabinet. One is the necessity of reconciliation of the two elements in the party and the other is the time honored and traditional rule of senatorial courtesy.

This point enters with the possibility that Herbert Hoover may be considered for a cabinet seat, which might be supported by powerful political and national motives, but be objectionable to the Republican organization of California or to the two Republican California senators.

The same thing might arise were Senator Harding to invite Raymond Robins into his cabinet. The suggestion is made that if Mr. Robins is on the list of possibilities he would not be figured as a charge against Illinois from the cold political point of view.

Lowden May Be Chosen.

There are reasons to believe that Senator Harding intends to ask Gov. Lowden of Illinois to become one of his cabinet, probably as secretary of agriculture. The belief is that this post will be offered either to Gov. Lowden or to Dean Curtis of the Iowa Agricultural college.

Illinois probably is to be represented in the cabinet, the possible selections of the president elect now ranking in this order: Gov. Lowden, Raymond Robins, Fred W. Upham, and George M. Reynolds, president of the Continental-Commercial bank. If a cabinet place is to go to a Republican member of the house of representatives from Illinois, Martin B. Madden should be added to the favored list.

G. O. P. TO RIGHT AND LEFT OF DEM. IN THE NEXT HOUSE, SENATE

Washington, D. C., Nov. 6.—[Special.]—With the Republican house majority in the sixty-seventh congress estimated at 155, it is apparent that there will not be enough seats to accommodate the Republican members on one side of the chamber and there will be an overflow of Republicans to the Democratic side.

The same thing is true in the senate; the Republican senators will have to take seats among the Democrats.

In the Sixty-third congress, with a total membership the same as now, 435, the Democrats had a record majority, 163. They swarmed to the Republican side and formed a group which flanked the Republicans on either side. The overflow became known as the "Cherokee strip."

Republican victories in the Fifth Missouri, Eighth Minnesota, and the Twenty-third New York tonight determined definitely the March 4 lineup.

The Republicans will have 293 representatives to 138 Democrats. The other four include one Socialist, one Independent, one Independent Prohibitionist; and one Independent Republican. The figures represent a net gain for the Republicans of sixty-one and a loss to the Democrats of fifty-two.

In the Fifth Missouri, E. C. Ellis, Republican, defeated William T. Bland, Democrat. In the Twenty-third New York Richard F. McKiniry, Democrat, incumbent, lost to Albert R. Rosendale, Republican.

Herrick Denies Story of Intermediary Selection

Cleveland, O., Nov. 6. — When the Washington dispatch regarding Paris reports that he had been chosen as an intermediary in negotiations with President Elect Harding, regarding Mr. Harding's proposal for an association of nations, Myron T. Herrick, former ambassador to France, said:

"I know absolutely nothing whatever of the matter in any way. I have not talked with anybody on the subject. This is the first I have heard on such a report. There is nothing in it."

PAT HARRISON TO BRING DEMS BACK TO LIFE

Setback Only Temporary, He Says.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 6.—Another move toward reorganization of the Democratic party was made here today when Senator Harrison of Mississippi, chairman of the speakers' bureau during the campaign, issued a statement calling on his fellow Democrats to "bury all past differences and forget about the recent campaign."

"The Democratic party is not dead," he said. "It has only received a temporary setback, and will make itself felt every day of every session of congress until the next election rolls around.

"Gov. Cox made a gallant fight. He impressed the country as measuring up in the fullest degree to the important rôle to which he had been assigned. A grateful party will hold him in highest esteem for the splendid fight he has made, and will continue to look upon him as the real leader."

On Party Reorganization.

As to party reorganization, Mr. Harrison said:

"I believe there should be a change in the permanent organization of the Democratic party. I don't mean by that that Chairman George White should not be retained as chairman of the national committee. He showed marked ability in the management of the recent campaign, which was waged against overwhelming odds. No one could have done better than he did under the circumstances.

"He has a keen insight touching future plans and I am sure that when they are put in force every element within the Democratic party will approve of them.

Calls on Democrats.

"I want to see every Democrat in the country, no matter what his views in the past have been or what his course was in the recent campaign, brought into line and a militant organization maintained to fight the reactionary policies the Republicans will assuredly attempt to inaugurate.

"The results of the recent election, while of course discouraging to the Democracy of the nation, should influence Democrats to stand united as never before and work together in a spirit of complete coöperation and accord."

Scholle's Good Furniture

Solid Mahogany Hepplewhite Dining Room Suite: Oblong round end Table, 8 feet extension with aprons on two leaves, 5 Chairs and one Arm Chair, haircloth seats.

7 Pieces, Special price $420.00

IF you are one of those who have been looking for lower prices on all commodities, you've probably grown impatient because the change has been so slow in coming.

In the matter of good furniture, fairly priced on the basis of cost of material and labor, there is no justification that we can see in expecting much change for a long time.

It is part of our service to you to tell you the truth, not only about the goods, but about everything connected with the sale and service of the goods.

When lower prices for good furniture are probable we will know it as soon as the movement begins to show itself in lower cost of materials and lower wages to labor, and we will at once publish our impressions for the benefit of our customers.

At present there is no indication of this happening, and you should not be misled by special sales which are offered merely to move goods or to raise money; these may offer real bargains; they probably do; but they are no indications of change in conditions which will result in a lower general level of prices.

Our special weekly list is an example of this—great bargains—but offered merely to keep our stock moving and to make room for new things.

Rugs

The uncertainty about rug values is as prevalent as in other lines, and your safety lies in dealing with a concern which knows good rugs, which buys nothing else, and which gives you the full benefit of every changing condition. We have a wonderful stock of fine domestic and oriental rugs.

A MOTHER'S LOVE NEVER DIES; AN OLD, OLD STORY

And So Her Little Girl Will Go Back Home.

South Clark street station's routine was interrupted yesterday by Dr. John Mahoney, who, quite to the astonishment of those accustomed to his impeccable poise, was by taxicab and telephone seeking Mary Davis.

"Who's Mary Davis?" asked the desk sergeant, scanning the blotter for the second time.

"Just a little girl, who left the Hotel Lorraine to go to the Policlinic hospital, and never got there. I can't find any trace of her."

"No record here," replied the sergeant.

Found on Hospital Cot.

The doctor leaned through the wicket and addressed him in a low tone. The sergeant called a lieutenant. The lieutenant summoned two detectives. The detectives hurried forth. And a few hours later Mary Davis was found on a cot in St. Luke's hospital.

What the doctor whispered to the desk sergeant, the world perhaps will never know—and probably wouldn't be interested, anyway. For it is a very busy world, and Mary Davis—well, maybe the doctor told him that down in Arkansas, village of Conway, thirty miles northwest of Little Rock, there live Mr. and Mrs. Charles Payne.

Neighbors for miles around know Judge Payne as an upright, Godfearing man, a pillar of the church. For fifty years he has lived there. They remember how as a boy he trudged fifteen miles to school each day, did the farm chores at night, and pored over legal tomes by candle light. Then he was admitted to the bar. And eventually his probity won him advancement to the Circuit court bench.

Meets Dashing Captain.

Maybe the doctor told the desk sergeant of their 16 year old daughter Mary, golden hair and nut brown eyes, their only child. It was during the war that the dashing army captain, New York bred and Broadway wise, who was stationed near Conway, met Mary.

Mary wrote letters to him when he was overseas. When he returned she disappeared. Conway was agog. Save that his chin seemed to jut at a firmer angle and his shoulders to stoop a bit more, the old judge betrayed no hint of feeling. The mother only sat by the window and looked into the distance.

It was at the Hotel Lorraine, 419 South Wabash avenue, that the next chapter was written. Mary Davis registered there for a rear room. If you were never in the Lorraine you have never met the other side of theatrical life. In its dingy precincts live the obscure thespians who work when they can and eat likewise.

Ill and Penniless.

William Thorne was the first one to learn that Mary Davis was very ill and penniless. Mary's eyes brought memories to him. And she told him about her father and mother, and the captain. The captain had disappeared. "Father has disowned me," she said. Someone visited everybody in the hotel. The purse they made up was very slender. Somebody notified Dr. Mahoney, who said to "never mind the purse." It was essential for Mary to be removed to a hospital immediately. She went to St. Luke's instead of the Policlinic, she said, because she didn't want to impose upon her actor friends any longer.

Still Her Little Girl.

"And besides," she said last night, "what does it matter. Father is through with me. Nobody cares."

Nobody cares. Yes, they do, Mary. Last night, your mother was reached by long distance telephone. She said:

"Tell Mary to come home. I'm waiting."

You are still her little girl.

PERJURY CHARGE FOR MILLIONAIRE IN GRAFT CASE

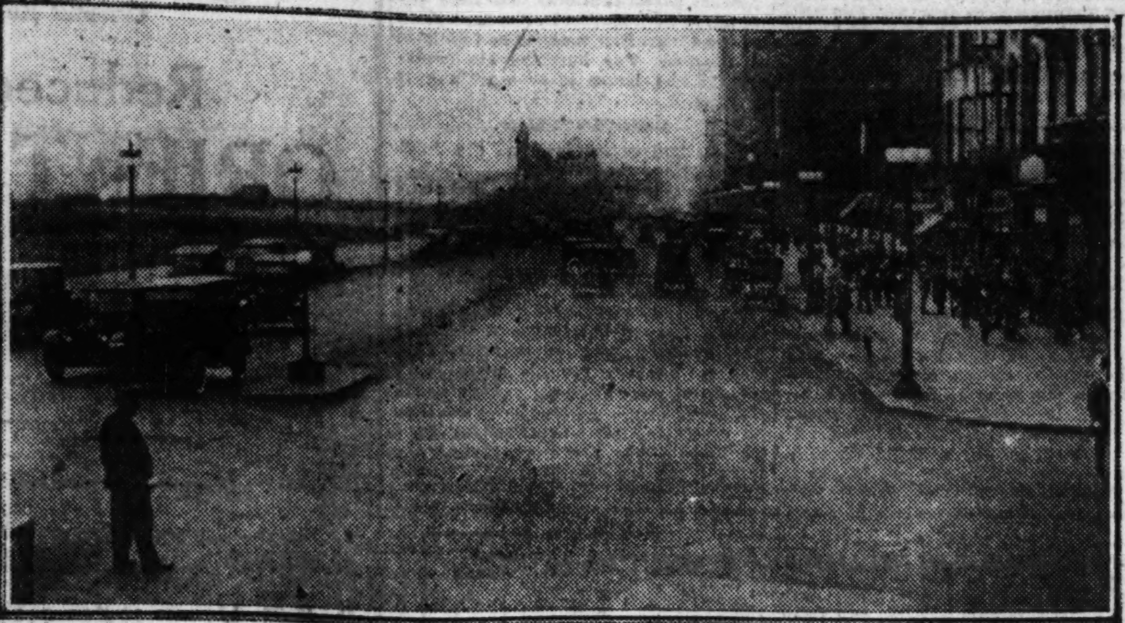
New York, Nov. 6.—Arraignment of George S. Backer, millionaire building contractor, on an indictment charging perjury in testimony before the joint legislative committee investigating the alleged "building trust" here and a threat by Samuel Untermyer, counsel for the committee, to summon Mayor Hylan to explain failure to cancel contracts for new city building, were the chief developments in the inquiry today.

Backer was released under $15.000 bail and directed to appear again Monday in the court of general sessions to plead.

Mr. Untermyer declared he understands work is proceeding upon contracts "that are based on collusive mulcting of the city."

He proposed a "permanent nonpartisan vigilance committee" removed from politics with a staff of accountants and experts "to check the city officials on the vast business that is being transacted for the city."

BREAKING THE TRAFFIC JAM



O, what a difference! Michigan avenue looking south from Jackson boulevard as it appears since the south park board's new traffic rules are enforced. Under these rules cars may be parked on the east side of the avenue not more than thirty minutes, and on the west side only while loading or unloading passengers.

There will be a double wedding Nov. 10 at the home of Coroner Peter M. Hoffman.

"That makes four sons-in-law for me," said the corner last night. "And I'll soon have a fifth. But I am sworn not to reveal his name."

The present sons-in-law are brothers—George F. Kinder and Wallace Kinder. They married, respectively, Edith and Margnerite.

Miss Annett Hoffman is to bring the fifth son-in-law into the family. The coroner says he has been authorized to announce his identity on Nov. 10.

Husband of Fifi Widener Will Work in Car Shops

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 6.—[Special.]—Carter Randolph Leidy has decided to go to work Monday. His wife was Miss Fifi Widener, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Widener. Leidy and his wife have moved to Berwick, Pa. They have rented a small cottage on the outskirts of the town. Leidy has a job with the American Car and Foundry company. Mrs. Leidy plans to do all her own housekeeping.

Newsboy Comes Upon Ignited Bomb; Puts It Out

New York, Nov. 6.—[Special.]—Jacob Boschia, newsboy, is the hero today of Clifton, N. J. While delivering newspapers early in the morning he stumbled against a bomb with a fuse burning in a hallway at 231 Dayton avenue. He grabbed the package, rushed to the street with it, stamped on the fuse, and then awakened the intended victims of the bomb.

Saving City Time

NEW Michigan avenue and Jackson boulevard parking rules, adopted by the South park board on Oct. 5, are being successfully enforced. The new order discommoded a few motorists—those accustomed to parking their cars on the boulevards while they spend hours in the loop—but saves minutes for thousands of others who used the streets as thoroughfares.

The anti-parking rule in Jackson boulevard resulted in a clear passage wide enough for two streams of traffic to flow in each direction at most points.

In Michigan avenue, between Randolph and Twelfth streets, motorists are permitted to park their cars for not more than thirty minutes on the east side of the street. Cars are permitted to stand on the west side only while loading or unloading passengers.

Now Here's a Minority That Will Vote as "One Man"

Trenton, N. J., Nov. 6.—[Special.]—Harry Runyon, lone Democrat elected to the assembly, will have to serve on forty-nine committees. He will hold the party caucus and will be minority leader in the house.

"The minority caucus will be the most harmonious and quiet affair you ever heard of," said he. "It probably will be held on the train between Belvidere and Trenton. There will be no debate. There is no doubt I shall be the minority floor leader."

PLANS TO REDUCE DAYLIGHT SAVING TO FIVE MONTHS

Efforts to shorten the operation of daylight saving next year to five months will be made at Wednesday's city council meeting, Ald. Timothy A. Hogan, who introduced the original daylight saving ordinance in the city council, announced yesterday.

The ordinance approved by the voters provides for setting the clock ahead from the last Sunday in March to the last Sunday in October. Ald. Hogan would shorten this period by two months, making the ordinance apply only from the last Sunday in April until the last Sunday in September.

It is said that the change proposed by Ald. Hogan would have the support of labor unions, many of which were opposed to the daylight saving scheme.

Kills 1,600 Spanish Bulls; N. Y. Variety Puts Him Out

New York, Nov. 6.—[Special.]—After killing more than 1,600 of the most ferocious bulls that ever entered an arena, Señor Juan Garcia Belmonte, greatest of all Spanish bull fighters, has been knocked out by the rich food of New York restaurants and is confined to his bed.

The gallant matador was just a sick Spaniard when seen today in his room in the hotel. He explained his trouble by saying the change of food and the excitement of New York were too much for him.

The $1,000,000 bull fighter regretted New York had done what no bull could do, but said with a rest he believed he would be all right.

GIRL, DEAF TO PLEAS, SAILS TO WED SHUMAN

Plans Marriage in Paris to Former Chicagoan.

Despite the pleadings of her brother and other members of her family, Miss Mabel Salmon of Omoha sailed for Le Havre from New York yesterday to be married to Maj. William Irving Shuman in Paris.

Maj. Shuman, who formerly was subtreasurer in Chicago, met Miss Salmon while he was a member of the A. E. F. and she a Y. M. C. A. worker at the Hotel Petrograd in Paris. He received his discharge abroad and failed to return home. Instead he obtained an appointment as fiscal agent for the Polish republic and, according to Miss Salmon, now owns a large hotel in Antwerp.

Asked Wife for Divorce.

He wrote a letter to his wife, Mrs. Pearl Shuman of 4521 North Whipple street, stating he never would return to her and his children and offering a settlement of $1,000 and monthly provision for the children if she would consent to a divorce being recorded in France.

"I cannot return to America and to you for several reasons," he wrote, "the principal one being that I am not as clean as I was when I entered the army. I would rather the girls remember me—or forget me—as I was when they last saw me than to have them later realize my condition."

Miss Salmon, who had returned to Omaha, and her relatives, stated they did not know at the time of the engagement that Mrs. Shuman had not yet obtained a divorce. The girl's brother, John Salmon, hurried to New York the latter part of October in an effort to persuade her not to sail.

Girl Plans Paris Wedding.

"I shall endeavor to do all in my power to persuade her not to go to France, but to have Maj. Shuman come to America to explain his conduct," he said. But the brother evidently failed in his mission, for Miss Salmon indicated to a representative of THE TRIBUNE before sailing, that she intends to be married to the former army officer as soon as she reaches Paris.

Mrs. Shuman filed suit for a divorce some time ago, charging desertion. Judge Lewis indicated on Oct. 23 that he would grant a decree providing for $1,000 lump sum alimony and $200 a month for the children.

"I wish them luck," Mrs. Shuman said at the time. "I intend to do nothing to frustrate any of his plans."

Italian Ship Captain Pleads Not Guilty to Smuggling

New York, Nov. 6.—Capt. Adolph Candis of the Italian steamer Cuzco, who was taken from his ship at Clifton, Staten Island, yesterday, charged with smuggling, today pleaded not guilty. Customs agents declared they had found seventy-three bottles of cocaine, valued at $7,500, in the captain's quarters. He was held in $5,000 bail.

Cut Cotton Mill Pay 10 Per Cent at Union, S. C.

Union, S. C., Nov. 6.—A wage reduction of 10 per cent will become effective Monday in all cotton mills in this county, affecting appoximately 3,000 employés. The mills will be closed two days a week also. The cotton market situation was given as the reason for the curtailment.

Rate Raises in Canada Curb Lumber Exports

Washington, D. C., Nov. 6.—Recent increases of from 35 to 40 per cent in Canadian railway freight rates has practically stopped lumber shipments from British Columbia to the United States, according to a report to the department of commerce today from Consul E. A. Wakefield at Prince Rupert.

BRANDS BRYAN AS A "SLACKER" IN PARTY FIGHT

Says He Profiteered on Democracy.

Memphis, Tenn., Nov. 6.—[Special.]—The Commercial Appeal, edited by C. P. J. Mooney, publishes this editorial in reply to William J. Bryan's suggestion "that President Wilson should resign immediately:"

"Mr. Bryan has lost his right to take any part in any conference as to the Democratic procedure. He is not fit to make a suggestion to President Wilson. Mr. Bryan was not an Achilles sulking in his tent during the campaign. When things got terribly hard for the Greeks, Achilles did come out, put on his armor and slay the god like Hector. Neither is Mr. Bryan the wise Nestor. He stands today a Thersites, and he was properly belabored, as was that individual by Agamenmon, when the Democrats who have been loyal and faithful, applied to him in this campaign the term 'slacker.'

"Mr. Bryan went to San Francisco and made a fight against Cox. That was his privilege. Mr. Cox won. Mr. Bryan said then his 'heart was in the grave.' As far as the Democratic party is concerned it might as well stay there.

"Mr. Bryan knows, as every other man knows, that the eighteenth amendment is a fixture. He knows that Mr. Cox was just as sincere on the liquor question as Mr. Harding. He never raised his voice during the campaign to help Mr. Cox. He never raised his voice to help Champ Clark and a hundred other good Democrats who went down in the wreck. He stood still and let the forces of reaction come into control, and now he is catfishing around making suggestions.

"Mr. Bryan has made his living out of the Democratic party. It has been his meal ticket for thirty years. He orated himself into the nomination for the presidency in 1896. As soon as he was beaten he wrote a book and took to the lecture platform. He has coined his reputation as a Democratic leader into a box office asset."

SIX INDICTED IN BALL POOL QUIZ; POLICE BLAMED

Grand Jury Finds Sport Is Still Clean.

The special grand jury investigating baseball scandals returned its report to Chief Justice Charles A. McDonald yesterday, with indictments against Peter Hanson and Ralph Hanson, owners of the Chicago Heights baseball pool; Charles Hass, owner of the Blue Island pool; Martin J. Carlin, Universal pool; William Chelius, Great Western pool, and Frederick C. Walters, American-National pool.

These men are charged with unlawfully selling lottery tickets and their bonds were fixed at $1,500 each.

The grand jurors called the judge's attention to the change in administration and recommended that although a new state's attorney would come into office, Hartley L. Replogle be retained as a special prosecutor. Assistant State's Attorney Replogle conducted the inquiry.

"We have given to the chief of police of Chicago and several outlying towns evidence that has come to us," the jury's report says in part, "and while we have been assured of prosecution of the offenders, our comment in this connection is that the police department could immediately stop this pool selling, or at least greatly lessen the sales, if arrests and prosecutions were vigorously made.

Eight Players Indicted.

"Strong enough evidence has been submitted to prompt our indicting eight players on the various teams and five other men who, according to the testimony, conspired to have games of baseball 'thrown.' While we deplore the facts, we are certain general demoralization does not exist in organized baseball, and the American public may have confidence in the honesty and integrity of a great majority of professional baseball players.

"We also feel certain the leaders of organized baseball may henceforth be relied upon to eliminate any players whom they strongly suspect. With few exceptions, this has previously been done, and we believe this inquiry will have a clarifying effect.

Investigation Warranted.

"It is the unanimous opinion of the jury that Judge McDonald was amply warranted in ordering this investigation and will have rendered the American public a great service if the inquiry has the effect of preventing baseball players of the future from being contaminated and corrupted by unscrupulous swindlers and gamblers.

"We are grateful for and commend the spirit shown by the officials of organized baseball during the course of the investigation. They have aided us greatly, and nearly all of them have shown a relentless opposition to everything savoring of crookedness or dishonesty in baseball.

"Their coöperation has permitted us to carry on this investigation practically without expense to the county, which is especially gratifying in view of some criticism inspired by a too provincial attitude, considering the important place that the game occupies in our national life.

"Considering the magnitude of the enterprise and the great number of ball players engaged, we believe a comparatively small number of the players have been dishonest—we were gratified to find players who immediately reported to their managers the suggestions of 'fixing' and likewise managers who immediately discontinued players who were implicated in any way in attempts to corrupt the game. The adoption of this practice as a fixed policy, no matter at what cost, will make impossible a repetition of the present trouble."

Judge Compliments Jury.

Judge McDonald complimented the jury on its work in unearthing and exposing conditions "of bribery and crookedness in organized baseball that shocked the conscience of the clean, sport loving American public."

"However," he said, "this was the only effective way by which the baneful influence of a coterie of crooks and plug-uglies could be thwarted and the national game purified and restored to the confidence of the public.

"By your earnest efforts to bring about this hoped for result you have rendered an invaluable service to your city and country, a far-reaching moral

HARDING PICKS PRESENT AID AS SECRETARY

GEORGE B. CHRISTIAN JR.

George B. Christian Jr., for six years secretary to Senator Harding, will be the president's secretary after March 4, 1921, according to Marion dispatches.

Before going to Washington as secretary to Senator Harding Mr. Christian was associated with his father in the limestone business here and at Columbus, and the Harding and Christian families have been intimate friends and neighbors for many years.

Before his connection with Senator Harding he was a Democrat, as was his father.

HOOCH BURGLARS RANSACK HOMES OF NORTH SHORE

Fail to Find Stock in Most Cases.

Lake Forest and Highland Park burglar bands which last season broke open and looted summer homes of wines and liquors apparently without restraint again are at it.

No fewer than eleven attempted housebreakings have been reported in the last week.

It was about this time last year, when north shore residents were returning to town house or to southern resort, that the alcoholic huntsmen began their work. Their method was to sneak up on the prey as it lay in cellar or in vault.

It would be passed out through jimmied doors or windows to the waiting truck—later to grace less patrician but equally appreciated feasts.

Vigilantes Stop Thefts.

Finally a vigilance committee of the outraged citizenry had to be formed to aid the sheriff in enforcing respect for the "No trespassing" sign. Almost $100,000 worth of liquor had been bagged.

In January five men were caught and later, with others, indicted. Two turned state's evidence. The wheels of justice spun busily. James G. Welch, state's attorney of Lake county, was diligent in his effort to convict Edward Atteridge. Then the jury retired, and——

"We can't agree," reported the foreman after many hours. Somehow the talesmen, sitting with parched throats in a stuffy juryroom, couldn't construe hooch trapping as a crime.

Succeeding trials resulted the same way until finally Prosecutor Welch nolled the cases against the other men.

They were released about a fortnight ago. But Mr. Welch does not believe they are stalking the 100 proof this time.

Some of the Invaded Homes.

At any rate, the huntsmen have not always tried homes where the object of their search was kept. No liquor was found, it is reported, in the demesnes of Sidney Holland or Mrs. John A. Roach in Highland Park nor in the Lake Forest residences of Henry N. Tuttle, Dr. A. D. Bevan, Harold F. McCormick, or Cyrus H. McCormick But they looked for it just the same and removed sundry articles of raiment as souvenirs.

"They were searching for something we didn't have," explained Mrs. Tuttle.

Police assert that only near beer was on tap in Gen. Martin D. Hardin's place on the Green Bay road. The family is in Florida. The burglars ate breakfast in the house after searching it thoroughly.

Better Luck Here.

They had better luck on the John Glass estate.

"Didn't touch the wines and cordials at all," said Chief Maroney of the Highland Park constabulary. "They just took out about $1,000 worth of whisky in cases and let the barrels alone."

Early yesterday the alcoholic brotherhood entered the house of Capt. J. M. Patterson near Libertyville. This was a mistake, for his place was plundered last season. Hooch hunters may save themselves duplication by consulting THE TRIBUNE for Dec. 27, 1920, which contains a list of estates already ransacked.

BOY FLOGGED TO GET CONFESSION, HE TELLS COURT

Charges Lieut. B. J. Burns Wielded Knout.

Lieut. Bernard J. Burns, for more than twenty years a police officer, was accused in court yesterday of having beaten the bared back of a 13 year old boy with a leather cat-o'-nine-tails to obtain a confession. He admitted "inflicting suitable punishment," and was directed by Judge Leo J. Doyle to report to Chief Garrity. If the charge is sustained he faces suspension from the force, the second in his career, and the possibility of a prison term.

LIEUT. B. J. BURNS.

Accused as Burglar at 13.

The charge grew out of the arrest of Art Vorrayer, 13 years old, of 1659 South Kostner avenue. The boy was accused by the police of the Brighton Park station, at which the lieutenant is stationed, of having participated in the burglary of the store of Mrs. Mary Vargas, at 3434 South Western avenue, on Oct. 17.

He is said to have confessed acting as "lookout" for two older boys, naming James Greventtis, 3500 South Western avenue, and Frank Lang. Greventtis and Lang were arrested, and the trio was brought before Judge Doyle in the Boys' court last Friday. It was then the Vorrayer boy accused Burns.

"Flogged with Knout."

"He brought me into a room at the station," the boy said. "He was in his shirt sleeves. He and Policeman Coffey tore off my shirt, and Burns beat me with a club to which had been tied some leather strips with knots in the ends. After he had beaten me black and blue I had to confess."

Lieut. Burns told the court the child was stubborn and had refused at first to reveal the identity of his alleged companions in the robbery. He admitted he had inflicted some punishment.

He went to Chief Garrity's office as ordered by the court, but the chief was absent—and Burns returned to court.

Puts Case Up to Garrity.

"I told him to report to the chief last week and I would let the matter rest until I learned what action had been taken by the chief," said Judge Doyle last night.

He added that he considered Lieut. Burns a capable and honorable police officer. Chief Garrity refused to comment, although he said he had seen Burns at the funeral of John Rig[illegible] yesterday and that Burns had not mentioned the flogging charge. Lieut. Burns was silent.

Burns, with Capt. John J. Mahoney, was discharged in 1912 by the civil service trial board after he had been tried on charges of bungling police work in permitting the escape of men accused of complicity in the $272,000 robbery of the Bank of Montreal branch at New Westminster, B. C. He was reinstated on Jan. 2, 1917.

Both Greventtis and Lang deny participation in the robbery despite Vorrayer's confession. The three boys were held to the grand jury.

SHORT 64 POUNDS AND GLAD OF IT!

Here's one woman who is glad at last to be in reduced circumstances — Mrs. Susie Cadwell of 4411 Ravenswood avenue—reduced, that is, in the matter of weight.

Last April she joined the reducing class of Health Commissioner John Dill Robertson. She took the diet, she did the exercises, she observed the rules, she hiked, she swam, she kept regular hours. And bit by bit she lost—and thereby won.

Today Mrs. Cadwell is a new woman. She weighs 160 pounds net. In six months she has lost sixty-four pounds. This means that all her clothes have become too large. But that doesnt' bother her—it doesn't take as much material now to make a dress as it did last April—not nearly as much.

She doesn't eat as much. Therefore she feels better. She feels younger, too, and quicker, and brighter.

"I feel like another woman altogether," she said, "a much nicer person physically—nicer for myself to get along with, I mean.

"And when I go into the stores I know I can find something that will fit me, something made for the normal woman. I don't have to look over the extra sizes—the medium stouts—as was once my habit. Dr. Robertson has given me the best gifts possible—youth and health."

BUTCHER SAYS UNION BURNED DOWN HIS SHOP

Refused to Pay "Fine" for Being Open Late.

"The butchers' union burned down my place," said Arnold Rockstroh, 2133 West Madison street, last night. "They ruined me because I wouldn't pay $250; and I'm going to tell the whole story to State's Attorney Hoyne Monday morning."

Rockstroh's place, the Sanitary market, was destroyed by fire early yesterday morning. He says the loss is $2,500; and his insurance $1,500.

"A week ago Friday three men came into my place," he said. "One of them told me he was business agent for a meat cutters' union. They said I had been keeping open too late, and the union had fined me $250. I had nothing to do with the union, and I told them so.

Objects to Wife Working.

"They even objected to the fact that my wife helped me around the shop. They said I should hire a union butcher in her place. They told me to see the president of the union. I took Martin Meine, another butcher, with me and talked to this man. He gave me a paper to call the pickets off—they had been walking in front of my place—and said he would come to see me.

"He came all right. He asked for the $250, and I wouldn't give it to him. I offered him $100, and agreed to put up a sign saying my shop would close at 6 o'clock hereafter every day except Saturday, when it would be open until 9.

"But he said he had to have $250 because he had to keep a lot of fellows like me in line, and it cost money for tires and gasoline. He put the pickets back, with signs that called me unfair to union labor. And they stopped meat deliveries to my place, too.

"Not Police Business."

"Early this week they threw stink bombs into my place. I went to the Warren avenue police. The captain told me it wasn't police business. I went to Desplaines street. I was told there to get out a warrant. Then I went to Chief Garrity's office. I didn't see the chief, but a fat fellow said he'd make an investigation. Nobody offered me any protection.

"Thursday night four big bricks were thrown through the windows of my store; and now the fire. Schmidt told me not to be stubborn, that it wouldn't pay. I expected trouble—but not this."

The fire was started between 2 and 3 o'clock yesterday morning, it is believed. It was burning in three separate places when the firemen arrived, and attachés of the fire attorney's office began an investigation.

CHANCE GLIMPSE LANDS ELOPERS AFTER 2 YEARS

The other day a man from Racine passed a box factory at Eighteenth and Canal streets and saw an old friend, John Pierce, who had been foreman in the Racine Tire company. He remembered that Pierce had left his wife and two children two years ago and had eloped with Alice Nelson, forelady in the tire factory.

He went back to Racine and told Detective Charles Gainey and the girl's father. Gainey came to Chicago and with Detectives Rausch and Bowman visited the factory and arrested Pierce.

At Pierce's home they found Alice and a year old baby. Alice said she was willing to go back; had been willing for some time; and was willing to appear as a witness against Pierce.

"Our child will never have a name now," said Pierce, as he parted from the girl.

Sailed 3,000,000 Miles; Stops—Will Play Golf

New York, Nov. 6.—After fifty-two years at sea, traveling 3,000,000 miles, he says, Capt. Arthur R. Mills, 66, late of the American line, sailed today for England, where he will retire to play golf. Capt. Mills has a cottage and wife waiting him at Southampton.

Victorious "Bill" Hays to Be Honored by Home

Sullivan, Ind., Nov. 6.—Will Hays is coming home next Tuesday, and politics will be forgotten while this little town of 5,000 does him honor. Democrats will join their political opponents in paying tribute to the Republican national chairman. It will be "Bill Hays" day in Sullivan, and the countryside will turn out en masse.

SWEDEN-CHILE LINE PLANNED.

VALPARAISO, Chile, Nov. 6.—Alexander Johnson, the Swedish millionaire ship owner, president of the Johnson line of steamers, arrived here today on board one of his own vessels and announced plans for fortnightly sailings of the steamers of his line between Sweden and Chile. Mr. Johnson will proceed to the northern countries of South America and thence to San Francisco.

Constabulary Man Fined $200 as Revolver Toter

Has a member of the department of constabulary a right to carry a revolver? Judge Hugh R. Stewart says he has not. The police say hundreds of constabulary members are "toting guns."

Judge Stewart yesterday fined Frank Henning, 1809 Eddy street, a constabulary member, $200 under the Sadler act. Henning protested that he was a constable. The judge said he was not, that constables are elected.

Henning was arrested by Detectives Massett and Hope of the Sheffield avenue station. They said he had been showing the revolver to friends and telling them he "was as much a police officer as any cop."

THE UNITED STATES STILL IS.

American nationality has had three critical periods. One was when it became a nation with states and not a confederation of states and when under the constitution and with Hamilton it took its way towards complete Americanism of ideals and purposes held in common by all the people.

The second was when by civil war it determined that the nation created under the constitution was a unit and not divisible, that it was greater than any part of it—that the United States IS and not the states ARE, at their will, united.

Thus the nation was created and thus it was saved as a nation. We are but a few days out of the third critical period, which, because it is so close to our vision and because its gravamen was so disguised by specious phrases and ample benevolences, has not been definitely defined.

In each critical period there has been a political party with vision and one without it. In the first period the party of vision was the Federalist and the leader Hamilton. In the second period the party was the Republican and the leader Lincoln. In the third period the party again was Republican and it took as its leader Harding. Under this leadership the United States, having determined that it is a nation under its constitution, having saved the nation under its constitution, determined that it should remain a nation under its constitution. It retains its full nationality without submission to a superstate, and it retains its form of government with its checks and balances.

In the first period the opposition to nationalism gave the nation some compensating benefits. It enlarged the theme of democracy, and while Hamilton created a nation, Jefferson made it in fact as well as in theory a democratic nation, checking Hamilton's desire for upper class government with his own passion for popular government.

In the second period and in this period through which we have just passed the opposition offered no compensations for its destructiveness. In the second period it would have torn the nation in two and would have destroyed the right by which it could exist as a nation, the right of the whole to control the part. In the third it would have destroyed the validity of the legislative check on executive authority or autocracy and would have made dictatorship possible.

The superstate, to the authority of which the United States was to submit, was ingeniously contrived to promote a dictatorship at home. Wilson had assumed powers which startled the nation. They would have been confirmed under the covenant which virtually recognized the president as the voice and will of the nation and ignored the congressional checks upon him.

It was the instinctive American feeling of this organic issue which found expression at the polls. No other issue could have brought out such a response. The Democratic party, on the wrong side of the question, almost melted away, as it did in the second period when it was denationalistic.

Then it was forty years in recovering from the assault it had made upon nationalism. A war fixed the bitterness and nailed the responsibility. Again the party has been almost obliterated, but without bitterness and consequently without an unwholesome overthrow of party balances. The Democratic party can come back from this mistake without forty years in the desert.

Under Mr. Wilson the American government had gone a long ways from the theory of American government, but the people had not followed and they did not intend to. They accepted the necessities of war and submitted to perversions of their government because they thought them necessary. When these perversions seemed about to fix themselves the people rebelled, as they had to if they were to preserve their constitutional forms.

It had been thought inconceivable that the United States, with all the checks which its constitution puts on government, could develop and support an autocratic executive. Mr. Wilson came nearly proving to the people that the checks were insufficient. He nearly assumed the purple. That was a disconcerting discovery to Americans.

There have been conflicts before between executive and legislative branches, and there will be again; but in Mr. Wilson's case there was the assumption that the legislative branch had ceased to exist independently. Congress became the first duma under Nicholas and his ministers. It had the right to sit but not to intervene. Mr. Wilson made it constantly the moral duty of the United Sates senate to accept and not to question.

There might be occasions when the executive controlled the senate or when the senate controlled the executive, and such occasions might not be good for the nation; but they would not change its form of government unless it were recognized that the one should control the other.

If one did control, then we had either a directory or a Napoleon III., emperor by plebiscite. Possibly if Mr. Wilson had not gone twice to Europe to negotiate a treaty the new position in which the president of the United States was placing himself might not have been seen so clearly by the people. It was evident upon that demonstration that if a president could isolate himself from counsel and free himself from restraint, sit in foreign councils as the sole expression of American will, return with a portentous covenant which must be accepted unaltered and unchallenged, then the United States had a dictator who might as well have the name, inasmuch as he had the power.

Mr. Wilson said that he alone had the power morally to bind the nation. The people saw that if he, unauthorized, could maintain that, where they would be if they gave their consent to moral obligations which specifically bound them to submit. Then indeed the processes of their government were forestalled.

That, they saw, was precisely what the covenant of the league did. It recognized but one will in the United States, the will of the executive government voiced by the president. That road, if the American people turned into it, had, coming down it, the possibilities of a czaristic autocrat.

This danger, so veiled by alluring moralities and humanities, was appreciated. The American instinct realized that there was a critical conflict and a trend away from American government, ideals, traditions, and forms. American votes decisively stopped it. It was this aroused instinct which swept the Democratic party out of the way. The party might have been defeated upon its conduct of the war, but after all the war had been won, and it is the American habit to vote confidence in a party which has successfully conducted a war.

It was the peace, not the war, which almost obliterated the Democratic party, and that because the peace had more dangers for the American nation than the war had.

THE MIDDLE CLASS DEFENDS ITSELF.

While the general strike has not proved to be a very workable device and has disappointed the hopes of those radicals who expected it to prevent wars and accomplish revolutions, it is a threat to which European societies are giving serious thought. As a weapon of the proletarian revolution, brandished often and sometimes used, the middle class is its special victim. Strictly speaking, there have been no general strikes. But there have been strikes in one or more essential industries, and the power which they represented has been great enough to alarm communities with the prospect of starvation and economic paralysis.

In Great Britain there is a well defined movement of the middle class; that is, nonmanual workers, clerks, professional men, etc., to organize for defense against the dominance of organized manual workers, especially those in industries providing necessities such as food, fuel, and transportation.

The recent coal strike undoubtedly has intensified this movement for self-preservation, and one of its results is the passage in the house of commons by an enormous majority of an emergency powers bill granting extensive powers to the government in case of strikes or other organized efforts to control the essentials of life. The measure, indeed, is said not to be the result of the coal strike but to have been formulated months ago upon general consideration of the possibilities and tendencies of revolutionary radicalism. Extremist leaders have preached direct action for the paralysis of capitalistic society, the overthrow of democratic government, the abolition of the middle class, and the establishment of class rule or dictatorship of the proletariat. British democracy does not propose to be overthrown by an organized minority possessing inordinate powers through a command of certain essentials of life. It still represents the great majority of the nation and it intends to put itself in a position to defend itself against revolutionary assaults disguised as industrial disputes. Under the emergency powers bill the government is authorized to use all available resources to maintain necessary transport and supplies of food, fuel, and light.

From Germany, meanwhile, comes evidence of the same effort of the middle class to protect itself from proletarianism. It takes the form of an organization, the Technische Nothilfe, known as "the Red Cross of industry." It was formed at Stuttgart about a year ago and operates under the direction of the minister of the interior. It broke in five days a general strike which threatened general industrial paralysis of Württemberg.

The organization maintains a central office corresponding to the headquarters of an army, and subdistricts each under a leader, who obtains volunteers pledged to act in case of need. The volunteers are university students, engineers, professors in the Polytechnic institute, and also unskilled workers. Lists of these volunteers are kept in the subdistricts and at headquarters, and each volunteer is given instructions where to report on call. The central organization accumulates supplies and sends them to strike districts when required. The plan is virtually that of an industrial militia to be called out when the community is threatened.

Democratic society cannot afford to allow so serious a threat at its existence as the general strike, or strike in essential industries, to hang over its head. Proletarianism won in Russia, for the time being, because the so-called bourgeois class was small and unprepared. America, where there are no classes, properly speaking, where men are constantly passing up and down the scale, where property is widely distributed and democracy is in the air we breathe, stands at the other end of the scale. The great mass of us are what would be called middle class, including a considerable proportion of the manual workers. We have had trouble with strikes in essential industries, but the power of organized democratic society would quickly overwhelm any attempt to make use of the strike as a revolutionary weapon. In Great Britain, France, and Germany, however, the need for serious democratic organization for defense from revolutionary labor tactics and for the preservation of the middle class seems to be recognized. It is a defense essential to the preservation of civilization.

Editorial of the Day

A SENSIBLE LABOR LEADER.

[Milwaukee Sentinel.]

President Michael Galvin of the Chicago Truck Drivers and Chauffeurs' union, who advised his members to "use horse sense" and remain at work instead of calling a strike, is entitled to credit as an intelligent man who is more concerned for the welfare of those whom he leads than with showing his power and authority.

"It is easy enough to call men on strike," he said, "but there are others who have to be considered also in the matter. Your families and the public come in for some share of consideration."

That is a refreshing utterance, especially in these days when so many labor leaders have apparently been guided more by prejudice than by common sense.

There have been far too many strikes called ill-advisedly which have resulted only in prolonged unemployment and consequent distress among the strikers. And many a union man has been forced, against his own inclination and judgment, to enter such a strike when his own "horse sense," appealed to by President Galvin, told him that it was a foolish thing to do.

If more labor leaders assumed the position taken by the head of the Chicago union, it would be found that the adjustment of labor differences with employers would be greatly simplified. "Horse sense" and forbearance on both sides would avert many a bitter controversy and costly strike.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

Hew to the Line, let the quips fall where they may.

"OF SWEET OCCASIONS."

Of sweet occasions not a few there are
For him who thinks and feels, and leads his life
In love with good, unshaken by the strife
In places where men's wills are oft at jar.
He shall have joy through gazing on a star
That looks his doorway in, or on his wife
As she works silent near him; or his knife
May benefit his trees with wholesome scar.
Music may bless his ear, and oftentimes
Old authors shall detain him worthily
'Twixt lamp and fire; or else, a score of rhymes
His father-lips shall croon, while children lie
Or sit, glad in his presence, till one climbs
His knee, half-drowsed—the apple of his eye.

"DO you remember," asks a fair correspondent (who protests that she is only academically fair), "when we used to read 'A Shropshire Lad,' and A. E., and Arthur Symons, and Yeats? And you used to print so many of the beautiful things they wrote?" Ah, yes, we do remember; but that, my dear, was a long, long time ago, in the period which has just closed, as Bennett puts it. How worth while those things used to seem, and what pleasant days those were. Men say that they will come again. But men said that Arthur would come again.

Massasoit, a chieftain, was received with honor and regaled with aqua vitæ, of which "he drank a great draught that made him sweat all the while after." The chieftain then signed the treaty submitted.

It was from these Puritans that there flowed a stream of ideals which have permeated all parts of the United States.

THERE are persons so anti-British as to forget that the lion preceded the Englishman in the animal kingdom. The Chicago Art institute is considered pro-British because it has lions at its portals, and we have heard Mr. Carl Akeley's Roosevelt monument criticized as pro-British because he has used the lion as a symbol of T. R. "The old lion is dead," one of the Roosevelt boys cabled across when T. R. died. So he was known in the family, which probably did not realize that the idea was pro-British.

Sir: Mr. Fisher is taking Miss Barnacle to the faculty dance tonight, and the psychology professor says he has in his class an Edgar Allan Moe. But you and I are interested in higher research. You will Minnehaha, perhaps, to ascertain my latest thesis. After decades of sober reflection, it has occurred to me that nature is a wonderful thing. As one of Prof. Hillhouse's, who used to play upon the mandolin, students said in a rhetoric theme, "Who does not love the maple, the oak, the ash, the poplar, the pine, the sycamore, the willow? I do." And indeed the willow is a sentimental shrub. Ko-Ko waxed lyrical thereover and Whoozis sang in Shakespeare of "Willow, willow!" Why, you ask, sentimentalize over the willow? Because, sir, triumphantly I rise to proclaim, because the willow is itself given to lachrymose ecstasy. How clear, now, the objective of my future research! After further decades of investigation into the literature of the subject I purpose to monograph: "When Did the Weeping Willow Start to Weep—and Why?" Possibly P. D. S. may help us in our search. So far I have further discovered this clew: In a certain chophouse and refectionery of the Minnecity, Prof. Bean and myself after a pleasant evening at the movies, ordered a brace of chocolate malteds. With the foaming brew was served a plate of toothpicks. RIQUARIUS.

IN DYING PETROGRAD.

IF you have any desire to glimpse how society can slip back in two years farther than it has crawled forward in 300 years, then read a story of life in Petrograd, recently printed in the Saturday Evening Post.

If the experiences of your lifetime, spent behind the protecting walls of medicine and sanitary science, have made a Pollyanna of you, ponder over this story. If you feel any desire to revile the men and institutions that have brought you security, study the teachings of this story and repent.

We read that the death rate of Petrograd, which is normally about 22 per thousand, rose to 43.6 in 1918 and 74.9 in 1919. In the latter year there were about 74,900 deaths. A population of 979,680 was estimated for Petrograd in 1919, the basis of the estimate being the number of food cards issued. The writer of the story says the population was probably less than 700,000.

Now, let's see what 74,900 deaths among 700,000 people means; that almost one-ninth of the entire population died that year. The death rate in this country is about 14. The Petrograd death rate was six times as high, assuming that their population did not exceed 700,000. Our social machinery was fearfully strained during the influenza epidemic. The Petrograd death rate of 1919 was more than four times as high as our death rate in 1918.

There were American cities which were not able promptly to bury their dead on certain days in October, 1918. The average daily death rate for 1919 in Petrograd was more than twice as high as ours of October, 1918.

There was a time when Chicago was so unhealthful that some thought the site would have to be abandoned. An army sent by the federal government against the Black Hawk Indians upon reaching Chicago was taken sick and never was able to go farther. The Petrograd death rate in 1919 was twice that of Chicago in its worst year.

Many more died among the 700,000 in Petrograd in 1919 than were killed in our army of several million in the great war in almost two years. The highest death rate Petrograd ever had prior to 1919 was in the great cholera epidemic in 1848. The death rate of 1919 was about one-third higher than that of 1848.

The normal birth rate of Petrograd is about 28 per 1,000, being at least 3 points higher than ours. By 1918 the Petrograd rate had fallen to 15 and in 1919 it was 13. The death rate is about six times as high as the birth rate.

Sanitation is unspeakably bad, communicable diseases are wholly uncontrolled, the sick are not cared for and the well are hungry, dirty, and lousy.

The article is an appeal to the world for help through the Red Cross. They must have help or they must change their government, or they must abandon Petrograd and scatter out or a little more than ten years will see the Petrograd population wiped out. Will the twentieth century have its Sodom and Gomorrah?

IT'S QUESTION OF INFECTION.

W. B. Writes: "What are the proper meats and vegetables for a man 67 years old to eat when he is troubled with constipation? He had fistula and was operated on and now he has the same trouble again. He has had a slight attack of lumbago. Could that have brought on this old trouble again?"

REPLY.

For constipation eat a diet containing plenty of vegetables and fruit. Eat bran bread daily. Use bran as a morning cereal. Drink plenty of water. If this does not suffice eat some agar daily. It can be mixed with a cooked fruit such as prunes or apples. Fistula is not influenced by foods and there is no diet for it. It is due to infection of the tissues of the lower bowel wall with tubercle bacilli or pus cocci or both.

PROBABLY HE'S OVERFED.

M. S. writes: "I have a 12 weeks old baby weighing 12 pounds (9 pounds at birth). He invariably vomits one-quarter to one-half ounce after or before each feeding. He feeds every three hours between 6 a. m. and 9 p. m., and once during the night, taking one ounce from the breast, and three ounces of the following: 13½ ounces milk, 7½ ounces barley water, 7 teaspoons dextri-maltose, and 2 teaspoons sodium citrate. The milk in this formula has been increased gradually from five ounces. The breast milk is thin and watery.

"1. Is the vomiting normal?

"2. Would you suggest a change in diet?

"3. When can I start giving him fruit juice?"

REPLY.

Vomiting a little is not especially significant, provided the baby is happy and growing. You are probably overfeeding a little and the baby will be a little better off if he gets less food. While four ounces is a small feeding, there is no certainty that he is getting only one ounce from the breast. The mixture you give is pretty rich. The mixture given 3 months old babies by most physicians contains eight and one-half ounces milk and eleven and one-half ounces water. He can begin fruit juice now.

LET HIM EAT VEGETABLES.

O. M. writes: "My son, 14 years old, has been unable to take milk since he was 15 months old. He eats like a 'hired hand,' but is pale and under weight. Is there any way to make milk pleasing to his taste?"

REPLY.

There are some people to whom even good milk is a poison. Give the boy plenty of meat and green vegetables. For instance, spinach, turnip salad, all other kinds of greens, all kinds of salads, other vegetables, bread, preferably made from whole wheat, and fruit. Milk is poor in iron. Vegetables contain the iron needed to overcome anæmia and the lime needed for growth.

EMPLOYE'S COMPENSATION.

Woodstock, Ill., Nov. 3.—[Friend of the People.]—Can you tell me the amount of compensation a man will get who received injuries while employed by a construction company, which was covered by insurance? OF BRITISH PARENTS.

Evanston, Ill., Nov. 2.—[Friend of the People.]—If a child is born to British parents residing in the United States, does it automatically become an American citizen, or does it acquire the citizenship of its parents? If there is any alternative to automatic American citizenship resulting from birth in the United States, what steps are necessary to secure British citizenship for the child until such time as the British parents are qualified and actually become naturalized American citizens? W. M. C.

The naturalization office, 776 Federal building, Chicago, advises the following:

"All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the state in which they reside."

Whether the child is regarded by Great Britain as a subject can only be determined by consulting the laws of that country. Where dual citizenship is involved it is generally held that the child has an election of citizenship upon arriving at the age of 21.

Chicago, Nov. 2.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—A father of two sons died about eight years ago, leaving no estate but owing some money to another who holds a note. Can the holder of the note get judgment against the sons or contest the division of the estate? Their father was not an heir to the grandmother's estate, having died before she did. R. J. M.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

IN DEFENSE OF AN ASSOCIATE.

Chicago, Oct. 29.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—As an erroneous impression has gone out regarding the late Rev. F. G. Ruff, who was killed by a shot fired from a revolver in the hands of one of his tenants, I beg you to publish the following facts about his life and character: Mr. Ruff was a member of the Chicago German Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church at the time of his death. He was in good standing in the conference and was supplying pulpits whenever called upon to do so by his colleagues. His large funeral last Thursday and the beautiful floral tributes indicated in what high esteem he was held and how many friends he had made. Mr. Ruff was a man of some means. As a landlord, he had been not only fair to his numerous tenants, but his friends in the real estate business say that his rents are not as high as the rents in other buildings of like grade in that exclusive section. He was not only a liberal supporter of many benevolent causes, but he also was a philanthropist in the true sense of the word. During the last years he gave much money for the support of poor children and especially for the suffering children in central Europe. A number of his gifts are still on the way there, while he is already resting in his grave.

OLD "PAT" HENRY.

Chicago, Nov. 1.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—The press reports of Ald. Byrne's outburst before the city council recently quote him as saying Patrick Henry was an Irishman. When a man is all "het up" over something he is, of course, liable to get balled up in his statements. The facts are that Patrick Henry was an American, having been born in Virginia, and he was not a long distance "whereas" type of patriot. His father was Scotch, having emigrated from Aberdeen.

It is to be supposed that if Washington and Lincoln had been named "Pat" the alderman would have classed them, too, with that misguided fanatic, MacSwiney.

By the way, why did the honorable council exclude from its lamentations of sympathy the families of the several score Irish law officers who have been murdered in cold blood by other fanatics of the MacSwiney type? W. A. S.

INSANITY AS A DEFENSE FOR MURDER.

Chicago, Oct. 31.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—For a great many years I have maintained that insanity as a defense to a charge of murder should be abolished. Again and again after a man has committed a most foul murder he hires an astute attorney who sets up the plea of insanity, and instead of being summarily hanged, as he richly deserved, he is sent to an asylum for a few years and then is released. If any man is insane enough to commit murder, then he is a menace to society, and society, for its own protection, should put him out of the way, and not for simply a few years, then to be turned loose again, but permanently. The only sure way to do this is to have him executed. This afterthought of insanity has repeatedly cheated justice, and has been used time and again to turn loose upon society a most dangerous criminal. It is no wonder that anarchists are being bred and multiplied. GEORGE W. HALL.

IRISH HISTORY.

Monmouth, Ill., Oct. 20.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—In A. J. Turtle's letter it is said that the Irish parliament merged its existence into that of the parliament of the United Kingdom of Great Britain in the name of Ireland. This was quite true, but Mr. Turtle failed to say that before the merger the members of the Irish parliament who opposed the union of the two kingdoms were dismissed and new offices were created for the followers of Lord Clare and Castlereagh who proposed and fostered the union. In this way the government filled the seats of parliament with men of its own choice and the union bill was passed in June, 1800. It had previously been passed by the English government and on Jan. 1, 1801, the act of union between the two kingdoms took effect.

THE SINS OF THE PARENTS.

Walworth, Wis., Nov. 2.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—In regard to your editorial, "A Grand Jury Speaks Out," I wonder if parents who placed the moral and mental training of their children in the hands of 16 year old girls while social functions occupied their own time at a time when their babies most needed mature judgment and guidance, would be exonerated by a grand jury from all complicity in a child's delinquency on the ground that they had, by hiring a paid nursemaid, protected their children from evil influence. Also, I wonder if those parents who were obliged to have their children day after day on "the street corners and vacant lots of the city, which "are the kindergartens of the school of crime," while they worked to eke out a bare existence for their brood, would be held responsible for neglect.

"DOWN TO EARTH."

Chicago, Nov. 2.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—For forty years THE TRIBUNE has been my guide and friend in many things political. But this campaign has been too much. Personal quarrels has clouded its judgment. Its wild statements, lack of fairness, and misstatements, persisted in day after day, have shattered my faith. Now the election is over. Won't you come down to earth and rebuild in the public's mind a new sense of your reliability.

A. C. MCKINSTRY.

THE UNASSIMILATED WORKMAN.

Chicago, Oct. 26.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—In reference to the unassimilated foreigner's letter, I believe some do not seem to understand his reasons.

There are hundreds of shops and factories right in this city today where, if you are not of the same nationality of the foreman, you couldn't get a job, or at least you wouldn't last long.

I know this myself. I have seen it.

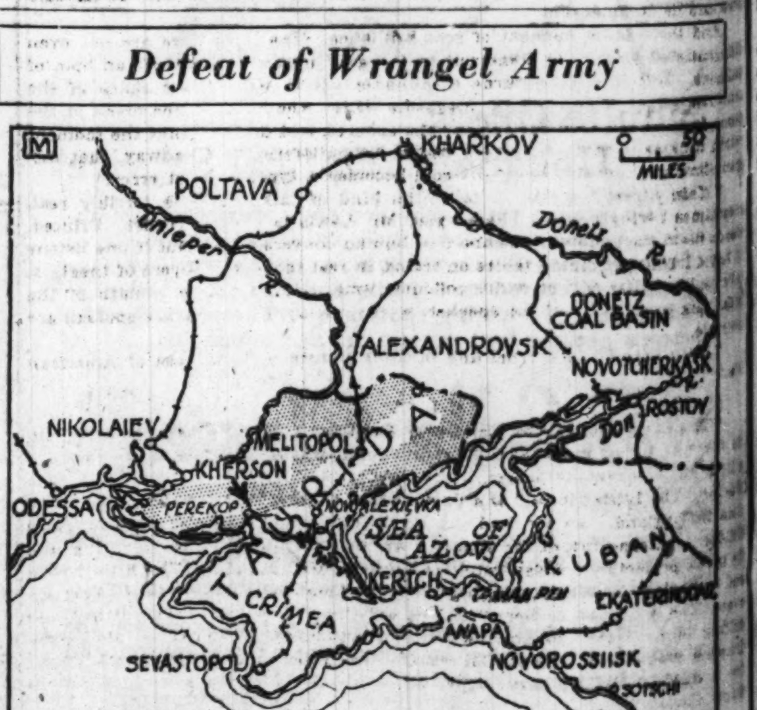
Defeat of Wrangel Army



The arrow indicates the Isthmus of Perekop, where Wrangel's forces have been beleagured by the massed attacks of five Red armies, which have cut his sole rail line of communication to the Crimea at Novoalexievka, and which seem certain to capture his vast army stores in Taurida.

The Reds have invested the greater part of his army in central Taurida and are reported to be advancing south along the railway into the Crimea to cut off Wrangel's retreat from Perekop.

The shading shows the territory wrested from Wrangel by the Reds.

NONFICTION.

"The First World War" [Houghton-Mifflin], by Col. Repington.
"Our Women" [Doran], by Arnold Bennett.
"Letters of a Javanese Princess" [Knopf], by Raden Adjeng Kartini.

Last week's six best circulators at the public library were:

"Mary Wollaston," by Henry Kitchell Webster.
"Flappers and Philosophers," by F. Scott Fitzgerald.
"White Shadows in the South Seas," by Frederick O'Brien.
"Now It Can Be Told," by Philip Gibbs.
"Mrs. Craddock," by W. Somerset Maugham.
"Steeplejack," by James Huneker.

"MOON CALF," by Floyd Dell, is the most important first novel by an American that has come from the presses this fall. It is important in a peculiarly personal way to us of the middle west, for it is a fictionization of youth, groping for beauty, sometimes crude and cruel, but grinding on toward some realization of youth's ideals of the potential power of what seems to us sometimes only the physical bread basket of the world.

We middle westerners seldom realize the poetic grandeur of our prairies, the sheer world power that is rooted in our Mississippi-nourished fields. And we are wont to take lightly the assurance of a debonair critic who says that Chicago is the literary capital of America. But more and more Mr. Mencken's judgment has been proved to be correct. Floyd Dell's first novel adds an overwhelming weight to the balance.

"Moon Calf" is a fine, free, honest, sincerely beautiful piece of work, young—like our middle west—unsophisticated in the ways of ordinary tricks of the novel trade, but—or, rather, and therefore—convincing and impressive. It is the life history of that strange "sport" which happens in human as well as animal and plant life—a poet born to peasants, a yearner miraculously brought forth by plodders. There is nothing sensational about Felix's lack of sympathy with his clodlike family. His soul is lifted high over the clods, but he feels a great loneliness rather than a superiority. He is egoistical but not egotistical. He knows his powers, and he, often sadly, suspects his limitations, but he lets neither of them stifle the straight flight of his soul toward its sun.

I would not leave with you the impression that Mr. Dell speaks of Felix's soul. His art is a subtler one than that. He makes of his hero a character so real, so convincing, so sincere, that you, the reader, know, without being told by the author, the immortal truths about the hero. Felix is little more than a boy when the book ends—a boy become a man by the finest nurturing of the middle west, already with his eyes turned toward Chicago as the place where his loneliness will meet other lonelinesses in the council of gods.

I suspect that Mr. Dell is planning a further history of Felix Fay, that "Moon Calf" is the first of a trilogy. There is something so intimate about "Moon Calf" that it must have more than the usual amount of autobiography which is inevitable in a first novel. I hope the next novel recreates those years in Chicago when he was editor of the Friday evening Post literary review, when he and Francis Hackett made of it the most distinguished literary supplement in America, and later when he became its editor and published not only brilliant reviews but series of articles on all forward-looking movements.

Floyd Dell has been a long time writing his first novel—every one expected it to come as a fruit of his first year in the east, and that was five or six years ago—but "Moon Calf" is worth waiting for. It has a quality of sweetness and charm which would have been impossible in those days which were still the sturm und drang of his own questing youth.

"War can be waged with the loss of a few well-trained men or of many lightly trained men," says Col. Robert R. McCormick in "The Army of 1918." "Our congress has deliberately chosen the latter method throughout our history. Three-fourths of the men killed in the Argonne and elsewhere in France were killed by Americans; only one-quarter were killed by the Germans."

"The Army of 1918" is Col. McCormick's impressive argument for military training, for a future of complete preparedness. Col. McCormick does no preaching about preparedness. He states facts, and lets them thunder in their silences. From the beginning of our nation we have been against enforced or even voluntary military service in times of peace—the natural result of the hostility of the refugees to America against the mercenary army domination which they were escaping. In the later American wars trained troops fought the militia although the brilliance of some thoroughly-trained military genius tipped the balance.

Part of the book is devoted to the actual work of the army of 1918 in France, what Col. Repington so ironically calls "The First World War." Col. McCormick gives facts about that army which have not before been shared with the public. He had an especially intimate connection with the first months of the war as a member of Gen. Pershing's staff, from which post he was transferred at his urgent request to active service with the First division. He says that Americans fought best under French officers and usually only after they had received French training.

From a military point of view "there were but two armies of the first class, the French and German. It was the superiority of the French at home, the result of popular institutions, that achieved the victory. Equal at the front and stronger at the rear France offers the complete model for national defense."

"Our Boys"—the ammunition of the orators who asked the rhetorical question "How do you account for the fact that our boys after three months are better soldiers than the veterans of Germany?"—never fought in this war, Col. McCormick declares. Regiments of soldiers of a year or more training fought. "Their efficiency varied in direct ratio to the length of their training. 'Our boys' never fought well in any war." "Fighting is the primeval purpose of the male. In modern times, when fighting becomes necessary only once in a lifetime instead of every day, the urgency is no less great." "There is only one way to have a good army, and that is to have every man a soldier."

Don't be afraid of "The Army of 1918" because it sounds as though it were technical. Col. McCormick has purposely refrained from writing a technical book. "The Army of 1918" is written for the layman and the laywoman. It is perfectly comprehensible to any one. It is, to quote the slogan of one of our lately defunct contemporaries, "easy to read and worth reading."

"Advice" is a tiny volume of free verse by Maxwell Bodenheim, who gives "advice" to everything from a buttercup and a grass blade to a river steamboat and a street pavement. They are whimsical, charming little scraps of advice. Maxwell Bodenheim belongs to the younger school of American poets. He has done nothing especially memorable so far, but he may some day, and until he does his "Advice" should be taken.

"Main Street" is Sinclair Lewis' latest criticism of American life. It is the story of a girl, avid for life, for the conquest of a little town, for its rebirth into something fundamentally beautiful, and of its conquest of her. It is a joyless book. There is no moment of lift, of gayety, of the sparkle of life. But I am sure that Mr. Lewis intended it so. He sets out to draw the drab picture of the thousands of Main streets in America, of the cruelties of the small town in its resentment of the coming of the "city" person, of its dullness and its complacency.

And there is no moment of rose brilliance. The characters are not even differentiated enough to stand out in the gray mist. It is almost an epic of realism. But it is a nocturne of dullness. It is Main street shorn of the sentimentalities of the popular magazine writer who hears in the creak of the pump in the back yard the song of the spheres, and declares that the moment the cookies in Main street are traded for patisserie on Broadway, that moment immortal as applied to the soul becomes a typographical error.

"Main Street" is full of talk—the kind of talk which is terribly real, sometimes boringly real. There again Mr. Lewis is being a realist. Printed, words seem impossible as members of human conversation. But if one listens in hotel lobbies, at dining tables on trains, in rest rooms and foyers of theaters, talk is like that—full of dumb colloquialisms, colorless oaths. Shorn of the softening personality of the speaker, words, set down as they are spoken, are terrible.

"Main Street" is a cruel and faithful picture of one phase of American life.

"The Little House," by Coningsby Dawson, is one of those misleading little volumes, nicely made, sweetly sentimental, which make one think they are a little bit of exquisite charm, but which somehow just don't convince. The idea of "The Little House" is a pretty one. A little house, untenanted. Wartime in England. An air raid. A lonely little war widow and her adorable children scuttling into it for shelter. An American soldier also hurrying into it to seek protection. A few minutes before a fire. Months. The little widow and her babies installed in the house—by accident mothered by fate. The war over. The American soldier, with one arm instead of two. The little house awaiting him. Weeks of unimpassioned friendliness. The day of his return drawing nearer, and with it, Christmas. The little widow's little boy's prayer for a daddy for Christmas. The, so to speak, complete coming across of Santa Claus.

The little house tells the story—a delicate little idea. The only trouble with the idea is that Mr. Dawson has put observations into the mouth of the little house which it could not possibly have observed. What went on in it and what it heard the members of the household talking about has a pleasant reality. Events which happen entirely outside of itself sound unconvincing when retold as its observations.

It will be a popular Christmas book, though, despite its occasional discrepancies, for it has the proper plum pudding mixture, and, as befits our day, no strong drink of emotions.

POEMS YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

TWO LOVERS.

By George Eliot.

Two lovers by a moss-grown spring:
They leaned soft cheeks together there,
Mingled the dark and sunny hair,
And heard the wooing thrushes sing.
O budding time!
O love's blest prime!

Two wedded from the portal stept:
The bells made happy carolings,
The air was soft as fanning wings,
White petals on the pathway slept.
O pure-eyed bride!
O tender pride!

Two faces o'er a cradle bent:
Two hands above the head were locked;
These pressed each other while they rocked,
Those watched a life that love had sent.
O solemn hour!
O hidden power!

Two parents by the evening fire:
The red light fell about their knees
On heads that rose by slow degrees
Like buds upon the lily spire.
O patient life!
O tender strife!

The two still sat together there,
The red light shone about their knees;
But all the heads by slow degrees
Had gone and left that lonely pair.
O voyage fast!
O vanished past!

The red light shone upon the floor
And made the space between them wide;
They drew their chairs up side by side,
Their pale cheeks joined, and said,
"Once more!"
O memories!
O past that is!

PAY ROLL THIEVES SCARED BY GIRLS; DROP LOOT, FLEE

Raid Fourth Floor, Beat Loop Paymaster.

One attempted pay roll robbery, in which the paymaster was beaten into unconsciousness; two pay roll robberies that netted the bandits nearly $500; an attempted burglary, in which one of the robbers was shot and wounded by a policeman, and nearly thirty other burglaries and holdups, were recorded yesterday in Chicago.

The attempted pay roll robbery occurred shortly after noon in the offices of the Kimball Glass company, on the third and fourth floors of the building 402 West Randolph street. Julius Scholdar of 3737 Douglas boulevard, the paymaster, had just completed paying the employés on the third floor and was on his way to the fourth when he was accosted by two armed men.

Flee Without Loot.

One of the robbers commanded him to hand over the tray in which he was carrying the pay envelopes. After he had done so, the other robber struck him over the head with the butt of a revolver, knocking him unconscious.

The robbers then produced a canvas bag, emptied the envelopes into it, and fled to the street. At the first floor however, the robbers became frightened when they encountered two women employés, and one of them stumbled and fell, dropping the bag of money, which was recovered by the firm. The police are searching the west side for the robbers.

Girl Saves Pay Roll.

Miss Marie Radner, bookkeeper, saved the weekly pay roll of the Imperial Broom company, 172 North May street, but it cost her $9. She had gone to the Merchants Loan and Trust company and drawn $1,000, which she placed in her stocking. As she was entering the offices of the company four men in an automobile dashed up and knocked her down, shouting, "Give us that money." One of the men grabbed the handbag she was carrying and then they jumped into the machine and sped away. The handbag contained $9 of Miss Radner's own money.

Miss Harios Horwich, an employé of the J. T. Cowles company, 532 South Green street, was robbed of an envelope containing a $420.77 pay roll by a lone bandit within 100 feet of the company's offices. He was chased several blocks, but escaped.

With the capture of two burglars early yesterday after an exciting chase, during which one of them was wounded, the police belive they have in custody the men who have been robbing stores of the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea company. The men had just broken the window in one of the company's stores at 687 West Twenty-sixth street, when Policeman Daniel Donohue approached. The bandits fled and Donohue fired several shots, one of which struck Thomas Hamilton, 2831 Emerald avenue. Hamilton's companion, who gave the name of Dennis Morgan, 2633 Lowe avenue, surrendered.

"Ragged Ends" of Henry Field Estate Adds $100,000

Mortgages and notes listed in a third supplemental inventory may add property valued at $100,000 to the estate of the late Henry Field, according to Paul Corkell, assistant to Probate Judge Henry Horner, before whom the inventory was filed yesterday. The mortgages and notes are payable out of the estates of two Englishmen, Andrew Cecil Drummond and Alan Joseph Pennington. William H. Henkle, secretary of the Illinois Trust and Savings bank, trustee of the Field property, said the suplemental inventory covers "the ragged ends of the estate."

DIPHTHERIA GRIPS PART OF CHICAGO; SCHOOLS ARE HIT

Health Office Strives to Prevent Epidemic.

Diphtheria, the scourge of school children, is prevalent in three Chicago districts, and Health Commissioner Robertson yesterday ordered overtime work in city laboratories where throat cultures are examined.

There have been 1,165 cases of diphtheria reported since Oct. 1—1,029 of them in October. Last year, the same month, there were 824.

The three spots in which the disease has reached epidemic form are: The district around Fullerton and Western avenues, the Nineteenth, Twentieth, and Tenth wards, and the district bounded by Robey, Halsted, Seventy-first, and Fifty-fifth streets.

Traced to a School.

Many cases were traced to St. Theodore's parochial school, Sixty-second and Paulina streets, and Dr. Heman Spalding, chief of the bureau of medical inspection, announced that fifty children have been excluded from the school as diphtheria carriers.

Nearly 1,000 school children have been sent home from school as diphtheria carriers since Oct. 1. Apparently in the best of health, diphtheria germs were found in their throats and they were considered a menace to the 50 per cent of the children of school age who are not immune.

Slowly on the Increase.

"Diphtheria has been creeping up gradually since school began," Dr. Robertson said. "There is no epidemic except in certain spots. This is shown by the fact that there were only fifty-four deaths in October. In October, 1917, there were 124 deaths from diphtheria."

The department is handicapped by lack of help. The 1920 city budget provides for only 100 school physicians instead of 140 as was the case in 1919. School nurses have been reduced from 100 to seventy and field officers from fifty-eight to fifty.

The diphtheria wards of both the county and the contagious disease hospitals are full and the council finance committee on Friday ordered Dr. Robertson to open the unused wing of the latter hospital.

THE HOUSE OF KIRCHBERG DIAMONDS
104 North State Street

THE growth of Chicago is linked with the growth of a few virile institutions.

Enscrolled on the roster of time is the name of "Kirchberg."

In the days of 1867, when Chicago was a mere infant city, the House of Kirchberg, Jewelers, made its first sale.

TODAY, passing quickly through all these years, the crowds of busy State Street pass the present business place of the House of Kirchberg, while inside, the corps of intelligent jewelers is busily engaged in serving lovers of fine diamonds, watches and distinctive jewelry.

Fifty-three years of honest merchandising is your guarantee.

RUSSIA TODAY AS DESCRIBED BY A FAMOUS WRITER

Nation's Collapse Told by Mr. H. G. Wells.

bles and plank partitions of a new administration, which is engaged chiefly in a strenuous struggle against famine and the foreign invader.

Its streets were streets of busy shops in 1914. I loafed agreeably in St. Petersburg streets buying little articles and watching the abundant traffic. All these shops have ceased. There are perhaps half a dozen shops still open in St. Petersburg. There is a government crockery shop where I bought a plate or so as souvenirs for seven or eight hundred rubles each, and there are a few flower shops.

Shops Look Abandoned.

It is a wonderful fact, I think, that in this city in which most of the shrinking population is already nearly starving and hardly any one possesses a second suit of clothes or more than a single change, worn and patched, of linen, flowers can be and are still bought and sold. For 5,000 rubles, which is about 6s 8d ($1.50) at the current rate of exchange, one can get a very pleasing bunch of big chrysanthemums.

I do not know if the words "all shops have ceased" convey any pictures to the western reader of what a street looks like in Russia. It is not like Bond street or Piccadilly on a Sunday with the blinds drawn down in decorous sleep and ready to wake up and begin again on Monday. The shops have an utterly wretched and abandoned look. The paint is peeling off, windows are cracked, some are broken and boarded up. Some still display a few fly-blown relics of stock in the windows. Some have their windows covered with notices. Windows are growing dim, fixtures have gathered two years' dust. They are dead shops. They will never open again.

Markets Are Closed, Too.

All the great bazaar-like markets are closed, too, in St. Petersburg now, in a desperate struggle to keep public control of necessities and prevent the profiteer driving up the last vestiges of food to incredible prices. And this cessation of shops makes walking about the streets seem a silly sort of thing to do. Nobody walks about any more. One realizes that a modern city is really nothing but long alleys of shops and restaurants and the like. Shut them up and the meaning of a street has disappeared.

People hurry past in the thin traffic compared with my memories of 1914. Electric street cars are still running and busses until 6 o'clock. They are the only means of locomotion for ordinary people remaining in town, the last legacy of capitalist enterprise.

The roads along which these tramcars run are in frightful condition. They have not been repaired for three or four years. They are full of holes, like shellholes, often two or three feet deep. Frost has eaten out great cavities. Drains have collapsed and the people have torn up the wood pavement for fires. Only once did we see any attempt to repair streets in St. Petersburg. In a side street some mysterious agency had collected a load of wood blocks and two barrels of tar.

Wooden Houses All Demolished.

Every wooden house was demolished for firing last winter, and such masonry as there was in those houses remains in ruinous gaps between the houses of stone. Every one is shabby and every one seems to be carrying bundles in both St. Petersburg and Moscow. To walk into some side streets in the twilight and see nothing but ill-clad figures, all hurrying and all carrying loads, gives one an impression as though the entire population was setting out in flight.

That impression is not altogether misleading. Bolshevist statistics I have seen are perfectly frank and honest in the matter.

These bundles that every one carries are partly rations of food that are doled out by the soviet organization. Partly they are materials and the results of illicit trade. The Russian population has always been a trading and bargaining population. Even in 1914 there were but few shops in St. Petersburg whose prices were really fixed prices. Tariffs were abominated in Moscow. Taking a droshky meant always a haggle, ten kopecks at a time.

Confronted with a shortage of nearly every commodity, a shortage caused partly by the war strain—for Russia has been at war continuously now for six years—partly by the general collapse of social organization and partly by the blockade, and with currency in complete disorder, the only possible way to save towns from the chaos of cornering, profiteering, starvation and at last a mere savage fight for the remnants of food and common necessities, was some sort of collective control and rationing.

The soviet government rations on principle, but any government in Russia now would have to ration. If the war in the west had lasted up to the present time London would be rationing, too, food, clothing and housing.

Profiteers Shot When Detected.

But in Russia this has to be done on the basis of uncontrollable peasant production, with a population temperamentally undisciplined and self-indulgent. The struggle is necessarily a bitter one. The detected profiteer, the genuine profiteer who profiteers on any considerable scale, gets a short shrift—he is shot.

Quite ordinary trading may be punished severely. All trading is called speculation and is now illegal, but queer street corner trading in food, etc., is winked at in Petrograd and quite openly practiced in Moscow, because only by permitting this can the peasants be induced to bring in food.

There is also much underground trade between buyers and sellers who know each other. Every one who can supplements his public rations in this way, and every railway station at which one stops is an open market. We would find a crowd of peasants at every stopping place waiting to sell milk, eggs, apples, bread, etc. Peasants clamber down and accumulate bundles. An egg or an apple costs 300 rubles.

The peasants look well fed and I doubt if they are much worse off than they were in 1914. Probably they are better off. They have more land than they had and they have got rid of their landlords. They will not help in any attempt to overthrow the soviet government because they are convinced that while it endures this state of things will continue.

But every class above the peasants, including the official class, is now in a state of extreme privation. The credit and industrial system that produced commodities has broken down, and so far attempts to replace it by some other form of production have been ineffective, so that nowhere are there any new things. About the only things that seem to be fairly well supplied are tea, cigarets, and matches. These are more abundant in Russia than they were in England in 1917, and the soviet state match is quite a good match. But such things as collars, ties, shoe laces, sheets and blankets, spoons and forks, all haberdashery and crockery and the like are unobtainable. There is no replacing a broken cup or glass except by sedulous search and illegal trading. From Petrograd to Moscow we were accommodated with a sleeping car de luxe, but there were no water bottles, glasses, or indeed any loose fittings. They have all gone.

Drugs and Medicines Lacking.

Drugs and any medicines are equally unobtainable. There is nothing to take for a cold or headache, no packing off to bed with a hot water bottle. Small ailments develop very easily, therefore, into serious trouble. Nearly everybody we met struck us as being uncomfortable and a little out of health. A buoyant, healthy person is rare in this atmosphere of discomforts and petty deficiencies. If any one falls into real illness the outlook is grim indeed.

My son paid a visit to the big Obuchovskaya hospital, and he tells me things were miserable there indeed.

Hardly any one in Petrograd has much more than a change of raiment, and in the great city, in which there remains no means of communication but a few overcrowded tramcars, old, leaky, and ill fitting boots are the only footwear.

At times one sees astonishing makeshifts in the way of costumes. The master of a school to which we paid a surprise visit struck me as unusually dapper. He was wearing a dinner suit with a blue serge waistcoat. Several of the distinguished scientific and literary men I met had no collars and wore neck wraps. Gorky possesses only one suit of clothes he wears at gatherings of literary people in Petrograd.

Great Lack of Food.

The population in this dismantled and ruinous city is, in spite of all the furtive trading that goes on, appallingly underfed. With the best will in the world the soviet government is unable to produce sufficient rations to sustain healthy life.

I went to a district kitchen and saw the normal food distribution going on. The place seemed to us fairly clean and fairly well run, but that does not compensate for lack of material. The lowest grade ration consisted of a basinful of thin skilly and about the same quantity of stewed apple compot.

The people have bread cards and wait in cues for bread, but for three days the St. Petersburg bakeries stopped for lack of flour. The bread varies greatly in quality. Some was good, coarse brown bread, and some I found damp, claylike, and uneatable.

I do not know how far these disconnected details will suffice to give the western reader an idea of what ordinary life in St. Petersburg is at the present time. Moscow, they say, is more overcrowded and shorter of fuel than St. Petersburg, but superficially it looked far less grim than St. Petersburg.

We saw these things in October, in a particularly fine and warm October. We saw them in sunshine, in a setting of ruddy and golden foliage. It was still glorious sunshine when we left Russia, but when I think of coming winter my heart sinks.

The soviet government, in the commune of the north, has made extraordinary efforts to prepare for the time of need. There are piles of wood along the quays, along the middle of the main streets, in courtyards, and everywhere where wood can be piled.

The railways are now in an extreme state of deterioration. The wood stoked engines are wearing out. Bolts start and rails shift as the trains rumble along at a maximum of twenty-five miles per hour. Even were the railways more efficient Wrangel has now hold of the southern food supplies. Soon cold rain will be falling upon these 700,000 souls still left in St. Petersburg and then snow. The long nights extend and daylight dwindles.

Doubts It Is Result of Red Rule.

And this spectacle of misery and ebbing energy is, you will say, the result of bolshevist rule. I do not believe it is. I will deal with the bolshevist government when I have painted the general scenery of our problem. But let me say here that this desolate Russia is not a system that has been attacked and destroyed by something vigorous and malignant. It is an unsound system that has worked itself out and fallen down.

It was not communism which built up these great impossible cities, but capitalism. It was not communism that plunged this huge creaking bankrupt empire into six years of exhausting war, it was European imperialism. Nor is it communism that has pestered this suffering and perhaps dying Russia with a series of subsidized raids, invasions and insurrections, and inflicted upon it the atrocious blockade. The vindictive French creditor and the journalistic British oaf are far more responsible for these deathbed miseries than any communist.

But to these questions I will return after I have given a little more description of Russia as we saw it during our visit. It is only when one has some conception of the physical and mental realities of the Russian collapse that we can see and estimate the bolshevist government in its proportions.

"LITTLE MOTHER OF MARINES," MRS. FERNALD, IS DEAD

MRS. BESSIE SWIFT FERNALD.

Mrs. Bessie Swift Fernald, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis F. Swift of Lake Forest, died suddenly Friday night at Mercy hospital, London, England. Death was the result of double pneumonia after an illness of only thirty-six hours. Mrs. Fernald was visiting London friends, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Hall, at the time of her illness.

Early in the world war Mrs. Fernald became an active figure in the work of the American Fund for French Wounded, assisting Mrs. Russell Tyson in Chicago for a time and later going to France for the fund. When the United States entered the war Mrs. Fernald opened a canteen for United States marines. She worked among the sick and wounded soldiers and was in the danger zone many times. On account of her services with the corps she was called "the little mother of the marines."

Mrs. Fernald continued in hospital work after the armistice until her return to this country in April, 1919. She was 37 years old and was born in Chicago.

Women Paid Better than Men in Stone Age, He Says

There were women bookkeepers in the paleolithic age and they were far more efficient and received more pay than their male co-workers, according to Col. J. P. Avers, historian and explorer. Col. Ayers spoke yesterday at the regular meeting of high school principals and first assistants in Fullerton hall, Art institute.

BOYS FORM "BIKE" THEFT RING.

Laporte, Ind., Nov. 6.—[Special.]—Five boys, all under 15, rented a room and started a repair shop here. Police raided the place yesterday and found several stolen bicycles torn up and repainted. The boys all are under arrest.

WHY IMMIGRANTS TURN "RED"; FIND U. S. NO PARADISE

Much Americanization work has been a failure because of the uncongenial surroundings of the foreign born, according to Dr. Raymond Moley, director of the Cleveland Foundation, who spoke at the City club yesterday. Disappointment over the fact that immigrants find the cities of th United States to be composed of grimy houses and dirty streets instead of avenues paved with gold was another reason given for discontent and trend toward radicalism.

"The consciousness that, because of differences in languages and appearance, he is a victim of discrimination and injustice is one of the first thoughts with which an immigrant is imbued," said Dr. Moley. "Lack of moral family life, caused by prolonged separation from the wife and children, is another important factor which makes Reds."

He declared the immigrants' pride is easily offended; they fear ridicule over speaking a foreign language or wearing dark, heavy clothes."

Patients in War Hospital Watch Firemen at Work

Patients on the third floor of the United States Public Health hospital at East Forty-seventh street and Drexel avenue, watched firemen yesterday morning extinguish a fire in a room on the third floor of a brick building 300 feet away from the hospital proper, occupied by men employés of the hospital. Carman J. Kellaso, who was sleeping in a room on the third floor, was overcome by the smoke.

BLANTON FIGHTS U.S. NAVY TOUR AROUND WORLD

Texan Writes Daniels It's Unwise Expenditure.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 6.—[Special.]—A protest against the plan of Secretary of the Navy Daniels to send the navy on a tour around the world next June was made by Representative Blanton, of Texas, a Democrat, in a letter today to the secretary.

"As one humble representative of the people I hereby protest against this proposed junketing trip," said Representative Blanton.

"Admiral Coontz advised me that he expects to defray the expenses out of the general blanket appropriations. Congress has not authorized any such trip. In none of the appropriations made did congress even contemplate such a trip. It is my belief that congress will not authorize it. As one humble member I shall vote and vigorously fight against any appropriation proposed to pay for it. It is simply ridiculous.

Fuel Shortage One Reason.

"Naval statistics show that it would require at least 70 per cent more coal and oil than ordinary to run these two fleets on such a cruise. Considering the present fuel situation, aside from the enormous expense, which should not now be incurred, it would be almost criminal just now to wast the hundreds of thousands of gallons of oil and tons of coal necessary to operate our two big fleets on such a jaunt.

"There are now several thousand households in Washington absolutely without coal, even when love and money will not procure it, and we are now threatened with the price of coal going to $20 a ton. A serious shortage of gasoline is also threatened, with the price in some communities ranging now as high as 40 cents per gallon. Both England and France have been depending largely upon us for coal. Shipping has been retarded in many ports for lack of coal.

Means Added Taxation.

"Our people are already tax burdened. There is but one way to reduce taxes. We must quit spending. Our government has no money except that it takes from the people. As you well know every time we spend public money our only way of providing it is to take it out of the pockets of the people in taxation. It matters not whether it is taken directly or indirectly after all it comes from the people. The people of the United States who foot the bills have become tired of the waste and extravagance daily prevalent here in Washington.

"Last Tuesday's election was not a repudiation of Democracy, or of a league of nations, but it was a repudiation of wanton extravagance, high taxes and lawless anarchy permitted by congress and for which Republicans are fully as much if not more to blame, though the people have held us Democrats responsible for it."

Churches to Celebrate Armistice Day Today

Armistice day will be celebrated in churches throughout the city today and in all hospitals where wounded war heroes are confined. The arrangements were announced yesterday by George W. Dixon, a member of the Armistice Day Civic committee.

Special military masses will be held in Catholic churches. Women's clubs and civic organizations will distribute fruits and flowers to wounded and sick service men in all hospitals in and near Chicago. The work has been carried on by the various committees under the direction of Mrs. W. H. Winslow.

PALMER NAMES AMES TO ATTEND COAL HEARING

Will Go to Indianapolis Tomorrow.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 6.—Attorney General Palmer announced tonight that the department of justice would be represented by C. B. Ames, former assistant to the attorney general, at the inquiry Monday at Indianapolis by Federal Judge Anderson into the attorney general's connection with the soft coal cases.

The announcement followed a conference between Mr. Palmer and members of his staff which lasted all afternoon and at which all data bearing on the coal cases were reviewed.

The government is prepared, Mr. Palmer said, to proceed with the prosecution of the cases now pending before Judge Anderson. He made no direct reference, however, to Judge Anderson's proposed inquiry, although the department's interest in the affair will be taken care of by Mr. Ames.

Follows Simms' Resignation.

It was in connection with the conspiracy cases, which are set for trial Monday, and the resignation of Dan W. Simms, special prosecutor, that Judge Anderson determined to institute an investigation of reasons for the alleged "suppression" of evidence which the government had against the defendants.

Mr. Palmer has stated on several occasions that he had instructed federal attorneys in the coal cases not to use the evidence against the defendants which was used against them in the injunction proceedings during the bituminous strike last winter.

Those at Conference.

Attending the conference with Mr. Palmer today were Mr. Ames, Henry S. Mitchell, assistant in charge of the coal cases here; L. Ert Slack, special prosecutor, and Frederick Van Nuys, also a government attorney in the coal cases.

Officials at the department denied that the two special prosecutors had been called because of the inquiry proposed by Judge Anderson. It was stated emphatically that the conference had been planned several weeks prior to the announcement by Judge Anderson of his intention to investigate the alleged suppression of evidence.

Woman, Held as Aid of Cabaret Robbers, Freed

The case of Lillian Russell, 22 years old, 3663 Pine Grove avenue, a beauty specialist, was dismissed yesterday by Judge Prindiville for want of prosecution. Miss Russell was arrested Oct. 19 on a charge of acbessory to robbery. The complainants in the case, Irwin Dube, 2957 Alice place, and John Broder, 1956 Evergreen avenue, failed to appear in court. On Oct. 4, Dube and Broder said, they met two girls in the lobby of the Morrison hotel. While on a cabaret tour they were held up.

$1000.00 in Prizes

For the Best Title to this Picture

By Charles Dana Gibson

YES, one thousand dollars given away—1st prize, $500.00; 2nd prize, $300.00; 3rd, $200.00—and the best part of it is that every one has an equal chance. Democrat or Republican, pro or anti, married or single—it doesn't make a bit of difference. Perhaps you have never even seen LIFE—no matter, this is for everybody.

For twenty-two years readers of LIFE have been winning prizes by giving titles for pictures. And they've had so much fun out of it, in addition to the money they've received, that this time it has been decided to let the other people who haven't yet had any fun out of LIFE try a hand.

Think of it! $500.00 in cold cash for writing from one to ten words. Isn't it worth trying? An idea you already have in mind may be the very one that will strike the judges as being the best. Even if you get the smallest prize offered—that alone amounts to $200.00.

Rules of Contest

All that is necessary is to send in your titles before the closing date. The titles are limited to ten words—but if you can put your title in five or even three words, do so. Brevity is usually the soul of wit. Titles may be originals or quotations.

Perhaps you will be the winner in this $1000.00 contest. Mail the coupon now—this offer may be withdrawn at any moment.

Send in as many titles as you want. Send in the first one that occurs to you now. Later you can send in others. Jot down your title or titles on any sheet of paper, sign your name and mail to the Contest Editor of LIFE.

Help Mr. Gibson

For the best titles to the above picture Life will award prizes as follows:

First Prize	$500.00
(also the original of the drawing autographed by Mr. Gibson)
Second Prize	$300.00
Third Prize	$200.00

The final award will be announced in LIFE as early as possible after the close of the contest. Checks will be sent simultaneously with the announcement. In case of ties, $500 ($300 or $200) will be awarded each winning contestant.

The contest is now open. It will close at noon on November 30th, 1920. Remember, all you have to do is to write your title on a piece of paper, sign your name and address and mail it to Contest Editor of LIFE, Dept. 110, Box 262, G. P. O., New York, N. Y. Send in a title today—then others, if you think of better ones.

Money Saving Offer

Of course you know LIFE, the sprightly weekly magazine of fun with its many pages of brilliant humor and satire in picture and text—the magazine which has dominated black and white pictorial art in America. LIFE has more regularly contributing artists than any other paper in the world. It is the only magazine to whom Charles Dana Gibson, America's greatest black and white artist, contributes.

To enter this LIFE Contest, you have no entrance fee to pay whatsoever. And LIFE will co-operate with you in making it easy for you to land one of these big prizes by reprinting in its pages in the next few issues the pictures and winning titles of previous contests, besides the present contest picture will be reproduced in a way that will show up the details and facial expressions much better than can a newspaper cut.

You can buy LIFE at your newsstand, 15 cents a copy, but in order to be sure of getting it weekly—if your dealer is sold out—you can accept this special offer and save money at the same time.

Just mail the coupon below, enclosing a single dollar bill, and you will receive the next twelve issues, which also includes the 25c Christmas number. This means that you get $1.90 worth of LIFE for only one dollar.

U. S. WILL INSIST ON OPEN DOOR IN TURKISH POLICY

State Department Studies Carving Up of Empire.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 6.—While no protest has been made thus far by the state department against the tripartite agreement by French, Great Britain, and Italy, defining spheres of influence in Turkey, officials stated today that this did not mean that no objection would be made against any provision viewed as contravening an open door policy in Turkey.

The open door principle was insisted upon by the United States in the Turkish settlement, it was said, when President Wilson was asked in March by France for his views on the tentative draft of the Turkish treaty.

The American note of March 24 said: "It is the understanding of the government of the United States that whatever territorial changes or arrangements may be made in the former Ottoman empire, such changes or arrangements will in no way place American citizens or corporations of any other country in a less favorable situation that the citizens or corporations of any power party to this treaty."

See Open Door Upheld.

In some quarters it was contended today that the second paragraph of Article II. of the tripartite agreement did violate this principle of excluding from the particular spheres of influence reserved for each of the three powers the nations of the other two contracting parties.

The paragraph in question reads: "The contracting powers undertake not to apply, nor to make or support applications on behalf of their citizens, for industrial or commercial concessions in an area in which the special interests of one of the said powers are recognized, except in cases where such power declines or is unable to take advantage of its special position."

Another—Article X.

Although the cabled summary showed Article X. of the agreement to provide against any prejudice to the rights of nationals of non-signatory states to free access for commercial and economic purposes, the full text of the article, according to some officials, may be construed otherwise. It reads:

"Nothing in this agreement shall prejudice the right of citizens of third states to free access for commercial and economic purposes to any of the areas defined in Article V., subject to the reservations contained in the treaty of peace with Turkey, or which have been voluntarily accepted for themselves in the present agreement by the contracting powers.

"This latter clause, it was stated today, was capable of being construed as in effect nullifying the previous declaration of equal opportunity to all nations."

East Chicago Opens New $500,000 Filtration Plant

East Chicago's new filtration plant, constructed at a cost of more than $500,000, at the Indiana Harbor lake front, was placed in operation yesterday morning. The plant, with a capacity of 8,000,000 gallons daily, is the city's first step toward better and safer drinking water.

REMARRIED

Memories of Happy Days Lead to New Days of Happiness.

NEIL W. BLUE.

ELIZABETH BLUE.

EVELYN BLUE.

MEMORIES bridged the miles that separated Mr. and Mrs. Neil W. Blue and thoughts of their two little daughters, Evelyn and Elizabeth, brought regrets for the decree of divorce obtained in a Chicago court. Mr. Blue was in Omaha, Neb., where he went last June following a quarrel over things that now appear but trifles. Mrs. Blue was with her children at their home, 733 Briar place.

Then a week ago Friday telegraph wires carried the husband the news that his wife had been granted a divorce. He hopped aboard the next train for Chicago. On Friday he and Mrs. Blue were quietly remarried exactly one week after the divorce had been granted.

They were married twelve years ago in Bardstown, Ky., the little town in which Stephen Foster wrote "My Old Kentucky Home."

PLAN NEW CURB ON VACANT LOT REFUSE DUMPING

An amendment to the city sanitary code, which would permit citizens to hold their alderman responsible for unsightly or insanitary conditions caused by the dumping of refuse in vacant lots, will be proposed at Wednesday's council meeting by Ald. George M. Maypole.

The amendment will prohibit all dumping on vacant lots without permission of an alderman of the ward affected.

"At present permits from the health department can be had for the asking," Ald. Maypole said. "Dirt and refuse are dumped above the grade line, causing water to overflow on adjoining property. The dumping of plaster and ill smelling refuse in many cases is an offense to the eyes and noses of the neighborhood."

If permits were obtainable only with an aldermanic O. K., contracting firms could be forced to live up to the sanitary ordinances or be refused the right to dump refuse in wards where they have failed to obey the law, Ald. Maypole declares.

YANKS ACCUSED OF TERRORIZING TOWNS ON RHINE

Berlin Is Urged to Appeal to U. S.

BY CARL D. GROAT.

[United News Staff Correspondent.]

BERLIN, Nov. 6.—Johannes Bell, former minister of transportation, addressing the reichstag today, charged American troops in the Rhine zone with drunkenness, immorality, and destruction of property.

He described the situation as "unbearable," and demanded that the government appeal to Washington or notify the American representative here, saying he believed the American people were not aware of conditions in the army of occupation, and that they would not tolerate them if they knew of them.

Says Yanks Attack Girls.

According to Bell, American soldiers have assaulted German girls, terrorized villages while drunk, and have occupied houses without authority, practically reducing them to ruin.

Bernard Dernburg, former chancellor, told the reichstag that Germany should immediately demand revision of the treaty of Versailles for "economic, humane, and just reasons." He suggested that the league of nations ought to undertake such revision.

Disagrees with Simons.

The treaty, Dernburg declared, was not based on the "fourteen points," as promised, and that Germany thus was justified in demanding its alteration. Further, he said, alteration was justified under the clause of the treaty itself permitting revisions.

Board of Trade Hears Violinist of War Fame

The smoking room of the Board of Trade was transformed to a concert hall for a half hour yesterday when Victor Young, violin virtuoso, who played his way from prison camps of the bolshevik and the Germans, gave a recital under the auspices of the Board of Trade post No. 304 of the American Legion. Young was born in the heart of Chicago's ghetto, but spent most of his boyhood in Warsaw, Kiev, and other European cities, studying the violin.

"PEEPING TOM" FINED.

Justice J. F. Boyer imposed a $75 fine yesterday upon Erwin Meyers, 24 years old, who was arrested Friday night by the Evanston police for alleged "peeping Tom" activities. Meyers was arrested by Policeman Frederick Albright, who caught him peeping under a curtain on the first floor of Pearson's hall, a Northwestern university dormitory and the home of 400 co-eds.

UNIQUE NORTH SIDE PLAN TO AID NEW POLICLINIC

Mrs. A. F. Stevenson Jr. inaugurating new scheme to raise funds for Chicago Policlinic witth merchants' co-operation.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Seventeen girls of the Three Arts club have inaugurated a plan of seeking contributions to the $1,000,000 building fund of the new Chicago Policlinic and Hospital by which not only the well-to-do, but also the bulk of the city's population may have the privilege of helping the great health center.

Under the direction of Mrs. A. F. Stevenson Jr., 1510 Dearborn parkway, wife of one of the leaders of the medical section of the drive, the north side district bounded by Wells street, the Lake Shore drive, Chicago and North avenues will be canvassed by the girls.

The plan is to ask business men in that district to subscribe and to take subscriptions from their customers.

Those who agree will be given posters to display, on which will be given the names of all local merchants and citizens who support the drive.

"MILLION" DRIVE FOR POLICLINIC OPENS TOMORROW

With speakers of note, singers, and players, the Chicago Policlinic and Hospital will open its million dollar drive for the building fund of its new community health center tomorrow night at 8 o'clock in the ballroom of the Hotel La Salle. It will be the signal for 1,500 workers to start their campaign, which will continue for two weeks, during which time every one in the city will be given the opportunity to answer the appeal of the Chicago Policlinic doctors and nurses who for thirty-four years have given their services to the needy sick of the city.

This is the first appeal of the Chicago Policlinic since it was founded in 1886. It asks now for 1,000,000 dollars to meet the increased needs of a city that has trebled its population during the life of the Policlinic. The community health center not only will give greater care to the needy sick and provide more nurses, both in the hospital and the out department, but by its educational and follow up departments will prevent much of the illness and suffering that now prevail.

Gen. Leonard Wood and the Rev. John Timothy Stone will be among the speakers Monday night, and among the singers will be Mrs. Charles M. Robertson and Miss Olga Menn.

Fourteen Indictments for Alabama "Night Riders"

Montgomery, Ala., Nov. 6.—Fourteen indictments alleging participation in the burning of three residences, two gins, and a number of Negro churches last Saturday and Sunday nights, were returned today by the Montgomery county grand jury. Three Negroes were killed in fights with officers in disturbances following the fires.

GOMPERS TELLS LABOR REACTION IS IN THE SADDLE

New York, Nov. 6.—Samuel Gompers, in presenting an American Federation of Labor charter to the newly organized Central Trades and Labor council of Greater New York this afternoon, exhorted members to conduct themselves in a manner befitting the high standards of organized labor.

Mr. Gompers asserted "reaction has jumped into the saddle" and that he believed an organized movement is on foot by big business to undermine labor. "It has never been so essential as now for unorganized labor to rally to the cause of unionism," he said.

"We must be clean and honest," he added, "so that no finger of suspicion may be pointed at us."

James Dorsey, the Cattle Man, Applies for Parole

Among the 150 applications for parole being considered by the parole board of the Leavenworth federal prison is that of James Dorsey, wealthy Kane county live stock man, convicted in 1919 at Chicago on a charge of selling diseased cattle. He was sentenced to eight years by Judge K. M. Landis. Last July Dorsey's sentence was commuted to four years by President Wilson. The news stirred the wrath of the judge.

"The man was sent to the penitentiary by some oversight, I suppose," Judge Landis said. "Then the president paused in his great affairs and cut the sentence in two. I suppose Dorsey is due for a pardon now, but I wonder what frame of mind a man must be in to pardon a criminal like Dorsey."

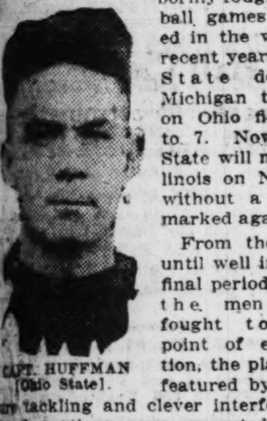
ILLINOIS FIELD GOAL BEATS MAROONS

BLOCKED PUNT BY OHIO STATE BEATS YOSTMEN

Break in Closing Period Decides 14-7 Battle.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Columbus, O., Nov. 6.—[Special.]—In one of the hardest and most stubbornly fought football games decided in the west in recent years, Ohio State defeated Michigan today on Ohio field, 14 to 7. Now Ohio State will meet Illinois on Nov. 20 without a defeat marked against it.



CAPT. HUFFMAN [Ohio State].

From the start until well into the final period, when the men had fought to the point of exhaustion, the play was featured by hard, sure tackling and clever interference. The formations were executed in a manner which plainly showed the coaches had perfected their attack.

Not alone was the offense featured by sparkling plays, but the defense was as stubborn as any seen in a long time. Ohio held Michigan for downs within its five yard line, while the Wolverines stopped the Buckeyes' attack whenever it threatened seriously.

Michigan Scores First.

Michigan was the first to score in this great battle, which sent away ,000 homecomg fans rejoicing d confident that ach Wilce and warriors will ..the confere title. Neither en had scored the opening pe. In the sec quarter Cap of Michigan epted a forass in midand ran to hio three e. The rines did have the , and the ent to the local eleven.

GALE "PETE" STINCHCOMB.

Michigan, however, was not to be . H. Workman punted from bed his own goal to Dunn, who signaled for a fair catch. Trott apparently did not heed the fair catch signal, and tackled the Wolverine quarter iciously. As a result Michigan was given fifteen yards, and then the Yosts made a successful assault on the Buckeye goal.

The penalty left the oval on Ohio's eighteen yard line. The Michigan backs on split bucks and drives off the tackles gradually carried the ball inside State's five yard mark. It took the best Michigan could produce, but on the fourth down Quarter Back Dunn squirmed between Vick's legs for the touchdown. The ball just rested on the chalk mark. Steketee kicked the goal.

Long Pass Gives Ohio Score.

Michigan then was compelled to pay for the score. Coach Wilce sent Pete Stinchcomb into the fray, and the local team improved at least 50 per cent immediately. After an exchange of punts left the oval in midfield, H. Workman tossed a long forward pass to his brother Noel, who was stopped only on the Wolverine three yard line.

At this point Michigan displayed a great defense. Three assaults at the line left the ball on the one foot line, but on the next attempt Stinchcomb drove straight through center for Ohio's first score. H. Workman kicked goal, and the score was a tie. Time for the half was called soon afterward.

Blocked Punt Decides Battle.

Just as it looked as if the game would result in a tie, although Michigan was being forced into its own territory, Capt. Huffman tore through and blocked one of Steketee's punts back of the goal line, then fell on the ball for the second Ohio touchdown. Stinchcomb kicked goal, making the 14 to 7 score which decided the combat. This score took place on the first play of the fourth period.

It was a great battle from every football standpoint. Ohio showed to better advantage in the forward pass attack while the defense of both elevens hardly could have been improved upon. Michigan used runs from punt formation for most of its gains. The Buckeyes presented a varied attack. On one play especially Stinchcomb was sneaked away repeatedly between his left guard and tackle.

Workman Needs Work.

H. Workman appears to be a good quarter back, but he had not the experience to make him a valuable man in the position. His generalship was questioned repeatedly by other members of the team, and when Stinchcomb entered the fray the former quarter back corrected Workman repeatedly.

Workman, however, will be a valuable player next year. In the third period he received a bad cut over his left eye as a result of falling on a Michigan player's heels. He will need the two weeks intervening to be ready for the Illinois game.

Huffman in Every Play.

Capt. Huffman and Taylor, the guard, played impressive football. The former especially was in every play and followed the ball with unerring accuracy. But the real player of the Ohio eleven is Stinchcomb. There is

PURPLE HANDED 20 TO 0 DEFEAT BY IOWA ELEVEN

Iowa City, Ia., Nov. 6.—[Special.]—Iowa defeated Northwestern today on Iowa field, 20 to 0. The battle was fought on a rain soaked field.

Iowa's line battered the Northwestern defense, and the back field, led by the brilliant Aubrey Devine, ran over the visitors. Devine scored a touchdown and piloted the team faultlessly.

AUBREY DEVINE [Iowa].

Rain poured down throughout the contest, the conditions holding the attendance to less than 5,000. Toward the end Coach Jones sent substitutes into the fray after it was evident the Hawkeyes were sure of winning.

Purple Defense Battered.

Northwestern was unable to withstand the powerful Iowa defense, and the game was only half over when Coach McDevitt was forced to inject new men into his lineup. The last quarter saw Iowa with seven second string men in thel ineup, an dthese men played the Purple off their feet.

Locke plunged through the line, shook off several men and raced thirty-five yards for the first touchdown in the first period. Aubrey Devine kicked goal, and the first quarter ended, 7 to 0.

Punting duels marked the scoreless second section and the half ended with only the one touchdown.

Two Touchdowns.

Aubrey Devine drove off tackle in the third quarter for another touchdown. This time his kick went wide. Jaqua went over for the third touchdown after line plunges by Shuttleworth, G. Devine and Jaqua had carried the oval to the one yard line. Devine kicked goal this time and it was Iowa, 20; Northwestern, 0.

Shuttleworth, who was put in for Rath, plunged for long gains, and Jaqua hit the purple line for gains of ten and fifteen yards. For the greater part of the combat Iowa had the ball, and with a good lead Devine played safe and kicked frequently. Iowa lost a chance to score when Devine threw a pass over the line, hitting the upright. Locke tore off one thirty-five yard run in the third quarter. Aubrey Devine's end runs and Glenn Devine's short charges through the line featured the attack of the Hawkeyes.

Stars of Battle.

For Iowa the entire team played good football, but two who displayed the most brilliancy were Aubrey Devine and Lester Belding.

PRINCETON TIES HARVARD IN DAY OF MANY THRILLS

Surprised Crimson Just Does Get Draw, 14-14.

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 6.—[Special.]—The sun went down today on a Harvard eleven struggling gamely but apparently hopelessly to avert defeat. But Harvard's Herculean effort wrenched from the Princeton clan a victory that seemed already gained, and converted the annual struggle into a drawn battle at 14 points each.

DON LOURIE [Princeton].

It was a crushing blow to the Princetonians, who had flocked to the stadium from New Jersey's far plains in hundreds to support by their presence and by loyal outcries what predictions had made a lost cause. That lost cause had been transformed before their glowing eyes into a winning one by a Tiger team that fought gloriously.

A Day of Upsets.

If an inspired football prophet had stood in Harvard square this morning and told the undergraduates through a megaphone that they would not only see a drawn game but would greet that consummation with a tidal roar of glee and would flock from the grounds aglow with happiness because the Tigers had been held even, that prophet would have been without honor in one minute and without his megaphone the next minute.

GEORGE OWEN [Harvard].

The Crimson machine got under way in a hurry and ripped its way to a touchdown within six minutes after the opening whistle. That touchdown, with its attendant goal, proved to be the only scoring in the entire first half. The Princeton line stiffened a bit in the second quarter, although the Crimson was consistently upon the aggressive.

Tigers Come to Life.

An altogether renovated Princeton eleven galloped onto the field for the second half. It had everything—speed, power, accuracy, and a forward passing game that was flexible and effective.

The first Princeton score was the outcome of a thrilling forward pass by Murrey into the outstretched arms of Lourie, waiting, with steam up, thirty yards nearer the Harvard goal. Lourie dashed about twenty yards for the touchdown, evading Fitzgerald, the only Harvard player who got near enough to essay a tackle. Keck kicked an easy goal.

The third quarter ended with the score still tied and yet Harvard looked practically beaten as the whistle blew. The ball was on her three yard line by virtue of a great play by Keck, who broke through and blocked a punt by Owen. The ball rebounded from the massive frame of the Tiger tackle and rolled far toward the Crimson line.

Legendre Recovers Ball.

The speedy Legendre, profiting by clever interference, fell upon the precious leather only forty-eight inches from the line. A foot more was gained by a line play, then the whistle blew.

Garrity's opening plunge in the last quarter put the ball within six inches of the line. He took the ball again on the next play and fairly dove over the right side of Harvard's line for the touchdown that seemed likely to spell victory. Keck kicked the goal.

The Princeton stand developed acute insanity. The Tiger rooters sank back in their seats in a glow of happiness. That 14 to 7 would do quite nicely.

Harvard Makes Last Stand.

Then the scene changed again. Harvard was hurling the ball a bit instead of carrying it all the time. This belated resort to the forward pass could not win the game, but it saved it. Buell, in Fitzgerald's post at quarter back, proved to be the medium, working with Fitts, Owen, and Macomber at the receiving end.

Three passes in succession, neatly completed for substantial gains, took the ball to Princeton's thirteen yard line. Then, from ordinary scrimmage formation, Buell dropped back slightly and shot the ball straight as an arrow into the arms of Macomber behind the Tigers' goal posts.

If there had been pandemonium when Princeton forged ahead, there are no words in the English language to describe the wild scene that swept the Harvard section at this juncture. Young Mr. Faxon obliged with a neat goal kick. That made 14 points apiece, and there the afternoon's harvest ended.

Garrity Sparkles Among Stars.

If one is seeking outstanding names, kindly lead with name of Garrity. The Tiger half back was a demon, and his twin imp was Lourie. For almost two full periods, with what assistance Keck, the mighty tackle, could afford them from his line position, they practically constituted the Princeton team,

THEY'RE ONLY BOYS.

DON'T we take our football a bit too seriously?

Those young fellows out there on the gridiron are boys ranging in age from 19 to 22 years. In the business world or any other line of endeavor they would be regarded as novices whose judgment on any question or policy would be subject to searching review in advance of its adoption.

Yet when a big football game arrives—with these boys keyed to their highest nervous pitch, often overanxious—we expect infallible judgment, perfect execution of plays with intricate formations, and absolute freedom from mechanical error in the performance of their respective duties on the field.

The average undergraduate or alumnus gives more attention to the players' achievements or failures than the average citizen does to the achievements or failures of our representatives at Washington.

Indeed, if a vote could be taken of undergrads and alumni concerning the retention of a football coach following an unsuccessful gridiron season the majority for repudiation would, in percentage of votes cast, make Harding's landslide look like an indorsement of the Wilson administration.

Don't we expect too much? Are we not unduly severe in our criticism for errors of judgment or execution which the perpetrators feel as keenly as, or more keenly than, the most rabid partisan?

So the next time we feel that some of our football heroes have failed to meet expectations or have fluked, let us make some allowance and remember that THEY'RE ONLY BOYS.

MARKET LETTER.

ACTION of the stock market during the week indicated that Harding's election had been anticipated, while a continuance of 9 and 10 per cent call money had not. Railroads carried the lead of resisting the bears, while industrials principally were in dust.

Mail order houses in their monthly reports showed a lack of female orders. Colder weather should prove a stimulus to buying.

There is one hopeful sign. Unemployment is coming to be regarded as something to be avoided rather than a privilege, and a willingness to give some return for wages is the result.

We are told Swift International, around 23 or 24, ought to be packed. There is still too much price alloy in some of the steels. Look out for Shaw Taxi in the next three or four weeks—dodge it on the street and hail it in the market.

While the immediate response may prove disappointing, we feel the advent of a change of administration eventually will be felt in the business world and on the stock exchange.

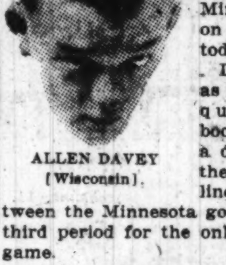
GOAL FROM FIELD BY BADGER SUB STOPS GOPHERS

Minneapolis, Minn., Nov. 6.—Wisconsin rooters paraded the streets of Minneapolis tonight, singing the name of Davey, hero of a 3 to 0 victory by the Badgers over the Minnesota eleven on Northrop field today.



ALLEN DAVEY [Wisconsin].

Davey, sent in as a substitute quarter back, booted the ball in a drop kick from the twenty yard line squarely between the Minnesota goal posts in the third period for the only point of the game.

In the eyes of Minnesota fans, however, another luminary gleams, for the redoubtable Arnold Oss, his leg crippled and his strength frequently exhausted, played through the game with outstanding brilliancy, much as the Oss of old.

Badgers' Passes Aid in Victory.

Play from punt formation, including darting forward passes, proved most successful in Wisconsin's attacks. Off tackle plunges or short end spurts, with Oss the most consistent gainer, were Minnesota's principal reliance.

The Badger line outcharged the Gophers in the first half, but a tightening of the defense in proximity to the goal kept the Cardinals from scoring a touchdown. Then, when Minnesota approached the visitors' goal, the process was reversed.

Wisconsin's forward passing efforts were fairly successful, nearly half of them being completed, one for a gain of twenty-eight yards and another for fifteen. Minnesota tried fewer passes, but broke almost even in percentage of these completed. One of the Gopher passes resulted in a twenty-five yard gain by Oss through a broken field.

22,000 See Struggle.

Almost devoid of penalties, the game thrilled the spectators with short, snappy gains interspersed with longer runs. Cloudy skies and a raw breeze chilled the 22,000 spectators, but were welcomed by the players.

Half Backs Williams and Elliott made many short gains for Wisconsin, with Full Back Sundt punting and line plunging well. Davey replaced Quarter Back Barr in the second period, and showed good generalship in addition to putting over the winning points. The entire Wisconsin line gave excellent support.

Besides Oss, Capt. Arntson, who got into the game in the third period; Brown, Regnier, McClintock, and Eckberg showed about on an equality on the offense, while on the defense Teberg and Tierney performed with flashes of brilliancy, and in the secondary defense Oss was again in the limelight. The Question.

Should college teams play football on Thanksgiving day?

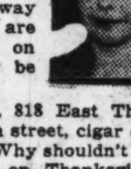
Dearborn and Adams streets.

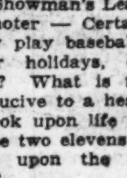
The Answers.

Anthony Fallgard, 433 South Honore street, salesman—Yes, I think college teams should play football on Thanksgiving day, because there are many football fans who work Saturday afternoons and who cannot attend games except on holidays.



Miss Maude Brattain, 4309 North Tripp avenue, collector—I should say not. College boys should be home with their parents on Thanksgiving day after being away to school. There are many other days on which games may be played.

George Ferguson, 818 East Thirty-ninth street, cigar dealer—Why shouldn't they play on Thanksgiving day? What's to hinder them? Why isn't that as good as any other day? Anyway, a good, hard game will give them a better appetite for turkey.



Fredericka E. Axt, 6422 Woodlawn avenue, telephone operator — Yes, they should play football on Thanksgiving. It is our national winter game and develops our American manhood better than any other pastime. We should encourage it in every way.

William Leipold, Showman's League, promoter — Certainly. They play baseball on other holidays, don't they? What is more conducive to a healthy outlook upon life than to see two elevens battling upon the gridiron?

RECORD CROWDS SEE DAY'S GRID BATTLES IN WEST AND EAST

COLLEGE football games have been drawing the biggest crowds in the history of the sport all autumn, but yesterday's attendance broke records at a number of cities. Attendance figures:

At Chicago—Illinois-Chicago game, 29,000.

At Cambridge—Harvard-Princeton game, 44,000.

At Columbus—Michigan-Ohio State game, 20,000.

BALL HITS BAR, TWISTS ACROSS FOR 3-0 VICTORY

Staggs Fight State Team to a Standstill.

BY ALBON HOLDEN.

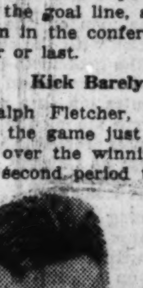
Bob Zuppke's University of Illinois Indians are still in the chase for the 1920 Big Ten football title. By the narrow margin of a field goal, and a lucky one at that, the 1919 champions kept their record immaculate.

RALPH FLETCHER [Illinois].

That Coach Stagg's riddled University of Chicago eleven was able to hold Illinois to a 3 to 0 margin was the real surprise of the day. With a patched backfield, only the most hopeful of Midway fans believed Chicago would put up any kind of a fight. The Maroons kept Illinois from crossing the goal line, something no other team in the conference had done this year or last.

Kick Barely Goes Over.

Ralph Fletcher, who was inserted into the game just at the right time, put over the winning score. Early in the second period the prancing Illini were deep in Maroon territory, and from the twenty-three yard line Zuppke's dependable little half back lifted the ball over with a placement boot, winning the game.



JACK CRANGLE [Illinois].

The kick was good only by inches. It struck the cross bar and squirted over. That was the only turn of the game that might be called a break. Had the ball bounced back, Zuppke's machine would have been forced to accept a scoreless tie.

Coach Stagg really accomplished marvels with his team in the five days of practice since its 7 to 6 defeat by Ohio State. It was not the same machine that crumbled before the Buckeyes in the crisis a week before. The Maroons were so keyed up they went on to the field so mad they were sullen. All morning long the "Old Man" talked to them, and they were so anxious to get into the fray that they sat with their teeth grinding for an hour in the dressing quarters before the game.

Maroons Play Great Game.

The Maroon line played great football. All fall the Midway fans have boasted that Stagg's wall was as good as any in the west, and every time the Indians got close enough to put over a touchdown, Chicago braced and smothered the attack. Stagg's men fought themselves nearly to exhaustion. Before the game was over McGuire, Redmon, Hinkle, and Halladay were forced out by injuries.

Often the Chicago forwards opened big holes in the Zuppke rush wall, but there was always one man to plug up the gap. That looming hulk was Jack Crangle, 195 pound full back, who did a hero's work on defense. Play after play he tore in to support his line, and it was almost rude the way he drove the heads of the Chicago boys into the turf when he laid his powerful hands upon them.

Crangle Almost Whole Show.

This same Jack Crangle looked to be about three-quarters of the Indians' attack. Taking the ball on one-third of the plays, he crashed under, over, and through the Chicago line. One man could never stop him; often it took two and three to stop his legs from driving. It was Crangle here and Crangle there, all afternoon. Without him Illinois would not have been nearly so powerful.

The forward pass attack of the Indians did not materialize according to predictions. Half Back Walquist threw the ball forward eighteen times and only four times was it captured by one of his mates.

Chicago tried ten passes and completed four, but Illinois did not have much to fear, for it was desperate Chicago passing when deep in her own territory in the final period that worked, and the Zuppke secondary defense dropped back to watch for long gains.

Some Great Tackling.

The tackling throughout the game was superb. Seldom have two teams meeting on Stagg field put up such an exhibition of low, sure, vicious work. Capt. Jackson, McGuire, Redmon, Lewis, and Hartong often broke through to smear plays before they were started.

The ends of both teams covered punts faultlessly. Tatge and Bob Fletcher were thrown so heavily in catching punts that the ball was jarred loose, but each time it was recovered. That happened to Fletcher twice.

Illinois had the better attack, and, while it was not good enough to cross Stagg's goal line, Zuppke's smooth machine had enough power, due largely to Crangle's terrific smashing and to the occasionally executed forward pass,

MAROON NOTES

NEVER before has such a crowd seen a game in Chicago. Over 29,000 were inside of Stagg field, fully 1,000 more than saw the Ohio State game last week. Every ticket was sold before Tuesday noon.

The Illini band, 100 strong, was one of the features of the spectacle, in flamboyant orange and blue uniforms and a big nine foot base drum.

Five thousand Illini and Illinois girls came up from Champaign and Urbana on several special trains to see the battle between the two rivals for the state championship.

Speculators sold tickets all morning on the Midway, getting as high as $10 premium for some of the best seats. Federal men covered the gates before the game, but did not arrest anybody.

Just as Ralph Fletcher scored his winning kick, an aeroplane flew over the field and flowers rained on the gridiron to advertise "Tell it in Flowers" week.

Just at the kickoff, the Chicago R. O. T. C. men fired off a salute with cannons. After that Illinois fired off its "Big Bertha," Jack Crangle, every minute or two.

Zuppke was fortunate in being able to go through the battle with twelve men. Illinois took time out on several occasions to talk things over, but did not have a man seriously hurt. Milt Olander, Illinois left tackle, played through the game with a big rubber and leather mask protecting his face.

Coach Zuppke, who does not believe that his football men should be numbered because possibly it aids scouts watching his team, was not much of a help to the fans watching the game. The Maroons wore numbers, as usual, although in past seasons when an opponent did not wear numbers, Stagg covered up his numerals.

to keep the ball away from its own territory most of the time.

With Walquist and the brothers Fletcher, Bob and Ralph, who have worked together for three seasons, the Indians showed fine running interference, and they gave Crangle good support.

Maroons Try New Tricks.

With his best backs hurt in previous games, Stagg tried to show a real attack, but the men he now has to build his plays around do not equal Cole and Crisler, his maimed stars. Chicago sprang some new stuff, hurriedly learned in three days, but it did not bother Illinois.

A shift with nine men on the line of scrimmage, a series with the center lifting the ball off the ground to hand it to the runner, and a new spread play with hurried concentration on a given point in the line were among the new formations, but Illinois seemed to know as much about them as Chicago.

Peden Makes Long Run.

There was nothing to choose between the two teams in the first ten minutes of play, with Hellstrom and Hanisch carrying on a punting duel. Suddenly Don Peden, "Zupp's" fleet sophomore back, executing a right oblique, broke off tackle and dashed fifty yards down the field, running clear of the Chicago secondary defense, but Strohmeier overtook him and brought him to earth on the eight yard line.

In three plays Illinois lost one yard, so Bob Fletcher tried a place kick from the eighteen yard line, but he missed by yards.

That left the ball in Chicago territory, and early in the second period the Indians worked down the sixteen yard line, where Chicago held. It was here that Ralph Fletcher, who had just been thrown into the game for the express purpose of a field goal, made good.

Staggs Stop Illini Passes.

Late in the second period Illinois recovered a Chicago fumble, and with Crangle grabbing a pass from Walquist, advanced to the twenty yard line, but here the Maroons smashed up more passes from Walquist. Twice in the third period Illinois approached scoring distance, but both times passes went astray and Chicago took the ball.

Again in the fourth period Illinois had an opening by blocking and recovering Hanisch's punt on the thirty yard line, but could make only six yards in four drives.

The last ten minutes was an orgy of intercepted passes, with Chicago growing desperate and Illinois taking chances in an effort to put over a touchdown. Finally the Indians came to the eight yard line on a pass, Walquist to Ralph Fletcher, and Chicago was penalized for offside. With first down on the three yard line, again the Indians were unable to shatter Chicago's heroic defense. Three quick thrusts did not gain an inch, and a forward pass went wild on fourth down.

Four Tosses Fail to Help.

With Strohmeier heaving, and Palmer, Neff and Hinkle on the receiving end, Chicago completed four passes in the last minutes, but could not make successive gains. Lineup:

RUNS BY DAVIES OF PITT DEFEAT PENNMEN, 27-21

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 6.—To the individual brilliance of Half Back Davies may be attributed largely the victory of the University of Pittsburgh over the University of Pennsylvania on Franklin field today, 27 to 21. Davies, receiving a kickoff in the second period, dashed through the entire Red and Blue team ninety yards for a touchdown. In another spectacular moment Davies intercepted a forward pass and dashed from midfield for a score. He scored twenty-one of Pittsburgh's points.

FIRE HOSE TURNED ON OVERFLOW GRID FANS; FIFTEEN ARRESTED

While the largest crowd in Chicago's football history saw the Maroon-Illinois game yesterday, not all the excitement was confined to Stagg field. There were thrills aplenty outside the stadium. It was estimated that more than 30,000 saw the game or part of it.

By the time the whistle for the first kickoff sounded every telephone pole, tree, window, and roof commanding a view of the field held its quota of spectators. Nearly 2,000 fans gained access to the roof of Hitchcock hall, the men's dormitory at Ellis avenue and Fifty-seventh street. They clung to fire escapes and window ledges. They shuffled about on the roof, kicking and breaking tiles and slates, until L. R. Flock, superintendent of grounds at the university, sent a call for the police.

Firemen Act Like Fans.

Detective Sergeant F. D. Corcoran and a squad of policemen were helpless. The fans jeered and booed them. Corcoran called the fire department and requested that streams of water be played upon the roof. The firemen at first refused, but sprinkled the fire escapes, forcing the drenched spectators to descend into the waiting arms of the law.

Two wagon loads were taken to Hyde Park station and fifteen men, including several University of Illinois students, were booked on charges of disorderly conduct. They later obtained their release on bonds. The roof finally was cleared after damage estimated at several hundred dollars had been caused.

Scalpers Elude Sleuths.

Ticket scalpers operated openly, selling the coveted pasteboards for $10, $15, and even $20, until a tip was received that six deputies from the internal revenue department, the same half dozen who conducted the White Sox park raids, were on their way to Stagg field. When the federal agents, acting under direction of Chief Field Deputy Thomas O'Brien, reached the scene the scalpers had closed up shop and no arrests were made.

M'MILLIN STARS IN CENTRE'S WIN

Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 6.—Excelling in the aerial attack and aided by the brilliant open field running of McMillin, Centre college defeated Depauw university, 24 to 0.

McMillin, in addition to plunging through the Depauw defense for two touchdowns, added six points by two drop kicks when the Indiana collegians held their goal line. He made another point by kicking a goal after touchdown.

Centre worked the forward pass successfully, bewildering the Depauw defense with a mixture of long and short passes. A crowd estimated at 17,000 saw the contest. Lineup:

both on the offense and the defense.

When things were going badly for the Orange and Black—and things were going badly for most of the first half—these men never weakened. They seemed to set their teeth and summon unflagging energy from the elements.

Capt. Callahan, too, did some excellent work for the Tigers until he was injured in the last quarter. He battled with the medical attendants when his removal was decreed, but was finally escorted to the side lines, giving way to Thomas.

Aside from Buell, whose great toss led to the tying points, Owen was the comet of the Crimson firmament. He was the real pillar of Harvard on the offense almost throughout the game. He did the punting after Capt. Arnold Horween was hurt in the first period, and also attended wonderfully well to whatever task loomed up as his.

Horween's injury was not serious enough to take him from the game, but it obviously slowed him up a good deal. Lineup:

BLOCKED PUNT GIVES OHIO STATE 14 TO 7 WIN OVER MICHIGAN

nothing about football, offensively or defensively, that this boy cannot do. He did miss a tackle today on the wings, but was swept aside by a powerful stiff arm.

Michigan put up a great battle, one of the kind characteristic of the old Wolverine elevens. The men fought with indomitable spirit despite unfortunate fumbles which placed them in holes on several occasions. Capt. Goetz played one of the best games of his career, as did Steeketee, Usher, and Nelson. In fact, the eleven appeared stronger defensively than offensively, with the exception of the time Ohio executed the Workman to Workman forward pass.

Ohio Could Be Improved.

Although Ohio was victor, improvement must be made if Illinois is to be beaten. At present Illinois has a better punter than Ohio, and the kicking game may play an important part in that contest. Illinois is better fortified in second string players than the Buckeyes, and in Ralph Fletcher has a better field goal kicker.

Coach Wilce is aware of these facts. He has the greatest respect for Coach Zuppke and the Illinois team, and he knows his team must show better offensive and defensive football on Nov. 20 than it displayed today. Considering the material on hand, the Buckeye mentor has done remarkably well. His backs are not of the type who can stand the wear and tear of many hard struggles.

His judgment in arranging this year's schedule has been vindicated. If another hard game were to be played next Saturday the local eleven would be in no condition for the battle and still would have the Illinois struggle to face.

Michigan was defeated, but came out with honors. The men played all the football they were capable of, and the narrow margin of defeat in this struggle and the one against Illinois has brought commendation from many of Michigan's football rivals. Lineup:

W. AND J. BOWS TO SYRACUSANS

Syracuse, N. Y., Nov. 6.—Crashing through the defense of Washington and Jefferson for no less than fifteen first downs, Syracuse defeated the Pennsylvanians, 14 to 0. Anderson, sturdy halfback of the Orange, went over the line for both touchdowns in the third period, Abbott following with successful goal kicks.

The victory for Syracuse avenged the only defeat which the Orange suffered last year.

GIPP AND PALS OF NOTRE DAME WRECK PURDUE

Notre Dame, Ind., Nov. 6.—[Special.]—Ten thousand fans, the largest football gathering ever at Cartier field, cheered wildly as George Gipp, Notre Dame's sensational half back, broke through the entire Purdue team for an eighty yard run and touchdown in the second quarter of today's game. Gipp's sprint featured the game, which was won by Notre Dame, 28 to 0.

Gipp's passing was phenomenal. Notre Dame gained 171 yards by the overhead route, most of the credit being due to this star.

Notre Dame used second and third string men much of the time. Coach Rockne starting a complete second string aggregation. The substitutes scored a touchdown in the second quarter when Castner passed to Grant, who ran forty yards for the score. The regular lineup was injected late in the same period, when Purdue rushed the ball to Notre Dame's twenty yard line. The visitors then were halted.

Gipp's great run occurred just before the second period ended. The third tally came early in the third quarter. The Notre Dame backs hitting Purdue for short gains until the ball was placed on the thirty yard line. Barry broke through tackle for twenty-five yards, but fumbled on the five yard line. T. E. Anderson of Notre Dame recovered the oval and dashed over the line. Gipp kicked goal.

NEBRASKA GIVEN 20 TO 0 DEFEAT AT PENN STATE

State College, Pa., Nov. 6.—[Special.]—The fast and heavy University of Nebraska eleven fell before Pennsylvania State college today, 20 to 0.

Charlie Way, playing his last game on the home gridiron, furnished the pickers of all-American players with material for discussion when he entered the game in the last quarter and at once tore off an off tackle run of fifty-five yards. A few minutes later Way squirmed through Nebraska's right tackle for fifty-seven yards, making State's second touchdown.

Nebraska twice had the ball within Penn State's five yard line, but lacked the necessary punch to score. State's line was featured by the all around play of Beck, Griffiths, and Rauch and passed all expectations, holding the Nebraska backs for no gain time after time.

Day and Hartley excelled for Nebraska and the playing of Haines and Killinger was fine. Lineup:

CROWD OF 35,000 SEES DARTMOUTH SUBDUE CORNELL

New York, Nov. 6—[Special.]—Gilmour Dobie's Cornell eleven fell before Dartmouth today at the Polo grounds, 14 to 3. Dartmouth won more easily than the score indicates, for it was a case of a highly trained band of lightweights knowing more football and using it against a great, husky machine which apparently has latent power, but misuses it.

The Polo grounds, accustomed to capacity crowds to welcome Babe Ruth, almost creaked when a horde of more than 35,000 jammed way inside.

Some Vital Statistics.

Cornell made only two first downs by rushing the ball, both in the second period. Cornell made seventeen punts to Dartmouth's eleven. Cornell had all the advantage in penalties, getting seventy-five yards in exchange and suffering no forfeiture whatever.

Dartmouth made eleven first downs by rushing the ball. Each eleven tried five passes. Two of Cornell's were intercepted, one was fumbled, one grounded, and one gained fourteen yards. Dartmouth worked one for an advance of twenty-three yards, and would have scored on another in the second period if Moore, left end, had not dropped the leather while behind Cornell's goal line.

Cornell Holds at Times.

Dartmouth was held for downs more than a half dozen times. In spots Cornell had a good defensive line, but a disappointing one when it came time for its backs to attempt to rush the ball.

VETERANS OF WAR BILL BOXING AS AID TO MEASURE

Chicago, Nov. 6.—[Sporting Editor Tribune.]—In running our athletic demonstration at the armory of the 7th infantry Dec. 4 the Consolidated Camps of the United Spanish War Veterans hope to start a movement that will result in the enactment of a law creating an athletic commission in this state that will have power to regulate and supervise all professional athletic contests held within the state.

We know full well that there is a state law prohibiting boxing contests within the state of Illinois and that Mayor Thompson of Chicago is the only head of any Illinois municipality who does not consider such a law a dead letter. We back his honor in his stand in this matter, and we, an organization of volunteers who offered our lives to uphold the laws of this country, will be the last organization in this city to criticize our city's executive in enforcing the law. This letter is written in commendation instead of criticism, for we have always supported the mayor in his interest in athletics, especially in his activities in school children's activities.

In billing boxing exhibitions at our athletic demonstrations, we fail to see where we in any way conflict with the law, as these boxing exhibitions are purely demonstrations of the game before a representative body of Chicago's citizens assembled to pass judgment upon the advisability of legalizing such exhibitions in this state.

Nor is this a public exhibition, for while we intend to have as large an assemblage as possible, admission will be by invitation only.

Society Brand Clothes
FOR YOUNG MEN AND MEN WHO STAY YOUNG

©A. D. & C., 1920

The suit that you tried on and didn't buy

You liked it. You looked better in it than you had looked in any clothes for a long time. But you didn't want to "go that high." You said you would "look around a bit."

You went out and saved a few dollars buying somewhere else.

Now you have a suit—a good suit—but somehow it doesn't look as good on you as other men's clothes look on them.

The reason is, these men bought the kind of suit that you didn't buy.

When you are shown a Society Brand Suit the merchant is giving you his best service to make you look as well clothed as other men.

When you look for something else you are trying to beat an unbeatable game. You are trying to get something as good as Society Brand in a suit that sells for less money because it has less value—less style, less hand-tailoring, less than all-wool fabrics.

That's brutally frank, but it's true.

Go to a good clothing store and ask to see a Society Brand Suit. Try it on. When you like it, buy it. The way to get good clothes is to go where they are sold and buy them. There is no other way.

OAK PARK'S COMPLEX SHIFTS NET VICTORY OVER EVANSTON, 27-3

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

Oak Park High school's high geared football machine was compelled to go into full speed to defeat Evanston High yesterday morning in the feature Suburban league grid contest. After being outplayed in the first half, 3 to 0, the western suburban boys sprung a lot of new and shifty stuff in the second half and swamped the north shore lads by a final count of 27 to 3.

Apparently Coach Riddell had drilled his Evanston players on the proper defense for the Oak Park style of play used so far this year, for in the first half the Oak Parkers were quite helpless, using mostly plays through the line on straight football, with an occasional split play.

Smith's Toe Helps Evanston.

In the meantime Evanston, because of the splendid punting of Smith, had worked the ball well into Oak Park territory, and at the start of the second quarter Smith booted a pretty placement goal from the eighteen yard line.

Between halves Coach Thistlewaite ordered his players to cut loose with their new shift, which was a deceptive formation with three movements, followed by a run around end, a smash off tackle or a quarter back fake play, ending with a dash through the middle, and the new style completely broke down the Evanston defense.

Twice in the third and twice in the fourth periods Oak Park rushed the ball straight down the field for touchdowns, then in the latter part of the final quarter nearly all the subs on the side line were inserted for a bit of experience.

Quartet of Oak Park Stars.

Carpenter, Stange, Robinson, and Steger all did splendid offensive playing for Oak Park. Smith was easily the star for Evanston, twice getting away for long runs, besides booting the field goal. Lineup:

ST. RITA LADS TAKE SCRAPPY GAME FROM ST. PATRICKS, 13 TO 0

St. Rita kept its record clean in the race for Catholic High School league football honors by trimming the heavier St. Patrick eleven yesterday, 13 to 0, at St. Rita's. One touchdown was made in the second period, when Cronin broke through the line for twenty yards. The other was shoved over by the same man in the final quarter when St. Rita had the ball inside the five yard line, three smashes at the line being necessary to cross the goal.

A bit of slugging took place in the second quarter when Rooney of St. Rita mixed vigorously with one of the rical players. Both were put out of the game.

Walsh's punting and Barry's playing, both offensively and defensively, featured. Lineup:

Cerney's plunging also drew applause from 1,800 rooters. Lieup:

BULLDOG'S BITE SEVERS WINNING STRING OF BROWN

Kelley's Two Touchdown Win for Yale, 14-10.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 6.—In one of the hardest fought battles seen in the Yale bowl this season, the unbeaten Brown eleven went down to defeat before Yale, 14 to 10. The teams were so evenly matched it was not until the last quarter that Tad Jones' substitute team was able to keep the ball in the visitor's territory.

The game was marked by the sensational runs by Oden, Brown's quarter back, who again and again ran through the Yale team for long gains and was prevented from reaching the Eli goal only by Murphy's excellent tackling.

Brown's Passes Thrill Crowd.

The Brunonians also thrilled the spectators by swift lateral passes and by formations by which the ends, Williams and Albright, carried the ball. Brown's kicking was done by Capt. Armstrong.

The Yale team, although mostly substitutes, was in better shape than in any previous game. Although the gains were made almost entirely by straight line plunging, the line proved far stronger than that of last Saturday.

Kelley Goes Over Twice.

Left Halfback Kelley was the strongest ground gainer and plunged across the line for both touchdowns. Lineup:

MATURO TAKES THIRD MONEY IN CUE TOURNAMENT

James Maturo of Denver last night defeated William Ricketts of Flint, 125 to 85, in the playoff of their tie for third and fourth places in the pocket billiard championship. The game went thirty-one innings. The winner had high run of 19, the loser 13.

By his victory Maturo qualifies for the final tournament, the first game of which will be played tomorrow afternoon at 116 West Madison street. Champion Greenleaf, Walter Franklin, and Arthur Woods will be the other players. Maturo won third prize of $700, Ricketts taking $500. Rhines and Safford split fifth and sixth money.

The playoff was a slow game, each man missing shots and failing to profit by his opponent's leaves. Maturo led all the way.

MAROONS' GAME WITH MICHIGAN RECALLS BATTLE

Yost's Eleven of 1904 Excels in Driving.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

When football teams representing Michigan and Chicago clash on Ferry field next Saturday it will mark the Maroons' first appearance on the Wolverines' gridiron since 1904, when Billy Heston, the greatest half back ever developed in the middle west, led Michigan to a 22 to 12 victory over Chicago in a bitterly fought contest.

It was a struggle featured by the hardest kind of football. Although the Wolverines were a topheavy favorite, Chicago fought from whistle to whistle and near the close most of the regulars had been sent to the side lines battered and bruised from the terrific pounding.

Michigan was represented that year by one of the best teams in its history. Besides Capt. Heston there were Germany Schulz at center; Schulte, present coach at Nebraska, at one guard; Curtis at tackle, Frank Longman at full back, Tom Hammond at half back, and Harry Hammond at end, while Norcross piloted the team from the quarter back position.

Eye Witness' Account.

The writer was a member of the Chicago eleven and never will forget the kickoff of that stubbornly fought battle. Chicago won the toss and elected to receive the kick. Coach Stagg had elected to use Ed Parry at left half back, while the writer played in the full back's position to receive the boot.

The ball was booted to Parry, and for some unknown reason he did not attempt to catch it, but permitted it to bound over the goal line. The Michigan players had been told too often they were onside at the kickoff and if they recovered the ball back of the line a touchdown would result. The writer realized the danger and recovered the ball just as the Michigan men were about to fall on it.

After this play there was nothing to do but punt. The ball was lifted high over the head of Norcross, who played defensive full back, and Capt. Speik downed the Wolverine quarter far back in Michigan territory. Then Michigan started its machine to moving, with the result that Capt. Heston, Longman, and Tom Hammond plowed through the line, off the tackles, and around the ends for a touchdown.

Endure Tremendous Pounding.

Chicago, however, was not discouraged. The Maroons fought back with all the power in their makeup. Dan Boone, the Maroon half back, was ruled out of the game for alleged slugging shortly after this score. Still Chicago fought on, but on nearly every play some Chicago player was compelled to call for time, so vicious was the Michigan attack.

As the game progressed, with Michigan in possession of the ball most of the time, Heston fumbled the oval on one of his off tackle drives. The writer scooped up the oval and ran for a touchdown, the first scored on the Wolverines in four years by a Chicago team.

After this unexpected score, Michigan came right back and advanced the oval with regularity for another touchdown. Finally the Maroons got the ball in Michigan territory and succeeded in sending Hugo Bezdek over the line for Chicago's second touchdown. The Maroon line at this stage aided considerably, as it was absolutely impossible to gain against Michigan except through the forward wall.

Backs Fill Gaps in Line.

The bruising battle soon reaped its toll. Catlin and Bezdek were forced to leave the struggle after sustaining serious injury. Ed Barry also was sent to the side lines because of an injured knee. It was then necessary to call upon backs to play in the line and ends to play in the half backs' position. There was nothing left for Chicago to do whenever it got the ball but to punt.

With this patched lineup, the Maroons made Michigan work for every yard. The men played like demons in the face of overwhelming odds and submitted to defeat at the hands of a better team, an eleven which had confidently expected to beat Chicago by a larger margin.

I shall never forget the great playing of Heston in this game. This demon half back would run from either half back position, depending upon the part of the field the ball was in. If the ball was on his left side of the field he played that half back in order to skirt the big side of the gridiron. If close to his right side line, he played that back position in order to get the big side of the field to run.

Heston Almost Unstoppable.

Time after time he broke loose and came down upon me with his knees nearly hitting his chin. On one occasion we came together with full force and both were knocked groggy. On another he caught the neck of my jersey and held me at arm's length as we both ran along for ten yards until I finally downed him.

It is my honest opinion the west will never see such a half back again. This player weighed around 190 pounds and had the speed of a sprinter. He gained so much speed at the start that he seldom failed to make ground when opposition was met. He was ably seconded in this game by Tom Hammond and Frank Longman, who gave almost perfect interference for their leader.

It would not be fitting to close this short narrative of the game without giving credit to Capt. Speik, Kennedy, Bezdek, and Catlin, Chicago players, who fought until they were forced out of the game or the final whistle blew.

WOODS and WATERS by LARRY ST. JOHN

DUCK HUNTING GOSSIP.

HUNTERS as well as bird lovers will welcome the news that the wood duck is again becoming plentiful, and this in spite of the fact that it is unlawful to shoot these handsome birds. Sportsmen are not killers for the sake of killing, although they are sometimes pictured as such in the natural history books; on the whole sportsmen have done more for bird protection than the ladies and gentlemen who write the bird books, we believe.

LARRY ST. JOHN

Early this fall the timber and small waters of the Illinois river valley literally swarmed with wood ducks, and while a few were shot on the sly, or by mistake, the general tendency was to let them alone. Last fall they were also plentiful and in the spring they came back and raised goodly broods. No doubt they will do the same next spring and all the other springs to come.

The mallard, pintail, and other ducks can pretty well take care of themselves, now that spring shooting and market hunting are done away with, but the wood duck, through its own lack of intelligence and peculiar breeding habits, needs protection; sportsmen are for it.

The wood duck drake is the most handsomely colored of all American birds, all dressed up like a circus pony, with a bewildering array of rich colors, but he is lacking, architecturally; his neck is too small for his head and he is not graceful in carriage.

In our eyes the handsomest of all waterfowl is the drake pintail. In the air, or on land or water, he is pleasing to the eye, his long neck giving him a grace not found in any other water bird; in coloration he has enough brilliancy to satisfy our elemental love of barbaric splendor, while the beautiful greys, buffs, and pencilings he carries are distributed in just the correct proportions.

Last fall we saw an unusually large and handsome pintail drake. He had injured his wing in breaking into a pen of live mallard, and make the of it by accepting the hospitali the owner of the mallards; he quite tame and perhaps figured he was safer in a pen than in the —especially as he probably heard we were coming down the follo week! Wise bird!

The pintail does fairly well in confinement, and should make an cellent ornamental water fowl. July we saw a fine brood of half- pintails raised by Clyde Terrell, Oshkosh naturalist, and the day were at his place a hen mallard wa out of an alfalfa field, followed twenty-five babies. She probably some of them from another mother, habit wild ducks have, but she had big contract on her hands taking of that swarm.

When we saw her she reminded of that old story of the lady with large brood of youngsters getting street car. The conductor asked "Are these all yours or is it a nic?" To which she replied: are all mine and it's no picnic."

The duck hunter going to the nois river country for the fir probably will be surprised when notes how the old river men look the ring necked duck, known loc the blackjack. In other regions bird is looked upon the same as other scaups or blue bills: as an dinary duck—but on the Illinois highly esteemed as a table bird fact we have seen river men, offered their choice, deliberately the blackjack in preference to lards.

They are fine ducks, of excellent vor—equal, in our estimation, lauded canvas back—and we have to see one from the Illinois that not fat and in prime condition, though he only measures 17 inches the mallard's 23, the blackjack is almost if not quite as heavy.

A Canadian writer on outdoor jects opines that most of the ducks shot in the middle west are dinary mallards in the eclipse or the dark coat assumed by the mallard in the summer. If he been with us on the Illinois last he would change his mind. The flights of black ducks that struck river last season were black big, husky fellows, too, that looked be almost a yard long as they into the decoys.

STATES ALLY TO STAND PAT ON BARRED FIGHTERS

State, Jersey, and New York Get Together.

BY RAY PEARSON.

A step in the right direction is being ade in the boxing game in the east. ording to information wafted this ay by the telegraph wires. It has to with the way the boxing commis ns in various states handle the box g, but more principally concerns the gnition of action taken in one te by the officials of other states.

There long has been a concerted but le effort on the part of some men nected with the boxing game to get ther and form some sort of a gov ing body which would have juris on in things pugilistic in every e where the sport is permitted.

A national commission built along lines of the national commission in ball was suggested. It looked like od idea, but got nowhere, because who mingle in the glove sport rently did not care to waste the or effort to accomplish the forma of such an organization.

Three States in Understanding.

What we started out to say here con s the benefit that boxing should out of the way eastern promoters handling the sport. It is learned at least three states, New York, Jersey, and Massachusetts, have hed an amicable understanding ch should help to keep boxing clean above criticism.

For instance, we are informed that ent months New York, New Jer , and Massachusetts, have barred in boxers. These performers were nded for various terms because failed to live up to the letter of r contracts, which means they did give the promoters or the public they contracted to give in the of entertainment.

There has been a noteworthy lack of on of the word "frameup" in suspension notices which were led to the newspapers for promul n, and this is one thing which s the game from a black eye and which everybody who has the inter of boxing at heart should be ful.

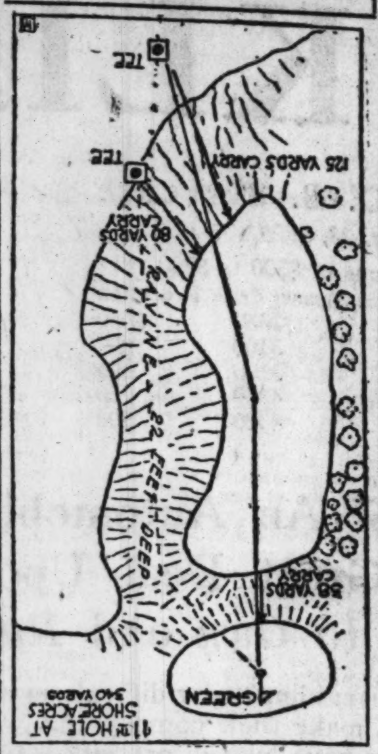
Recognize Suspensions.

ch suspensions undoubtedly are a thing for the game, but what good would they accomplish if a of boxers could "tango" through r twelve rounds in one state and rred, then move over to another and pull the same stuff, which med in a milder way, "not per g their best"? No good at all. great deal of good will come of spensions if the ruling powers Jersey, for instance, recognize spensions handed down in New and the boxers ruled out in one ind themselves also ruled out in r.

ems that this state of conditions eloped in the east, and it will be a good thing for pugilism. It could be improved, however, if the same sort of an alliance could be formed between states of the east and states of the west.

For instance, why couldn't Wisconsin recognize the suspensions of New York, New Jersey, and Massachusetts commissions, or vice versa? Perhaps it will work out this way in time, which should please boxing fans.

DOUBLE-BARREL HOLE UNIQUE FEATURE OF SHORECRES COURSE



LOOKING northwards from the eleventh tee at Shoreacres recalls the old Scotch song, "You tak the high road and I'll tak the low road," as two routes to the green, along different levels are possible. In this respect the hole is unique as far as this section of the country is concerned.

It is possible to play this 340 yard hole by driving across the 22 feet deep ravine to the higher level, and then play an iron second across the ravine guarding the green, or to play down into the valley and play the approach shot from the lower level up to the green.

The carry from the longer tee across the ravine is 125 yards. Another tee built on the sloping sides of the ravine makes necessary a carry of eighty yards. The longer shot must be well placed, as a pull will carry into the woods on the left, while a slice may run down the slope into the ravine.

This is one of many fine holes to be found at Shoreacres, the new club, located just south of the Great Lakes Naval station. Work on the course has made great progress, and six weeks after the greens were sown it would have been possible to play over them. The well wooded land was covered with a rich loam, in which a New Zealand grass seed produced wonderfully fine greens.

BASEBALL MEN GATHER TO VOTE ON WAR OR PEACE

Issue to Be Decided Here Within 48 Hours.

BY I. E. SANBORN.

Mobilization of the powers that be in professional baseball for the combat which shall determine within the next forty-eight hours the question of peace or war in the major leagues began yesterday, and will continue with a crescendo movement today.

President Herrmann of the Cincinnati club was the most august of yesterday's arrivals, and he will be joined today by the club owners of the National league, who have been summoned by President Heydler for an informal conference to decide what action shall be taken at their adjourned session with the New York, Chicago and Boston clubs of the American league, relative to the attitude of the other five clubs in that circuit. President Herrmann declined to forecast the outcome of the conference today or of tomorrow's meeting.

A. L. Meets Tomorrow.

Magnates of the American league are expected to arrive today, although their session is not booked until tomorrow morning. At this conference it is expected the "loyal five" club owners will decide whether or not to accept the latest invitation from President Heydler, chairman of the special meeting of Oct. 18, to attend the adjourned session, or the alternative of a twelve club league and war to the knife.

This alternative was threatened in the agreement signed by eight National and three American league club owners on that date in case the other five magnates of the Johnson circuit did not fall in line with the Lasker plan.

Compromises Offered.

Since then the American league directors have put forth a compromise plan for a tripartite committee of three from each of the majors and the minor league association to work out a scheme for a new governing body for baseball, and the National league has countered by a second invitation to the Johnson faction to come into the joint meeting tomorrow afternoon and discuss the points of difference.

Mr. Hapgood said that a new manager probably would be named inside of a month.

COAL PRICE CUT AT STATE MINES; STAYS UP HERE

Huge Sale to Railroads Is Big Factor.

BY OSCAR E. HEWITT.

A few more spots were knocked out of the excessively high "spot" prices for Illinois coal last week.

Reports from the principal coal markets of the country east of the Rockies showed lower prices in most places.

Retail prices on bituminous coal in Chicago remained around $10 a ton delivered, and anthracite in the neighborhood of $16.25 a ton, according to Assistant District Attorney J. A. Miller.

Although some dealers reported sales for smaller figures, retailers generally asserted the price will remain up.

The reported consummation of contracts for 3,000,000 tons of Illinois coal by railroads of the northwest is expected to prevent the saturation of this market with coal and have a tendency to maintain a high level of prices.

On the other hand, the production last week was good considering that election day was a holiday. The repeal of the priority order on smokeless coal should tend to increase the local supply.

Big Trial on Tomorrow.

Among the coal operators, jobbers, and retailers, all the gossip yesterday was centered on next week. Tomorrow, in Indianapolis, the trial of 125 operators and mine union officials is scheduled to begin before Federal Judge Anderson. They are charged wih collusion in the strike of 1919.

The drop in the high spot prices at the mines is reported by the Black Diamond as follows:

Southern Illinois—Domestic sizes, last week, $6 to $7 a ton f. o. b. mines; two weeks ago, $7 to $8.50.

Indiana field—Prepared sizes, last week, $6.25 to $6.75 a ton; two weeks ago, $6.50 to $7.50 a ton.

Central Illinois—Domestic sizes, last week, $5.25 to $6.25 a ton; two weeks ago, $7 to $8 a ton.

Peoria district—Prepared sizes, last week, $5.25 to $6 a ton; two weeks ago, $7 to $8 a ton.

Spring valley district—Six inch chunk, last week, $5 a ton; two weeks ago, $6.

Little Effect Felt Here.

Very little if any coal at these prices was sold in Chicago last week. The retailer cannot buy coal at $7 a ton at the mines and sell it for $10 delivered in Chicago. The public declines to pay more than $10 a ton when from certain dealers the same coal can be purchased for less than $9, because these dealers obtained their supply on contract.

Average June Price $2.86.

It might appear to a layman that certain mines can afford to sell for $3 a ton at the mines, according to the last governmental figures on cost. These relate to the month of June and were compiled by the federal trade commission. These show that the average cost reported by fifty-six operators in Illinois was $2.23 a ton and that they sold during that month for an average of $2.86 a ton, leaving a margin of 63 cents. It will be noticed that the average realization price is less than $3 a ton for the comparatively few operators reporting.

The government has announced that these cost figures will be discontinued because of the small number of mines reporting. It follows necessarily that when the next coal strike difficulty arrives the country again will be in the chaotic condition of lacking essential information upon which to base a fair judgment.

Sees Drop in Prices.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 6.—[Special.]—Three developments today emphasized the rapid improvement in the coal situation. Lower prices for bituminous coal were predicted in a statement issued by the National Coal association; the interstate commerce commission issued an order which, in effect, releases 25,000 coal cars for the use of building materials, steel products, and other commodities which can be transported in open top cars, and the weekly report of the geological survey showed that for the fourth successive week production of bituminous coal in the week ended Oct. 30 was in excess of 12,000,000 tons, and set a new high mark for the year.

The National Coal association in its statement said that operators in soft coal fields, where unusually high prices existed, have within the last ten days been setting up fair practice committees, and, working in conjunction with Attorney General Palmer, have put under way a determined effort to eradicate abuses in the handling of coal. It was declared that prices have fallen 25 per cent in the last month, and that further reductions may be expected.

"Coincident with this effort, prices in these particular fields have already begun to fall," says the statement. "The lowering of prices was forecast by operators in the bituminous coal industry weeks ago. With a supply of cars which will enable the operators to turn out 12,000,000 tons of coal for some weeks to come, prices in the market will continue to drop."

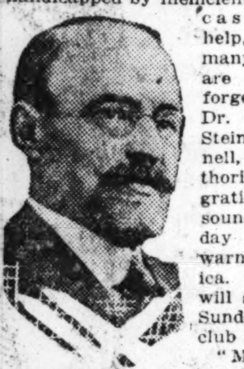
STEINER CHARGES THAT IMMIGRANTS PURCHASE THEIR WAY INTO U. S.



DR. EDWARD A. STEINER.

Declaring our consuls abroad are handicapped by inefficient and in some cases corrupt help, and that many immigrants are coming with forged passports, Dr. Edward A. Steiner of Grinnell, Ia., an authority on immigration problems, sounded yesterday a note of warning to America. Dr. Steiner will speak at the Sunday Evening club this evening.

"Men are buying their way into America," stated Dr. Steiner. "I would advise doubling our consular forces, admitting only immigrants of economic and social value. I am deluged with letters from pianists, actors, bank clerks, lawyers, doctors, dancers, who want me to help them to get across, but not one application from a cook or a gardener or a coal miner.

"To try to solve our labor problems by encouraging immigration is as wise as bringing English sparrows over to destroy insects."

WANDERER GOES TO JOLIET TODAY DELAY NEW TRIAL

Carl Wanderer, convicted of the murder of his wife, will be sent to Joliet penitentiary this week to begin his term of twenty-five years. His trial on a charge of murdering the man known as the "ragged stranger," will not be held until after Judge Robert E. Crowe takes office as state's attorney next month.

Attorneys Benedict J. Short and George Guenther renewed their request to be allowed to withdraw as counsel for Wanderer. Judge McDonald then called for volunteers among the lawyers present, but none was willing to act for Wanderer when he is again placed on trial.

"It is a serious matter," said the judge. "If the defendant is again tried, under the law he must be represented by counsel. No matter how disagreeable, some lawyer must act for him."

JAPAN IS RUSHING NAVAL PROGRAM OF BIG WARSHIPS

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1920: By The Chicago Tribune.]

TOKIO, Nov. 6.—The Japanese are expediting their naval construction. The cruiser Oi, planned for completion next spring, will be ready for launching in December at the Kawasaki shipyard at Kobe. Two destroyers and a special service vessel will be ready for launching in the same yard at a later week in December. The Kawasaki yard is building the battleship Kaga, and when completed it will make room for Japan's greatest warship—the battle cruiser Atago, a 45,000 ton ship.

Submarine No. 28 will be launched next week from the Mitsubishi yard and the destroyer Fuji a week later at the Fujinagata yard.

"NEW RICH" FAIL TO KEEP LONDON HOSPITAL GOING

Famous Institution May Close Jan. 1.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1920: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, Nov. 6.—The announcement this morning by Lord Knutsford, chairman of the London hospital, that unless there is a financial improvement in its situation immediately, the hospital must close its doors Jan. 1 is concrete evidence of the change in the distribution of England's wealth since the war.

The London hospital is the largest hospital in England and probably in the world. It has 1,000 beds, is situated in the heart of the poverty stricken east end, and is the most famous medical school in England.

"New Rich" Indifferent.

It is supported entirely by endowments and voluntary contributions which, before the war, came from contributors of the old established wealthy class who regularly set aside yearly sums for charity. These people have become impoverished by war taxation, the increased cost of living, and other factors, and the new rich, made wealthy by war profits, are without a sense of public responsibility.

The result is that contributions, not only to the London hospital but all charities, are diminishing rapidly and only the magnitude of a public disaster such as the closing of the London hospital has focused the matter on public attention.

London hospital was founded in 1740 and enlarged several times, the last time being in 1904. Lord Knutsford, who has devoted his life to working for the hospital, states that the expenditures exceeded the income last year by $330,000. This was in spite of a special appeal, which probably cannot be repeated, by which $175,000 was raised and a special gift of $175,000 from the king's fund. The hospital has pledged its capital to bankers for $325,000 and can raise no more money.

Cost Has Also Increased.

Before the war the cost of a bed per week was $10.50, now it is $21.

It is probable that an effort will be made to save the most essential features of the hospital. Before closing altogether, the special departments, such as the x-ray, Finsen ray massage, bacteriological research, and other surgical "luxuries," will be dispensed with, and an effort made to run the hospital as a nursing infirmary for the sick poor. If closed, 20,000 people annually will be deprived of medical treatment.

It has been suggested, as an alternative, that the hospital be supported by the state.

The Wise Choice of An Automobile Today Depends a Great Deal Upon What the Car Costs to Own and Run

The records of people who drive Franklins under difficult as well as favorable conditions, and who make their comparisons with similar records of other cars they have owned, are interesting.

They show that, all items of expense considered, the Franklin stands less depreciation through wear and tear, costs less to maintain mechanically, and has lower gasoline and tire bills.

When a car qualifies in this manner as a sound investment in motoring service, it is plain how even more than normal satisfaction is derived from its comfort and safety, the ease with which it handles, and the freedom from trouble which results from Franklin Air Cooling.

A Statement by Edgar Apperson

Pioneer Automobile Manufacturer and President of Apperson Bros. Automobile Company

OVER a quarter of a century ago—in 1893 to be exact—when my brother, Elmer and I first started in the motor car business, we adopted as a basic principle the policy of building cars to market at fair prices.

As a result Apperson prices have never been inflated; are not now inflated; and never will be inflated.

Our prices always have been and always will be determined by the market cost of raw materials, plus the actual cost of labor and overhead with a fair margin added for manufacturing profit.

That this policy has been appreciated is evidenced by the greatly increased demand for our product.

You have probably noticed the majority of high grade motor car manufacturers have found it impossible to make any price reductions—in fact several have increased.

We guarantee the present Apperson prices until July 1st, 1921.

Judging from the material and labor market, there are no indications that they can be changed then.

Signed

NATION TO HAVE BUDGET SYSTEM FOR BUSINESS

New Bureaus Planned for Economy.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 6.—[Special.]—With the government likely to spend $4,000,000,000 or more annually for years to come, the working out of an effective budget system will be one of the first tasks of the Harding administration. The bill establishing a budget system may be passed in advance of the inauguration of Senator Harding as president next March. In any event the new president and his secretary of the treasury will have the responsibility of creating the proposed new budget bureau and making it an effective agency in the placing of government expenditures upon a scientific and businesslike basis.

The Good-McCormick budget bill is pending before the senate, after having been passed by both houses last spring, vetoed by President Wilson and repassed by the house. As passed a second time by the house, a provision which the president objected to because he thought it encroached upon constitutional powers of the president with respect to the removal of officers appointed by him, was eliminated.

Cabinet Member Director.

In case the bill is passed during the winter session in advance of March 4, there is little likelihood of the organization of a budget bureau before Senator Harding takes office as president. Under the bill the secretary of the treasury is made the director of the bureau while an assistant director is provided to be appointed by the president at a salary of $10,000 a year. A general accounting office also is created headed by a controller general and assistant controller general appointed by the president at salaries of $10,000 and $7,500, respectively.

Centers in One Committee.

The new administration is expected to get the budget bureau in working order so that estimates may be submitted under the new plan to congress in December, 1921, for appropriations for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1922.

Already the house has adopted a change in rules that was intended to be supplemental to the budget bill. This change centers in the hands of the appropriations committee, the authority to report appropriations heretofore scattered among the committees on agriculture, foreign affairs, Indian affairs, military affairs, naval affairs, postoffices and postroads, and rivers and harbors. One large committee of thirty-five members will do the work which has been divided among eight committees.

The change in the rules became effective on July 1 of this year and accordingly the appropriations for the next fiscal year, which are to be taken up at the coming December session, will be handled under the new scheme.

Finances at a Glance.

It is intended that the committee of thirty-five members shall be divided into subcommittees, which will deal with the various measures. By reporting the entire budget from the committee in a single bill, it is intended that its consideration on the floor of congress shall involve a full and comprehensive discussion of the big problem of government finance. Members of congress will be able to see at a glance the entire picture. Those approving the plan believe it will be less difficult to keep expenditures within the bounds of probable receipts.

Mexico City Crimeless for Twenty-four Hours

Washington, Nov. 6.—An announcement issued today by the Mexican embassy said the twenty-four hour period of Oct. 29-30 was a crimeless day in the Mexican capital. Although Mexico City has more than a million inhabitants, the statement said, "not a crime was committed nor a single arrest made for an infraction of the law."

STEAMER RATES NOT TO DECLINE, FRANKLIN SAYS

New York, Nov. 6.—Steamship companies cannot yet afford to reduce passenger rates and may be obliged to increase them, P. A. S. Franklin, president of the International Mercantile Marine company, declared today just before sailing for Europe.

"Supplies for ships cost as much as supplies on land," Mr. Franklin said. "The increase in ocean fares has not kept pace with the increase in the cost of food, labor, and materials. Operating costs are still going up.

"The national has not yet digested its war built fleet of merchant ships. Until it does and until the new merchant marine is privately owned and can stand on its own feet against the competition of ships under other flags any American steamship company must proceed with caution."

Another passenger on the Olympic was Claus A. Spreckles, sugar refiner.

AMERICAN LEGION NOTES

Chipelley post, No. 310, American Legion, is giving a dance and entertainment celebrating Armistice day Thursday evening, Nov. 11, in the regimental armory, Sixteenth street and Michigan avenue. Music by 1st Illinois Infantry band. Added attraction: Russian and Polish folk songs and dances by famous Foreign Polish legion. Small admission charges, to be used to care for sick and wounded still in hospitals.

MILITIA CHIEFS IN CONFERENCE WITH GEN. WOOD

Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood at a conference yesterday with the adjutants general of Illinois, Wisconsin, and Michigan, promised the aid of the war department to the states in the promotion of national guard interests.

The conference was held at Fort Sheridan and was called to expedite the distribution of national guard troops—each state to be allotted 200 troops for each senator and representative in congress. This would give Illinois 5,800 men. The state will have the new 33d division, named in honor of the Prairie division, which served overseas.

Adjt. Gen. F. S. Dickson wants an additional corps of engineers beside the regular quota, as Chicago is the biggest engineering center in the country.

VELIE MOTORS CORPORATION, MOLINE, ILLINOIS
By W. L. Velie, President

We have searched all records and fail to find another cord tire equipped six-cylinder car whose regular list price is as low as the Velie Six at $1385. Make your own comparisons. You will be astonished at the remarkable Velie Six values given for $1385.

The cut of the Velie Six to $1385, with a guarantee of cash rebate should the car go lower, is the sensation of the car market. The announcement has brought a flood of demand. Experienced motorists see in this price situation an astounding opportunity—but only a temporary opportunity.

The Velie Six, with cord tires all around—at the price of a Four! It is the chance of a lifetime that must be grasped before it vanishes all too soon. The very volume of orders will make the car difficult to get. Here is an extraordinary Six value. The same car that sold at $1585 a few weeks ago, and even then with fabric tires.

A Clean Saving of $300

The new low price and full cord tire equipment means an actual cash saving of nearly $300 money in the pocket, to purchasers who act today.

You cannot realize to the full what you get for $1385 until you see the car. Here is the power of the silent, velvety, responsive motor that won the Dyas gold cup—that outstripped higher-priced cars at Pikes Peak—that has the enthusiastic testimony of hundreds of owners to its amazing fuel economy.

Here is the Velie construction all through—the standard that has kept Velie cars on the road for ten years with the world's low upkeep record on service above 100,000 miles.

Genuine Leather Upholstery

Here is the beautiful Velie body—long, roomy, the very latest creation of the famous Velie body builders, with deep-plaited genuine leather upholstery—restful seats—every feature of equipment and refinement that you find on high-priced cars.

All for $1385. If you would be among those who have the satisfaction of owning this car of envied distinction—the car of Velie values—get in touch with us today. You can drive out with your Velie now—give yourself and your family all these advantages at a price that means the most profitable investment in a car that ever came your way.

Round Up Artillery Men for Armistice Day Fete

Col. Frank R. Schwengel, commanding the First Field artillery, Illinois national guard, announced yesterday that a "roundup" of artillery men will be held Tuesday night, Nov. 9, at the First Field Artillery armory, 234 East Chicago avenue. This roundup is being held to prepare for the Armistice day celebrations which are to take place at the armory on the night of Nov. 11.

Men or officers attached to the Motor Transport corps during the period 1917-1919 at Fort Wayne, Newport News, Camp Custer, Camp Meade, or the Provisional Infantry brigade, who live in or near Chicago, have been requested to report to their old commandant, Maj. E. Barclay, care of the Adventurers' club, 40 South Clark street.

EAST IS WEST

They Worked—and Walked—Their Way from Lake Forest to Los Angeles, Their New Home.

IRENE ATTERIDGE. RHEA HARRINGTON

GLADYS SPELLMAN ESTHER CONWAY.

LETTERS filled with funny experiences have been received by four girl members of the Sayonara club in Lake Forest from the other four members, who started to work their way to the Pacific coast on Oct. 1. The girls have reached their destination, Los Angeles, but it took a month of hard work and some walking.

The last leg of the trip was made in a baggage car from Las Vegas to Los Angeles, more than 300 miles.

The travelers are Gladys Spellman, stenographer; Esther Conway, postal clerk; Rhea Harrington, milliner, and Irene Atteridge, billing machine operator. Stops were made in Omaha, Denver, Salt Lake City, and San Francisco. Wherever possible the girls obtained work at their usual vocations. They are staying with Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Harrington in Los Angeles and plan to make that city their home.

FIVE CENT FARE DECISION MONDAY CITY ASKS WRIT

Judge Kickham Scanlan of the Circuit court is expected to give a decision Monday on the injunction suit filed by the city against the Chicago Surface Lines to enjoin them from charging more than a 5 cent fare on the ground the companies have broken their contracts with the city.

Opening arguments were made yesterday and the case will be concluded on Monday morning. Judge McGoorty last year refused to issue a temporary injunction. Later the case was transferred to Judge Scanlan's docket.

Chester E. Cleveland, assistant corporation counsel, argued yesterday that since the lines have broken their contracts providing for a 5 cent fare, they had no right to the use of the streets. He also contended the public utilities commission had no right to permit the companies to break their contracts.

Attorney Harry P. Webber appeared for the surface lines, arguing that the utilities commission had the right to grant the fare increase.

UNKNOWN HERO TO REST NEAR BRITISH KINGS

Royal Family to Attend Westminster Burial.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1920: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, Nov. 6.—Arrangements are now complete for the Armistice day ceremony next Thursday, when the body of an "unknown warrior" will be buried in Westminster abbey among the British kings and statesmen—the highest honor in Britain's power which can be conveyed to the dead.

The word "warrior" has been selected for inscription on the coffin instead of "soldier" because it is desired to honor all the fighting men of the army, navy, and air, and none but the officer selecting the body from a French cemetery knows whether it is a soldier, sailor, or airman.

King Will Attend.

King George will attend the great public funeral personally. The coffin will be carried in the procession through the London streets draped in a flag which was flown at Ypres during the historical defense of that city.

A feature of Armistice day ceremonies will be the unveiling by the king of a granite shaft erected in Whitehall, near the house of parliament, as a memorial to all who fell in the war.

In addition to the king the following members of the royal family will be present at the burial: Queens Mary and Alexandra, the Prince of Wales, the Duke of York, Prince Henry, and the Princess Mary.

All England to Mourn.

The ministry of transportation has ordered all railroad trains, trams, and busses to stop for two minutes at 11 a. m., and the whole population has been requested to cease work for the same interval in honor of the dead.

The cenotaph will be unveiled at the stroke of 11, after which the procession will leave for the abbey.

PACKARD

That sovereign quality of manufacture that for twenty years has been Packard is preserved without compromise or dilution in the new Packard Single-Six Car. It persists not alone in externals, but in the very atomic structure of the car's metals, in the manner in which these are wrought and finished, in the results to which they are designed. Through an estimated record production we are enabled to offer this representative Packard vehicle in the touring model at $2975 f.o.b. Detroit. It is our deliberate conviction that at such a figure this Packard embodies an investment and utility value exceeding anything previously tendered the public in a motor car.

FARMERS VOTE $50,000 SURVEY OF GRAIN MARTS

Demand U.S. Open Boards to "Co-op" Members.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

"I feel confident the Committee of Seventeen will be able to work out something of great value regarding the marketing and distributing system for our grain that the producers are anxiously awaiting," said C. H. Gustafson, chairman, late yesterday afternoon, at the close of a three day meeting held at the Hotel La Salle. "The information given us at this conference by some of the most competent authorities on marketing in the country is valuable and we expect to analyze it thoroughly before we draft our plans.

"The job is so big it will take some time for the committee to work out safe and sane plans that will be fair to both producer and the consumer."

Vote $50,000 for Inquiry.

The conference voted to raise a fund of $50,000 to finance the work of investigating and formulating the marketing plans. All farm organization will be asked to contribute.

A committee was appointed to employ immediately as many economists and statisticians as would be needed to search for all of the necessary facts. A thorough study will be made of the present marketing system, marketing costs, possible profits to be made in handling grain in both domestic and foreign markets, and the problem of [illegible] grain.

The Committee of Seventeen will meet again in executive session Dec. [illegible] in Chicago. This conference is expected to occupy a full week, that the delegates may have time to thrash out all reports of subcommittees. A legislative committee was appointed to make careful study of the coöperative laws of the various states. Some states will be asked to pass equitable and satisfactory laws so farm products can be sold coöperatively, and some already have such laws.

Ask Grain Board Seats.

John Simpson of Oklahoma and Bradford Knapp of Arkansas, members of the recently organized association of southern cotton growers, will be invited to attend the next meeting, at which the committee expects to agree on the basic principles for the farmers' coöperative selling plan.

A resolution was adopted recommending that the committee ask the federal trade commission, the attorney general, or other public authority to take steps to open the grain exchanges to the membership of coöperative companies "unless the grain exchanges shall voluntarily do the same at once." Grain exchanges now deny membership to coöperative companies.

The Citrus Growers' Lemon.

"Citrus fruit growers of the Pacific coast would not fix the price of oranges, even if it were legally right and all of them could agree," G. Harold Powell, general manager of the California fruit growers' exchange, told the committee yesterday. "It would do us no good. We have to sell our fruit for what it is worth. The Italian lemon grower can sell his lemons and oranges in this country cheaper than we can."

Mr. Powell explained there is such a difference between the money rates of this country and of all European countries that the foreign grower can sell his fruit over here for a much lower price than American growers can, and when he changes American money into the currency of his own country he is a wealthy man.

Urges Wool Growers' Warehouses.

"A chain of warehouses sufficient to care for the entire wool clip of the United States, owned and controlled by the growers and operated under the federal warehouse act, should be erected," George M. Wilber told the wool committee of the farm bureau federation.

"There are three outstanding subjects for legislation and they should be brought up as soon as congress reconvenes. We want federal legislation granting credit to foreign countries where it can be done with safety. We want a true-in-fabric bill, because the unrevealed presence of shoddy cloth is a crime. We need what in the good old days we called a protective tariff."

DROP IN LUMBER PRICES AT AN END, EXPERT ASSERTS

Lumber prices which Chicago retailers say have slumped 16 to 35 per cent since last February are believed to have reached the bottom of the dip, according to L. R. Putnam, directing manager of the American Wholesale Lumber association, which closed a two day session at the Congress hotel last night.

"The seventeen directors of the association meeting here report that some of the biggest manufacturers in the south and west are selling lumber at less than the cost to mill it," said Putnam. "Some mills have given notice that they will have to shut down rather than make further reductions.

"Conditions are shaping themselves, however, so that building will be active by early spring. Railroads, too, are making heavy purchases for cars and maintenance projects. Labor is adjusting itself to conditions. Some mills have guaranteed that the price will not go lower."

J. H. Burton of New York is president of the association. Judge Harry Olson and Joseph Davies, former member of the federal trade commission, were speakers.

Earnings Under New Rail Rates.

The reports of railway earnings for September, the first month under the increased rates, make as good a showing as could reasonably have been expected. As is usual in such situations, the hopes of investors and speculators had been raised too high and the result is some disappointment.

All the returns at hand as this is written show a good increase in gross, but only a moderate average gain in net earnings, while a considerable number of roads report a decrease in net.

It should be remembered that the present rates are really only tentative. They were intended to enable the average road to earn at least 5½ per cent on the value of its proprty. If they fall short of that they must be readjusted later.

Several months of operation will be necessary to show exactly what can be earned. A sharp increase in rates necessarily reduces the average haul by forcing people to buy goods from nearer points of supply than before. This changes currents of traffic and may favor some roads while affecting others adversely.

The September reports are the first definite and positive indication of what each road can do and are therefore of the greatest value to prospective investors in railway securities. They should, however, be taken as preliminary suggestion only and not as a final rating.

Brief Answers.

J. O. P., Cleveland, O.—The Kansas City Power and Light company earned its interest charges of $429,320 with a rather narrow margin of safety last year. As there are preferred shares ahead of the common dividends on the latter evidently cannot be expected in th near future.

W. W., Monmouth, Ill.—Since the United Retail Stores corporation got possession of most of the stock of the United Cigar Stores there have been no sales of the latter. The official quotation now is 120 bid, 150 asked.

U. S. HEARING ON "Q" MELON PLAN SET FOR NOV. 22

Washington, D. C., Nov. 6.—[Special.]—A hearing on the application of the Burlington railroad for approval of a stock dividend of $60,000,000 and the issuance of $109,000,000 of mortgage bonds was set by the interstate commerce commission today for Nov. 22 in Washington. Notice of the filing of the application has been sent to the governors of Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, Nebraska, Kansas, Colorado, South Dakota, Wyoming, and Montana, states in which the road operates.

There is widespread interest in the action of the commission. Only one other application for approval of a stock dividend has been filed with the commission, that being represented by the Lackawanna. Hearings were held recently on the Lackawanna case, but no action has been taken as yet.

Yesterday's hog market closed weak to 10c lower, the first decline in more than a week. Competition was lacking, with shippers buying more indifferently than earlier in the week. The day's average at $13.85 was $1.15 above a week ago.

Closing trade in cattle and lambs was the lowest of the week, with various grades of steers and butcher stock 75c@$1.50 off from the best time of the week. Lambs closed $2 below the high point.

Hog supplies last week, besides making one of the smallest runs on record for the corresponding week of the year, showed the lightest average weight, with one exception. Receipts were only 92,300. The supply was 71,706 smaller than for the corresponding week last year, 113,158 smaller than two years ago, and 74,600 smaller than the eight year average. The estimated average weight for the week was 226 lbs, 4 lbs lighter than the previous week, 7 lbs lighter than the same week of last year, 5 lbs lighter than two years ago, and 14 pounds lighter than the average for the corresponding week in the last eight years.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 22,000 cattle, 30,000 hogs, and 32,000 sheep, against 28,865 cattle, 38,325 hogs, and 51,983 sheep a year ago.

FINANCIAL NOTES

Bradstreet's review says colder weather has helped retailers during the last week, but broad trade and business conditions have not changed from the recent dullness. Dun's review says the level of wholesale prices on Nov. 1 was the lowest in eighteen months. Last week there were 233 commercial failures, compared with 236 the preceding week and 123 the corresponding week in 1919. The Massachusetts public employment office for October shows the highest record of unemployment for any month this year. Orders from employers fell off 22 per cent from September and 42 per cent from October, 1919.

Dividends amounting to $1,520,725 will be paid on stocks of mills in the Fall River section during the fourth quarter of this year. The distributions range from 1½ to as high as 10 per cent. The distribution will be made on a par capital of $34,235,000.

The Chicago Federal Reserve bank reports the weekly movement of credits as follows. Debits to individual deposit account reported for week ending Nov. 3 by 195 banks in 24 leading clearing house cities in the Seventh federal reserve district aggregate $1,009,304,000, compared with $1,124,024,000 week ago. Aggregate debits to individual deposit account amounted to $1,009,304,000, compared with $1,108,759,000 reported by 23 clearing houses for the corresponding week last year.

Price of newsprint paper for export from Canada to this country for the first quarter of 1921 will be between 6½c and 7c a pound, or $130@140 a ton, according to semi-official announcement.

The next wool sale in the United States will be held in Boston Nov. 18, when 4,000,000 lbs will be auctioned.

The Home Owner or the Renter?

WHICH WOULD YOU RATHER BE? THE ANSWER IS SELF-EVIDENT. You would not only prefer to own your own home rather than pay rent all your life, but you actually expect to SOME DAY—START TODAY!

Views of our property as it is today.

In addition to the many general advantages in owning one's home, there is a special advantage at this time. The present high rentals are not coming down until the housing shortage is caught up, the growth of the city requires a normal amount of building each year and the shortage will have to be overcome by an abnormal amount of building, which will require a good many years. In the meantime you can have your home paid for. Come out and let us show you.

FORMAN FARM MORTGAGE INVESTMENTS

NATURE IS PROVIDENT

Eskimo dogs bury a part of their scant daily ration; squirrels store up nuts; and the grizzly puts on a heavy layer of fat before his long winter sleep; the camel takes a week's drink at a time. Prudent men, too, provide against the day of want by building up a strong financial reserve. And the best way to do it is by investing in safe, non-fluctuating securities, such as Forman Farm Mortgage Investments, netting 7%.

LIQUIDATION ON IN ALL GRAINS; PRICES TUMBLE

BY CHARLES D. MICHAELS.

Liquidation was on in all grains. Prices declined to the inside figures of the week and closed around the bottom, with net losses of 5¾@8¼c on wheat, 1⅞@2c on corn, 1c on oats, 4⅞@6½c on rye, and 2½c on barley.

It was a bear week in all grains and the rallying power was poor from the start. At the last wheat showed a decline of 14¾@19c, as compared with a week ago, while corn was off 3¾@4¾c, oats 2¾@3¼c, rye 6¾@8⅛c, and barley 8¼c.

Julius H. Barnes' speech before the American Farm Bureau federation committee of 17 was construed by the trade as bearish, and this, in connection with a sensational break in sterling exchange and unfavorable reports on business and economic conditions the world over, was responsible for heavy selling of wheat.

March Wheat at New Low.

At no time was there aggressive buying. March sold at a new low on the crop and closed the lowest so far. A small rally toward the last was due to buying by holders of bids and week end evening up.

The market has passed the stage where export demand and other normal factors have much effect on values. At the low point December showed 22c under the high of Monday. It was understood large amounts of Canadian spring wheat were being bought by domestic mills, in some instances sufficient being taken for winter requirements. Export demand was flat and premiums at the gulf were 2c lower. Reports of heavy rain and windstorms in Argentina were ignored, as were the milling sales of 135,000 bu here. Receipts 20 cars. Country offerings continue light.

Weak Market in Corn.

There was nothing in the corn situation to justify any aggressive buying, and, with wheat weak and the local element bearish, a sharp decline was attained easily. May sold at a new low on the crop, but the December-May spread showed no change. There was heavy selling attributed to the Armour Grain company by commission houses. The most effective buying was by shorts and holders of bids. Premiums on yellow corn dropped 2½c, as compared with the December, despite small arrivals. The weekly weather forecast indicated rain or snow early and generally fair and colder later.

The December-May oats spread widened to 5¾c, the greatest difference so far. Cash houses bought the December and sold the May persistently, while short covering was in evidence in both deliveries.

Houses with export connections were persistent buyers of rye, but failed to check the decline. Several small lots were sold from outside markets for prompt shipment at 16c over December, track Baltimore. No. 2 on track was ¼@½c over December.

Provisions Close Lower.

Limited new buying and the break in grains were the depressing factors in provisions. Cash trade was light, both on export and domestic account. Selling of lard by Cross, Roy, and Saunders was a factor. The close was at losses of 15@50c. Pork was slow and lost 55c and ribs 35c. Packing in Chicago since Nov. 1 aggregates 65,000 or 101,000 hogs less than last year. Prices follow:

CASH·GRAIN NEWS

Two small cargoes of hard winter wheat were reported as sold at the gulf late Friday and not previously reported, the basis being 21c over Chicago December, or 2c under the previous day's figures. Other than this no export business was claimed in any position, the break in foreign exchange checking the demand.

Milling demand for cash wheat was better, sales here aggregating 135,000 bu, including 5,000 bu No. 1 red at $2.16, and 105,000 bu Canadian spring sold to mills. Premiums were little changed, with No. 1 red 17@21c; No. 1 hard, 7½@8c, and No. 1 northern, 5@10c over the December. Receipts, 20 cars. Outside markets were weak and 5@10c lower, with a slow demand. Premiums at Minneapolis were unchanged. No. 1 hard at Kansas City sold at 1@2c over December.

No. 1 and No. 2 yellow corn started at 12½c over December, but dropped immediately to 10c over and at the last 9c over the future was the best that could be obtained. Mixed and white were easy, with 6c over for mixed and 7c over for white. Shipping sales, 275,000 bu. Receipts, 35 cars. Outside markets were 1½c lower to 1c higher.

Premiums on cash oats were firm at 1@1½c over December for No. 2 white and December to ½c over for No. 3 white, but sales showed ½@1c under the previous day's close in sympathy with futures. Shipping sales, 90,000 bu. Receipts, 64 cars.

WORLD'S·GRAIN MARKET·NEWS

At no time this season has the wheat situation appeared as bearish as at present. There is a lack of confidence in everything. The world situation appears to be developing as an important factor and to be receiving more attention. The talk of Julius Barnes, former wheat director, before the farmers' marketing committee on Friday afternoon put the wheat situation in a different light and was the basis for a great deal of the selling.

Heavy selling of corn by Schwarz and Wagner was largely attributed to a local professional who has become bearish. Wheat and corn were sold in volume at the opening and corn again at the close.

There are local operators who are believers in buying corn on breaks, but they are getting no help from outside. At the same time the movement has fallen off and the six markets had only 75 cars yesterday, compared with 326 cars a week ago and 179 last year.

Farmers may be forced to use corn for fuel if the prices of farm products fall and other commodities do not, according to Dr. H. C. Taylor of the office of farm management and farm economics of the United States department of agriculture. If the rest of the nation fails to appreciate the necessity of farm prices having a satisfactory ratio to other prices, farmers may be forced to protect themselves.

Primary receipts of wheat since July 1 aggregate 166,144,000 bu, compared with 244,803,000 bu last year. Receipts of oats since Aug. 1 aggregate 80,005,000 bu, compared with 72,983,000 bu last year.

IGHTER CREDIT S REFLECTED BY RESERVE BANKS

BY O. A. MATHER.

anything further than the ten cent rate for call money last week needed to attest the continued ness of credit, that evidence is lied in the weekly statements the federal reserve banks published erday. While there has been recent talk of the money situation in the not distant future, thus there is nothing in the banking dition of the country to support a conclusion.

the New York and Chicago reserve banks again show an upturn in to the member banks. It is apparent that liquidation of commodities price reductions have not been effective thus far in decreasing the amount credit sought for agricultural and industrial purposes. Both banks also show declines in gold reserves and a less favorable reserve position. Both show increases in federal reserve note circulation.

Loan Expansion Continues.

The consolidated statement of the federal reserve banks showed an expansion in loans of $25,528,000, those government obligations increasing 1,146,000 and those on commercial paper increasing $14,382,000. Bills bought the market increased $1,394,000, so total bills on hand expanded $26,-,000. Despite the loan expansion, the member banks decreased their reserve account $28,432,000. Holdings of treasury certificates declined $1,387,000, so that earning assets expanded $25,532,000. Gold reserves declined $1,647,000, but auxiliary money increased $2,338,000, so total reserves increased $1,691,000, deposits increased $65,354,000, including an increase in government deposits of $28,624,000. Federal reserve note circulation expanded $2,877,000. The ratio of reserves to net deposit and note circulation liabilities combined was 43, compared with 43.1 per cent in the preceding week, while the ratio of gold reserves to note circulation, after setting 35 per cent against net deposit liabilities, was 47, compared with 47.2 per cent in the preceding week.

New York Loans Increase.

The report of the New York bank shows increase in loans of $3,040,343, those government obligations declining $2,-04, but those on commercial paper expanding $5,044,167. The bank reduced borrowings from sister institutions by ,000, this item now standing at $44,-. Bills bought in the market increased $4,134,977, so that total bills on expanded $10,475,320. Total earning assets increased $9,280,821. reserves receded $8,941,072 and reserves declined $7,787,135. Gross deposits increased $4,124,707, but this wholly accounted for by an increase ,173,901 in government deposits. reserve note circulation expanded 432,525. ratio of reserves to net deposit and circulation liabilities combined fell from 39.1 per cent in the preceding week, while the ratio of reserves deposits, after deducting 40 per gold reserve against note circulation to 36.6 from 37.9 per cent in the week.

Chicago Gold Declines.

statement of the Chicago federal showed an increase in loans , those on government obligations receding $2,021,986, but those commercial paper expanding $17,849,-. Bills bought declined $1,885,596, so total bills on hand increased $13,935,-. The member banks increased their reserve account $8,893,112. Total earning assets increased $13,935,632. Federal reserve note circulation increased . The ratio of reserves to net deposits and note circulation combined to 39.04 from 40.34 per cent in the preceding week, while the ratio of reserves note circulation, after setting aside 35 per cent against net deposits, fell to from 42.56 per cent in the preceding week.

STOCKS, RATES, COTTON, WHEAT, HAVE BAD DAY

The New York Times.

NewYork, Nov. 6.—[Special.]—Today was distinctly a bad day in all markets. On the stock exchange there was a decline that affected the entire list and carried some industrial stocks 2 to 7 points below Friday's closing. The foreign exchange market again was demoralized, rates in London falling nearly 2 cents further; Paris exchange followed suit and exchange on Italy, Holland, Switzerland, and Spain established new low levels for the period.

Cotton prices broke again, with the New York market for cash transactions reaching the lowest figure since May, 1917, while a decline of 9¾ cents in wheat brought the price for December delivery at $1.88⅝ per bushel, within 2 cents of the low figure reached in the violent and temporary break of last summer.

Stocks Are Unsettled.

The stock market opened fractionally lower, declined spasmodically and showed no recuperative power, although there were some recoveries from the lowest figures at the last. The market as a whole, including the railway shares, closed greatly unsettled and in some of the more speculative industrial shares there was evidence of forced selling. Standard Oil of New Jersey dropped 25 points, Mexican Petroleum, 6; Vanadium, 5; Pierce-Arrow, 3⅝. Declines ranging from fractions to more than 2 points were numerous among the industrials, while a number of the rails showed losses between one and two points.

Sterling exchange at today's lowest rate of $3.36¾ stood at the lowest since February and considerably nearer to that month's low record figure of $3.18 than to the $4.06¾ price to which it subsequently recovered in April. Francs at 5.98 cents were less than ¼ cent above their low record rate, the 5.79 rate of April 13.

Markets at Climax.

Taken altogether, the day's markets indicated the reaching of the season's climax in the task of simultaneously conducting the country's business at the time of its maximum normal requirements and providing for the liquidating movement which was bound to accompany the readjustment of prices and business in the great commodity markets.

The heavy liquidation of the last week in all the markets has been the sign that the line of least resistance and quickest results toward bringing the whole situation back to equilibrium is being followed. Credit must be had in larger amounts for industry and must, if necessary, be diverted from speculative uses. The fact that the underlying position in finance and business has been so thoroughly reorganized by the year's previous events in the markets is probably the best ground for believing that the present disorder of the markets must pretty nearly have run its course.

:CHICAGO·STOCK·TRANSACTIONS:

The trend of prices was weak in the week-end session on the Chicago stock exchange yesterday. Swift and Swift International were weak in the early trading, but a closing rally gave both fractional net gains. Union Carbide rights were weak and the shares declined a major fraction. Booth Fisheries continued its slump, dropping to 29½ for a net loss of 5⅛ points. Godchaux Sugar was off 3½. Chicago Elevated railways preferred, 1¾, and Western Knitting a point. Sears-Roebuck and Montgomery Ward declined fractionally. Standard Gas and Electric preferred advanced a point. In bonds, a sale of $5,000 Chicago City railway first mortgage 5s was made at 67, a decline of a point, while $1,000 Public Service 5s sold at 76½, an advance of a point.

Lincoln-Dixie and Leida Theaters First Mortgage 7% Gold Bonds

SECURITY

The Lincoln-Dixie Theater will have a seating capacity of 1,800, and will offer a high class vaudeville and motion picture program. It will be the equal of any theater of its size in Chicago.

The Leida Theater contains 644 seats, runs motion pictures exclusively, and has been in very successful operation for four years.

These bonds are a direct closed first mortgage on both buildings and land in fee, valued at a total of $500,000.

LOCATION

The Lincoln-Dixie Theater is located at the end of Illinois Street, Chicago Heights, on the only junction in the country of the Lincoln and Dixie highways. The Leida Theater is located on 120th Street, West Pullman. Both locations are in the business centers.

UNUSUALLY STRONG FEATURES

Building and land valued at OVER THREE TIMES amount of bonds. Earnings OVER NINE TIMES the greatest annual interest charge. Serial reduction unusually heavy—at final maturity only $22,500 in bonds are outstanding.

These theaters serve one of the largest and most prosperous manufacturing districts in the country. There are scores of factories in the vicinity, employing thousands of well paid, skilled workmen, who demand adequate entertainment and are well able to pay for it. There are no other theaters near by that can be compared to the Lincoln-Dixie and Leida.

Denominations $100, $500 and $1,000. Maturing one to five years. Normal Federal income tax of 4% paid by mortgagor.

This is an exceptionally attractive investment, which is already largely sold. Immediate orders and reservations are imperative. Call, telephone or write at once.

Why Don't YOU Join Us in This Big Money Making Almond Industry at Paso Robles, California?

The phenomenal expansion of the almond growing industry in the Paso Robles District, California, through the vast development work of our Association, is too big a story to tell in a single advertisement. We have, therefore, from week to week, given you a few installments setting forth various phases of our project.

We are pretty thoroughly convinced that practically every reader of this paper has become more or less interested in our co-operative almond orchard development plan—that some particular phase of it has appealed to YOU with special force.

To most people the big profits derived from almond growing make the strongest appeal.

Others have seen in this investment the very opportunity they have long been waiting for—their big chance to get away from the cold winters of the north and east—to lay aside the hard, grinding toil for a mere existence—and to own a home in sunny California, where they can take life easier and enjoy more of the things that make life worth living.

The question is: Have you put into action whatever interest you may have felt in the matter?

To be specific—

Have you sent for our big, handsomely illustrated book which tells the WHOLE story from start to finish? If you haven't, mail the coupon below at once and get your FREE COPY by return mail.

Have you attended any of our Free Lectures and taken a Moving Picture trip with us out to California? If you haven't, then be sure to come to Lyon & Healy Hall tomorrow evening. Don't miss this great treat.

Have you ever called at our offices on the 9th floor of the Lytton Building, viewed the interesting almond exhibit we have there, met the members of our organization and talked this matter over with them? If not, we extend you a cordial invitation to do so at any time that suits your convenience.

And we urge you to act promptly, because in all probability this will be

Our Last Selling Season

Today it is almost impossible to find the wonderful sea marl adobe soil of sufficient depth to insure vigorous, long-lived almond trees, located at an elevation that insures perfect air drainage. The two vital essentials of successful almond growing are:

FIRST, deep, porous soil that will hold moisture throughout long dry spells—this eliminating the necessity of irrigation—and that is also rich in lime, phosphates and nitrates—the plant food that almonds must have; and, SECOND, perfect AIR DRAINAGE; that is, the orchards must be planted on the warm hill tops and sides so that the early buds will not be killed by frost. We have only a limited acreage left that fully meets these requirements. We sell and plant no other kind. The 10-acre tracts are going fast. The end is not far off. So RIGHT NOW is the time for you to ACT. For remember, the Paso Robles District is the ONLY almond growing section in the entire State of California where sea marl adobe soil is found in large quantities—the only section where neither irrigation nor fertilization is required.

NOW, if ever, is the time for you to come in with us at the present low prices and on easy partial payment terms.

Developing Almond Orchards Our Most Important Work

It should be thoroughly understood that the selling of almond lands is merely incidental to the chief purpose of our organization, which is the development of almond orchards on a vast commercial scale, both for ourselves and our buyers, and the marketing of the crops at a profit for every one concerned.

Therefore, the Associated Almond Growers of Paso Robles is a PERMANENT organization. It necessarily must be so if for no other reason than to care for the orchards of the members of our own organization.

To this end we have secured the services of a number of the most skilled and experienced horticulturists to be found anywhere in the United States. These men are devoting their entire time and energy to the one single purpose of making every orchard under our management a big money making success for the owner. We have large mechanical equipment, which enables us to operate far more economically than could possibly be done by an individual or a small company.

Send for our booklet and see how thoroughly our organization is systematized and on what a vast scale we are now operating.

Strong Trust Agreement Safeguards Your Interests

Not only are your interests safeguarded by our organization, which must make our buyers' orchards, as well as our own, successful in order to realize our own profits, but you are given the added protection of a strong trust agreement which gives the largest measure of protection to the buyer that we know of in the horticultural history of California. This trust agreement provides that every dollar you pay for the purchase of an almond orchard from us goes to your trustee—the County National Bank and Trust Company of Santa Barbara, California—a strong and conservative national bank with assets of approximately $3,000,000. The money you pay is conserved and expended according to the terms of the trust agreement for the development of your almond orchard and such other overhead expense as may be necessary to the conduct of our Association for the benefit of each and every tract owner. This trust agreement even goes so far as to provide that we shall purchase no land for almond orchard development without the written consent of your Trustee.

We want you to know more about the strength, the solidity, the stability of our Organization. We want you to have a clearer understanding of the vast amount of work we have already done in the way of almond orchard development and of the still greater work that lies directly ahead of us. We want to explain how easily You can own an almond orchard with no big outlay of cash, paying for it partly in easy payments and partly out of your crops.

If you will call at our office we are sure you will be convinced that this is just the kind of an investment that you want—an investment that steadily increases in value and in profits.

See the interesting almond exhibit we have on display—almonds from our own trees—beautiful panoramic views of our orchards in all stages of development—and a magnificent aeroplane view of the state of California showing the mountains, valleys, motor roads, cities, towns, nut and fruit growing sections of the entire state. This remarkable oil painting showing in detail the topography of California measures 15 by 4 feet. It, alone, is well worth while coming to our office to see.

Call at your convenience.

You will not be urged to buy a single foot of land. But you certainly owe it to yourself at least to investigate. It is an opportunity that is now fast drawing to a close.

FREE MOVING PICTURES AND LECTURE ON ALMOND GROWING

Lyon & Healy Hall, 64 E. Jackson Blvd., Monday Evening, November 8th, 8 o'Clock.

Come early tomorrow night so you can get a good seat. Our "Movie Special California Limited" leaves on time at 8—and you don't want to miss the "train!"

Leaving Chicago in the grip of a snowstorm, three days later will find us splashing in the surf at Long Beach, Cal. And what wonderful sights we will see on the way—the famous Raton Pass, the Grand Canyon—the far-stretching plains of New Mexico and Arizona, the Petrified Forests and the Painted Desert, glimpses of Indian life in the great Southwest, the orange, lemon and fig groves of Southern California, the scenic wonders of Yosemite; and we'll finally land at Paso Robles, where the big, sweet-meat almonds grow. Here you will see almond culture in all its various stages—how the ground is broken and pulverized by our big tractor-drawn plows, subsoilers and harrows—how the trees are planted, pruned and cared for by our experts—how the crops are gathered and harvested.

Our lecturer will tell you all about our project—make everything clear to you. So be sure to come. All seats are free. Tomorrow night at 8, Lyon & Healy Hall, 64 E. Jackson Boulevard.

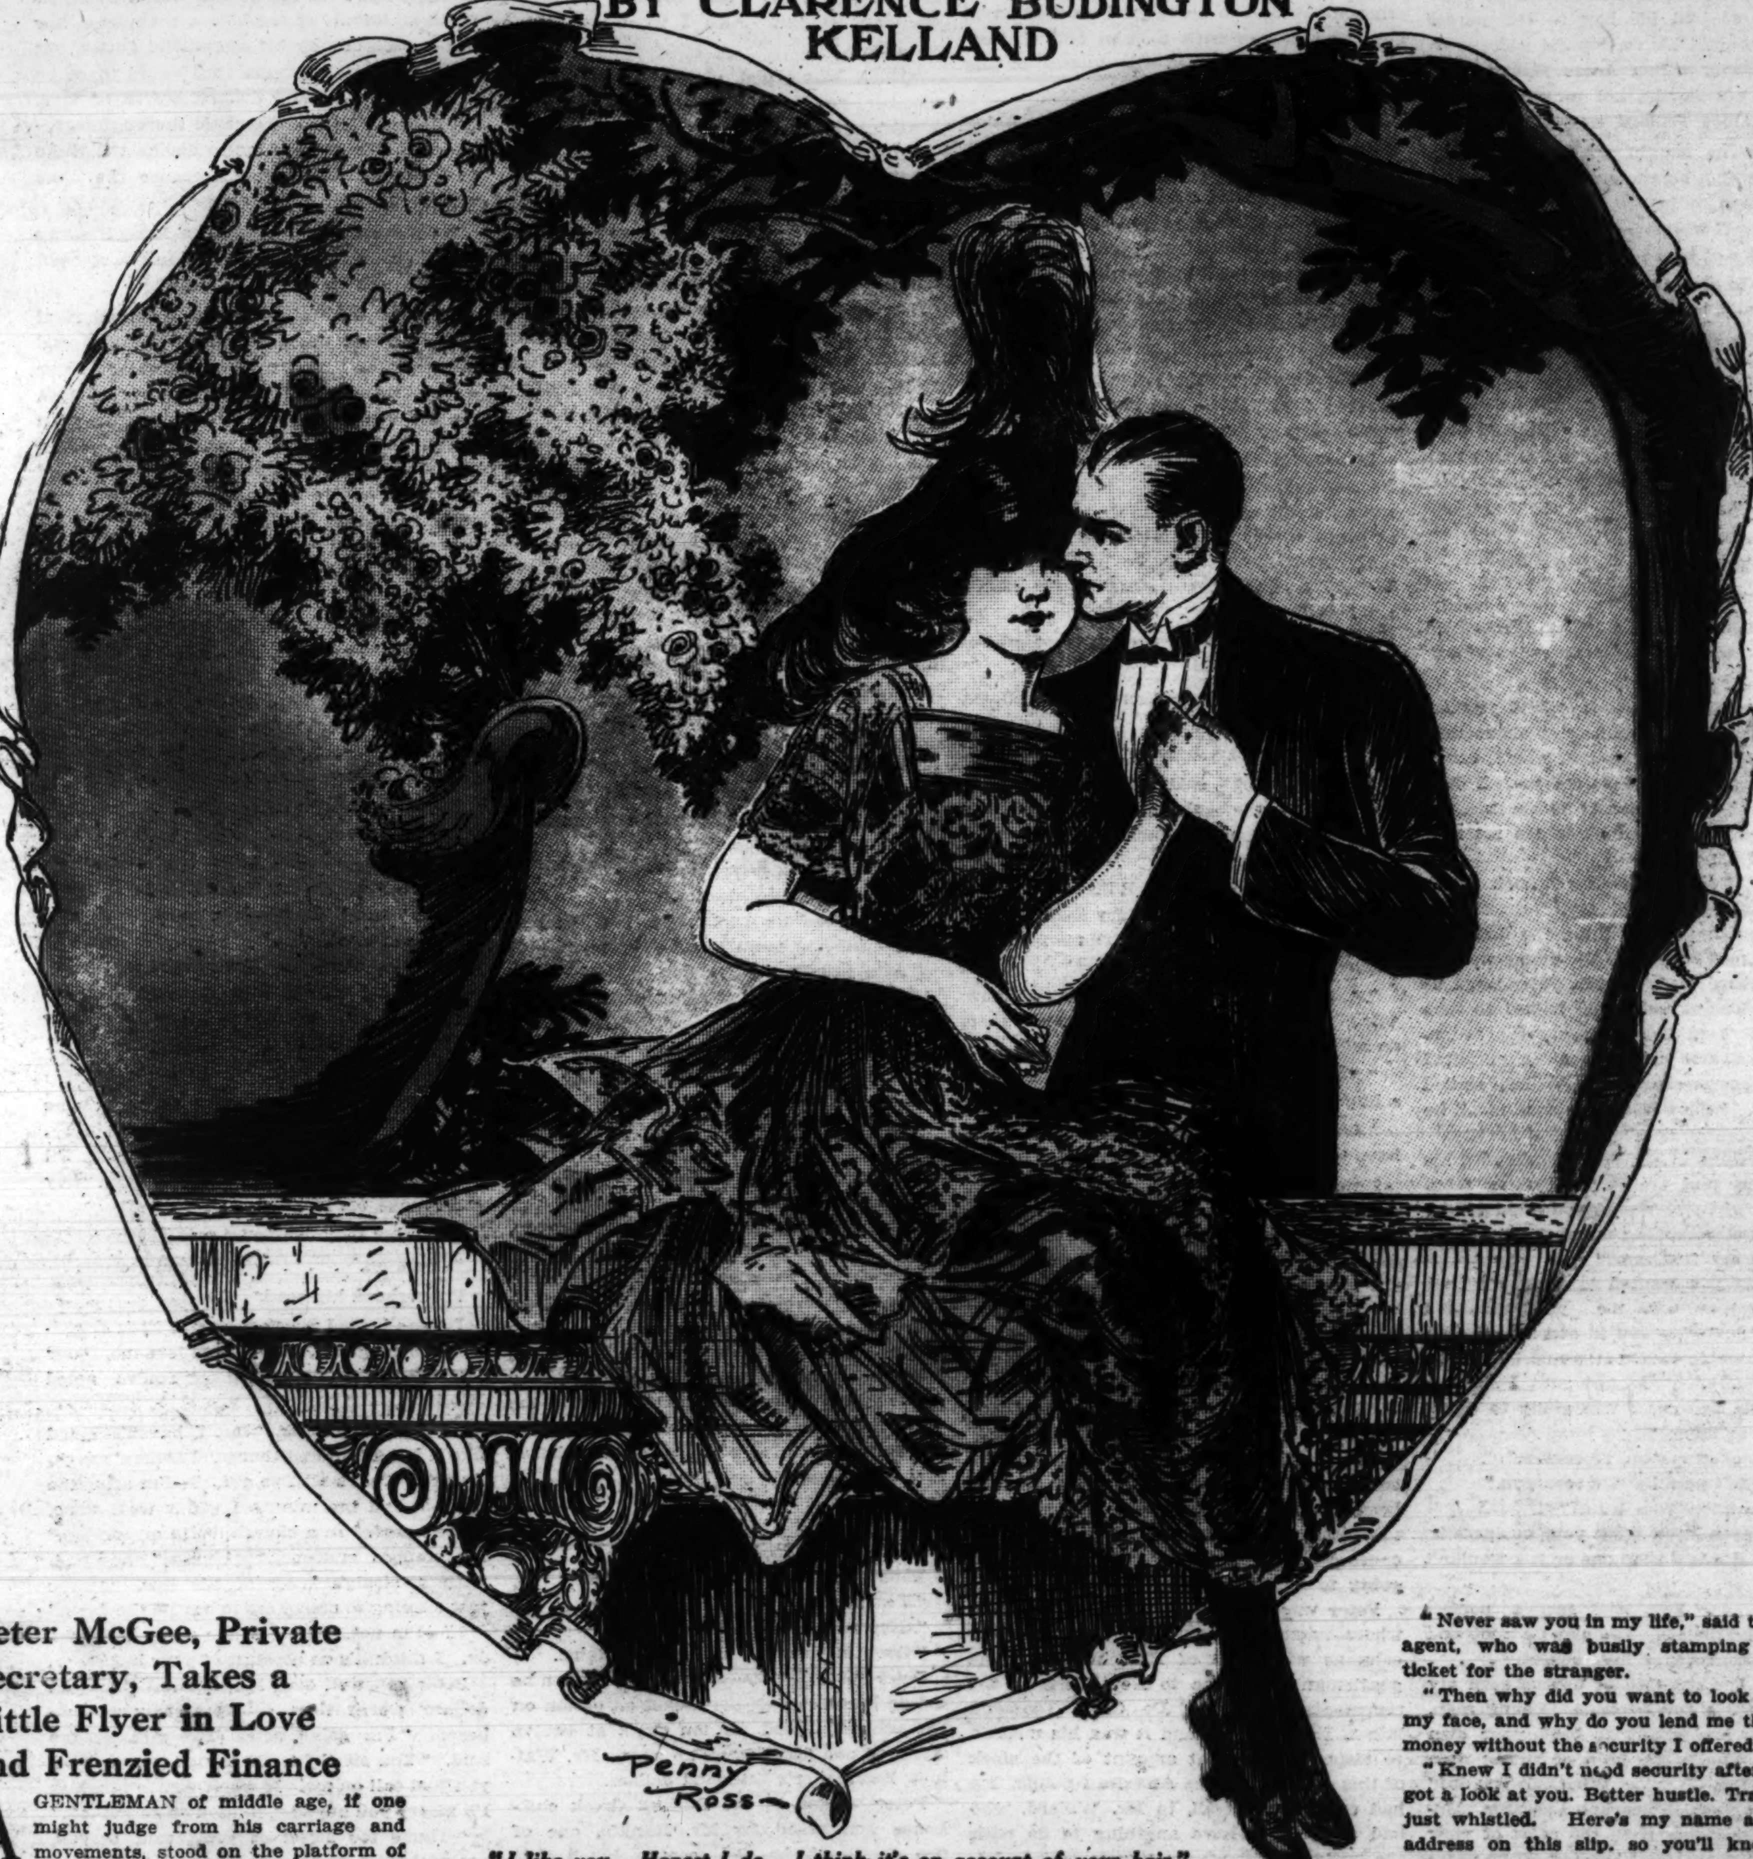
WITH THE HELP OF THE DUKE

BY CLARENCE BUDINGTON KELLAND



"I like you. Honest I do. I think it's on account of your hair."

Peter McGee, Private Secretary, Takes a Little Flyer in Love and Frenzied Finance

A GENTLEMAN of middle age, if one might judge from his carriage and movements, stood on the platform of the railroad station in a small Vermont town. The evening was cold and he was muffled to the eyes by overcoat collar and neckerchief. In the growing darkness one gathered the impression that he was dressed as a gentleman of means should be. He turned toward the station door, thrusting his hand inside his overcoat and into his trousers pocket as he did so, and then he paused suddenly, with a gesture of perturbed surprise. He flung open his coat and explored all his pockets, after which he rushed out upon the platform to see if the carriage which had brought him from the hotel was still in sight. It was not. He glanced at his watch. His train was due in three minutes.

After a moment's hesitation, and with apparent reluctance, he stepped to the ticket window and peered through at the agent, a young man with fiery red hair which had flamed in the world not longer than twenty-five years.

"Young man," he said, "I have lost my pocketbook. My train is due in two minutes. I've got to be in New York in the morning. Can you lend me fifty dollars?" He felt of his cravat and drew from it a pin which he extended toward the agent. "This is worth two hundred dollars," he said.

The red haired agent scowled and craned his neck to get a better view of the man who made this extraordinary request.

"Come inside," he said, motioning toward a communicating door.

When the stranger was inside the office the youthful agent removed the shade from his lamp. "Would you mind taking off your hat and turning down your collar?"

The stranger hesitated a second, but complied. The young man studied his features briefly and walked over to a safe in the corner, from which he took an envelope bearing his own name, and drew from it five ten dollar bills.

"Put your pin back in your tie," he said, and handed the currency to the stranger.

The older man appeared nonplussed, but presently seemed to sense an explanation.

"O, you recognize me?"

"Never saw you in my life," said the agent, who was busily stamping a ticket for the stranger.

"Then why did you want to look at my face, and why do you lend me this money without the security I offered?"

"Knew I didn't need security after I got a look at you. Better hustle. Train just whistled. Here's my name and address on this slip. so you'll know where to return the money. Peter McGee is the name. . . . There she comes. Stops only a minute."

"Thank you, young man." The gentleman eyed Peter a moment as one gazes as a strange and unexpected phenomenon. "Good-night."

Three days later Peter McGee received a letter containing a check for sixty dollars. He cashed it, replaced fifty in his envelope in the safe, and returned the extra ten to the sender, whose name appeared to be Amos Willard. Peter did not recall having heard the name before. It was associated with nothing in his mind, and he promptly forgot the incident. It was a small courtesy, and Peter was almost as ready to perform small courtesies for anybody who happened along as he was to take off his coat and skin his able knuckles against their jaws in case the circumstances seemed to require such treatment.

A week afterward, when the whole matter had passed from his mind, he received a telegram which requested him to come to New York on a certain date, all expenses paid, to discuss a business proposition. It was signed Amos Willard.

Peter thought it over, and his thoughts ran something after this fashion: "I'm tired of this town and this job. There's nothing in it. I've got to quit some time if I ever expect to get anywhere. New York is a good place to get somewhere in. There's nobody dependent on me, so I can't hurt anybody but myself. Guess I'll take a look."

Whereupon he resigned his position, pocketed his savings, which amounted to some four hundred-odd dollars, and went to New York. He checked his bag in the parcel room and inquired his way to the address on lower Broadway which Amos Willard had given him, but he did not inquire of anybody who Amos Willard was.

The office he sought was on the fourteenth floor of a bigger building than Peter had ever been in before that moment, and the office itself was more sumptuous. It reminded Peter of books he had read.

"I want to see Mr. Willard," he said to a young woman behind a desk.

"Have you an appointment?"

"Yes."

"At what hour?"

"Right now," said Peter. He had come all the way from Vermont to see this man, at this man's request, and he was not going to be kept waiting.

"Your name?"

"Peter McGee."

"One moment, please."

She returned presently. "Mr. Willard will see you at ten o'clock tomorrow morning," she said.

Peter's red hair bristled. "Will you say to Mr. Willard that I am here at his request. I don't know him nor what he wants, except that he seems to want to see me. I don't know how badly he wants to see me, but it's got to be badly enough to see me now. Please tell him that."

"I—why, I've never delivered such a message to Mr. Willard."

"You can never do a thing the first time but once," said Peter; and the young woman, impressed with the idea that Peter must be a very important individual indeed to take such a tone with her employer, returned to Mr. Willard and delivered an expurgated version of the message. Mr. Willard smiled delightedly. "Show the young man in," he said.

As Peter came in Mr. Willard extended his hand. "I'm glad to see you, young man. Sit down. . . . Would you mind telling me just what reasoning urged you to do as I asked in my telegram?"

"You said you wanted to discuss a business proposition with me. That meant I could be valuable to you in some way. If I could be valuable to you it would be profitable to me. . . . At any rate, I stood to lose nothing, because I was going to throw up my job at home."

"You'd looked me up, of course."

"No. Didn't need to. I'd seen you."

"But you know who I am?"

"I don't even know what your business is; but I knew it was a good one or you wouldn't be in it."

"Um. . . . You lend me, a perfect stranger, fifty dollars. You give up a job and come to New York at my request. . . . And all on the strength of having seen my face once for a few seconds. Young man, I'll say you are willing to back your own judgment. That's the kind of young man I'm looking for. . . . What can you do?"

"Stenographer. Telegraph operator. Understand railroading from the point of view of a small station. Bookkeeping. Two years in the state university."

"What have you been earning?"

"Eighty-three thirty-three a month."

"My private secretary has gone to take charge of my office in London. It was a promotion. The place is vacant and I'm offering it to you."

"I take it."

Mr. Willard smiled again. "Without asking about the salary?"

Peter shrugged his shoulders.

"The salary will be seventy-five dollars a week. When will you be ready to come to work?"

"I'm at work now," said Peter, and he hung his hat upon a hook. . . .

This is the true story of the manner in which Peter McGee became associated with Amos Willard. Fantastic and absurd rumors have been set afloat by gossiping tongues to account for the appearance of this red headed young man in the affairs of one of the first financiers of his day. All who read this are in a position to deny them authoritatively.

If Peter was unaware of the identity and importance of Amos Willard when he arrived in New York, he did not long remain so. He soon discovered that very big men indeed were humble in Willard's presence, not only American business men, but others from far-off places where wealth was dug from the earth or was gleaned from the vegetation of the earth or was dipped up out of the waters that covered the earth. . . . Peter saw and enjoyed it all, and while he was sometimes amazed, it was a point of pride with him never to display his amazement, and to accept the most remarkable occurrences with a calm and matter-of-fact air that tickled the humor of his employer.

Peter had been private secretary to Amos Willard some three months before that event occurred which quite revolutionized his ambitions and furnished him with a definite objective in life. Peter judged the occurrence to be about nineteen years old; as a matter of fact she was much older—she was twenty.

She entered the private door and stared at Peter's red hair and said: "Where's father?"

"Thank you," said Peter, and then he blushed a very little and looked confused.

"I beg your pardon?"

Manifestly Peter could not explain that he had said "Thank you" involuntarily to nature or the universe, or the gods-of-things-as-they-are because they had shown him exactly what he wanted, so he said: "Mr. Willard is away for the afternoon—but I am here."

"What I wanted was a parent," said Miss Willard.

"A parent's private secretary is almost the same thing."

"But I wanted a hundred dollars."

"One moment," said Peter. He stepped downstairs to the bank, cashed his own check for the amount, and grumbled at the elevator for mounting so slowly.

"Thank you," said Miss Willard. "You're a much more efficient secretary than father's last one. He was afraid to give me money if father wasn't here."

"A good private secretary should know what his employer would do—and then do it."

"How do you know father would give me a hundred dollars?"

"Because," said Peter, "anybody would have to give you anything you asked for."

Now, if Peter had thought up that speech, or had offered it with an air of gallantry, he would certainly have been snubbed. But he said it as one making an observation upon the obvious, and with such an air of sincerity that he did not seem at all forward or impertinent, and Miss Willard smiled and examined his red hair again as she tucked the bills away in her purse.

"Thank you," she said . . . and was gone.

The next time she came Miss Willard called him Mr. McGee, so he knew she had been asking questions about him, and was overjoyed, but his joy did not last long, because he read in the paper that she was going to marry a duke.

Peter was acquainted with the nobleman whose name was connected in the society columns with that of Miss Willard. The gentleman had come to New York as the representative of the De Groot Diamond Mines, Incorporated, and it was his mission to dispose of a great amount of the stock of this company to the American public. He had come, first of all, to Mr. Willard, who had declined to have anything to do with the business, but who, owing to certain letters of introduction carried by the Duke of Tenstairs, had shown him certain social courtesies of which the duke had taken able advantage. Mr. Willard, who often—perhaps to satisfy his sense of humor—asked Peter his opinion of certain gentlemen, said to his secretary after the duke's first call, "And what is your judgment of his grace, Peter?"

"I'd take his scarfpin as security," said Peter.

It was after Miss Willard's second appearance in the office that Peter wrote his resignation and laid it on his employer's desk.

"What's this, Peter?" Mr. Willard asked in surprise. "Somebody hiring you away from me? Dissatisfied? What is it?"

"Perfectly satisfied, Mr. Willard. Personal matter."

"As for instance?"

Peter drew a long breath and wriggled his shoulders as he had been seen to do on numerous occasions before embarking upon physical conflict.

"I have seen Miss Willard twice," he said. "She is exactly what I want most in the world. I'm going to try to get her. You wouldn't allow me, of course, so I resign. Only square thing to do."

Mr. Willard did not laugh, nor, on the contrary did he scowl. He seemed rather sorry.

"Peter," he said, "I'm afraid you're going to burn your fingers. . . . What would you do with my daughter if you got her? Depend on the old man for the wherewithal?"

Peter shook his head.

"What then? Think it's fair to ask her her to live on seventy-five a week, or ten thousand a year? She couldn't do it. I wouldn't let her. Also I won't support a son-in-law."

"Don't blame you, sir. . . . If I remember, you were earning eighteen dollars a week at my age. You told me that."

"Yes."

"Well, sir?"

Mr. Willard laughed. "Resignation rejected," he said. "I can't allow my daughter to deprive me of a secretary. On the other hand, I sha'n't help my secretary deprive me of a daughter. You've set your mind on her, and you've a right to have a try for her. But, in decency, you can't make love to her until you can take care of her, can you?"

"No, sir. . . . If I had a million?"

"You haven't," said Mr. Willard, and there the matter ended.

Now Peter was a frugal young man. He arrived in New York with a few hundreds of dollars. He had added fifty dollars a week to these since his arrival, and now had on deposit upward of a thousand. For days after his interview with Mr. Willard he looked at his bank book and demanded of himself how he could multiply his fortune a thousand times—and did not find a satisfactory answer. However, he was determined and far from faint hearted.

Early in June Mr. Willard called Peter to his club on a matter of business and kept him to lunch. At the next table four gentlemen were talking golf. "We've got to add another eighteen holes," said one of them.

"Right off," said another.

"I suppose we could buy the Watkins farm adjoining our present property."

"At a price."

"Better see about it right away, then."

That was all Peter heard, but it set his mind to work.

"Who are those gentlemen at the next table?" he asked.

Mr. Willard told him. "Golf cranks—every one," he said.

"Where do they play?"

"Purling Creek."

"Are you going to need me this afternoon, sir?"

"No, Peter. Take the day off."

Peter did so. He went to his bank, drew a thousand dollars in cash, and took the Long Island railroad to the town where the Purling Brook club was located. A jitney carried him to the links and beyond to the farm house occupied by Mr. Watkins. Mr. Watkins was in. Peter introduced himself and his mission.

"Will you set a price on this farm?" he asked.

"Fifteen hundred an acre."

Peter whistled. "How many acres?"

"Two hundred."

"Give you a thousand."

"Good afternoon," said Mr. Watkins.

Peter did not leave—for an hour. When he did go he carried on his pocket an option on the property, good for ten days, at twelve hundred and fifty dollars an acre. Mr. Watkins kept Peter's thousand dollars.

Peter walked to the Purling Creek clubhouse and asked for Mr. Rankin, one of the gentlemen he had seen at lunch that noon. Mr. Rankin had just emerged from a club shower, and was in excellent humor, but Peter ruffled it somewhat.

"I have just bought the Watkins farm, Mr. Rankin," he said, "and I am offering it to your club first."

"At what figure, young man?"

"Seventeen hundred and fifty dollars an acre."

"Robbery."

Peter shrugged his shoulders. "I know where I can dispose of it for subdivision purposes," he said. "But I thought it was only fair to give you first chance."

"Give you twelve hundred and fifty."

"I have one price. That is the last word. I have an hour to spare, and can give you that long to decide."

Mr. Rankin started at Peter as if he were of half a mind to have him shown vigorously off the premises He compromised, however, by leading him into the lounge, giving him a cigar, and excusing himself to talk to his fellow governors. Peter waited in a frame of mind. Well within the hour five gentlemen returned and argued with Peter eloquently, but their eloquence was futile. His price remained where he had set it, and they capitulated. At 6 o'clock he left that place with a check in his pocket for one hundred and one thousand dollars. As he rode toward the station there was one pleasant thought in his mind, namely, "Now I can decently make a hundred thousand dollars' worth of love to Dorcas Willard."

Fortune favored Peter. Mr. Willard sprained his ankle and was confined to his Long island home. For two weeks Peter became an inmate of the house, occupied a few hours each day by his secretarial duties, but at liberty for the remaining hours to make a hundred thousand dollars' worth of love. He did so with characteristic thoroughness—and in the process came to dislike the Duke of Tenstairs thoroughly, because the duke was very much in the way.

"But remember," he said to himself many times, "that a hundred thousand is a devil of a ways from being a million."

Because the duke was his principal rival Peter studied the man from all angles and perspectives. As has been indicated, Peter did not believe the duke to be a good risk unless supported by ample security. In short, he suspected the duke. He believed the duke was incapable of affection, and would cheerfully have substituted any other girl for Dorcas Willard if the financial advantages were equal or superior. What Dorcas thought about the duke he could not determine for a long time—not until he found her crying in the sunken garden one afternoon. It was a very good place to cry, and a splendid place to be comforted. Peter rather forgot to limit himself to a hundred thousand dollars' worth of attention to Dorcas, with the satisfactory, but unexpected result, that she wept on his shoulder.

"I don't want to marry him. . . . He's old, and he's a stick, and I don't want to live in England . . . and . . . ."

"Then kick him out," said Peter elegantly.

"It's auntie. She's—she's just shoving him down my throat. . . . I—oh, I don't know what to do. Some day she'll argue me into it, and then my life will be all smashed to smithereens. . . . I—oh, I like you lots better than him."

"So do I," said Peter.

Dorcas looked up suddenly. "I know," she said. "I could marry you—just as easy, Peter. I—I like you a lot. That's what I'll do. I'll—I'll elope with you, and then they can't make me marry anybody else."

"You bet they couldn't," said Peter.

"Come on. . . . Now," said Dorcas.

Peter shook his head.

Dorcas looked puzzled, then a little frightened, then aghast. "Don't you love me, Peter McGee?" she demanded. "You've acted like it."

"I do," said Peter, "but I haven't acted like it but a hundred thousand dollars' worth. I can't. That's all I've got. I—I'm after the million, and the minute I get it we'll elope, or be married in a church, or in an airship." He stopped suddenly. "Unless," he said, with a straightening of his lips, "you're just offering to marry me to escape the duke."

"I—I'm not, Peter. I like you. Honest I do. I think it's on account of your hair."

Peter ran well over his hundred thousand dollars' worth then, but presently remembered. "I'm going after that million," he said. "You sit tight. If things get too hot, you just call on me. If worst comes to worst I'll marry you anyhow, million or no million."

"That's too sweet of you," said Dorcas, not without a certain grain of irony.

Now, Peter McGee had scrutinized the Duke of Tenstairs with shrewd persistency, and in scrutinizing the duke he had also given of his best thought to the De Groot Diamond Mines, Incorporated. He knew all the duke had to tell about them, all the public knew, all skilled operators on the market believed, and a few things he had surmised for himself. He knew that the stock of the company was stationary at 40, with a par value of 100. He knew it was regarded as speculative to a degree, and he knew a certain group of interested men had sent to investigate the best and most reliable mining expert in the United States. Before the public traded in De Groot it awaited the report of this expert.

Peter believed the duke knew as much about the properties as the expert could discover, but the duke was clinging with British tenacity to his knowledge. Peter also believed the duke would use his information at the right moment for his own benefit, and will be married, just as you have planned. She loves you. I have known it for months. I have seen this day and hour coming—yes, I have seen it even more clearly than she, for while she struggled desperately to deceive herself she has never been able to deceive me. You are a strong, attractive man. The glamor of mystery rests upon you. You have done prodigious deeds here, Mr. Percival. All of this I recognize, and I should be unfair to my own sense of honor were I to deny you my respect and gratitude. I must be fair. Fear has been the cause of my attitude toward you, not fear of you, sir, but fear for my niece.

"Now I am confronted by the inevitable. The thing I have tried so hard to avoid has come to pass. In these circumstances I am forced to confess that I have not been without a real, true admiration for you. I admit that I have felt a great security with you in command of our camp. But, even so, you are not the man I would have chosen to be Ruth's husband. The time is surely coming when we will be delivered from this island prison, when we will return to the life and the people and the conditions we knew before catastrophe made a new world for us. I am thinking of that time, Mr. Percival, and not of the present. I fear my niece is thinking only of the present and not of the future."

He had listened with grave deference. "Forgive me if I appear impertinent, Mrs. Spofford, but is it not, after all, the past you are thinking about?"

She did not answer at once. His question had startled her.

"Youth does not live in the past," he went on quietly. "It deals only with the present. I love Ruth Clinton—I love her with the cleanest love a man can feel for a woman. It will not alter when we leave this island. If we are fated to spend the rest of our lives here, it will endure to the end."

"You are speaking for yourself," she said. "Can you speak for Ruth?"

"No, I cannot," he admitted. "Nor can you," he added boldly. "That is what I meant when I asked if you were not thinking chiefly of the past. I cannot say that Ruth will love me always, but I can say this: She loves me now, as I love her, and in her heart she has said just what I said to you a moment ago—that her love will endure."

"I daresay I do think more of the past than of the present, Mr. Percival. You are right about the future. It is a blank page, to be glorified by what is set down upon it. Fate has thrown you two together. Perhaps it was so written in the past that you despise. A single turn of the mysterious wheel of fortune brought you into her life. Half a turn—the matter of minutes—and you would never have seen each other, and you would have gone your separate ways to the end of time without even knowing that the other existed. No doubt you both contend that you cannot live without each other. It is the usual wail of lovers. But are you quite as certain in your minds that you would have perished if you had never seen each other?"

The note of irony did not escape him. He smiled. "In that case, Mrs. Spofford, we should not have existed at all."

She shook her head despairingly. "You are too clever for me," she said. "I warn you, however, that I shall do everything in my power to persuade Ruth to reconsider her promise to you."

"Nothing could be fairer than that," said he, without rancor. "If she comes to me this afternoon and says she has changed her mind and cannot marry me, I shall not ask her again. Will you be kind enough, and fair enough, Mrs. Spofford, to include that in your argument? It may spare her a lot of worry and anxiety."

He bowed ceremoniously and took his departure. She went to the window and, drawing aside the curtain, watched him until he disappeared down the road. Then, as the curtain fell into place, she said to herself: "Their children will be strong and beautiful."

A fortnight later Ruth and Percival were married. He was now governor of Trigger island. The ceremony took place at noon on the green in front of the government building (an imposing name added to the already extensive list by which the "meeting house" was known), and was attended by the whole population of the island. His desire for a simple wedding had been vigorously, almost violently, opposed by the people. Led by Randolph Fitts and the eloquent Malone, they demanded the pomp and ceremony of a state wedding. As governor of Trigger island, they clamored, it was his duty to be married in the presence of a multitude.

A general holiday was declared, a great "barbecue" was arranged (minus the roasted ox), and when it was all over the joyous throng escorted the governor and his lady to the gayly decorated "barge" that was to transport them from the landing to the Doraine.

Olga Obosky made the bride's bonnet and veil, and draped the latter on the morning of the wedding day. Like the fabled merchants of the Arabian Nights she appeared to the bride-elect and displayed her wares. From the depths of her theater trunks she produced a bewildering assortment of laces, chiffon, silks, and the filmiest of gauzes.

"You must not be afraid zat they will contaminate you," she explained, noting the look of dismay in Ruth's eyes. "Zey have never adorned my body, zey have never been expose to the speculating eye of the public, zey have not hid from view these charms of mine. No, these are fair and virtuous fabrics. It is you who will be the first to wear them, my friend. Take your choice. See! Zis piece, is it not wonderful? It comes from Budapest. One day it would perhaps have caressed my flesh in the Dance of the Sultan's Dream, but, alas, zat is not to be. Feel, my friend—take it in your hand. See? You could hide it in the palm of one of them—and presto! Throw it outspread, and it is like a blanket of mist filling the room. It is priceless. It is unobtainable. None except Obosky can afford to dance in such imperial stuff as this. Take it—it is yours. It is my pleasure that you should have it. Better far it should be your bridal veil than to drape these abandoned legs of mine."

And so it was that the scant costume of the sultan's dream became the bridal veil of the governor's lady.

If Olga Obosky was sore at heart, she gave no sign. On the contrary, she revealed the sprightliest interest in the coming nuptials. Percival himself had told her the news within the hour after the interview with Mrs. Spofford. In his blind happiness, he had failed to notice the momentary stiffening of her body as if resisting a shock; he did not see the hurt, baffled look that darkened her eyes for a few seconds, and the swiftly passing pallor that stole into her face and vanished almost instantly. He saw only the challenging smile that followed close upon these fleeting signs, and the mocking gleam in her eyes.

"So?" she had said. "So the citadel is yours, my friend. Hail to the chief! I salute you. But consider, O conqueror, what it is you are about to do. You are setting a woeful example. There will be a stampede, a panic. People will trample each other under foot in ze mad rush for captivity. The wedding bell will crack under ze strain of so much ringing. Everybody will be getting married, now zat they find it is so easy and so simple. I congratulate you, my friend. You have been very slow. I have said she was yours for the asking, you will remember. She is good, she is beautiful, she is pure gold, my friend. I am her friend. Do not ever forget, my Percivall, I am her friend."

He flushed warmly. He could not misinterpret her meaning. He spoke slowly, deliberately. It was renunciation on her part.

"I understand, Olga," he said.

She smiled and shrugged her shoulders.

"O, but you do not understand," she cried. "You are so very much perplexed. It is enough for me that you are perplexed. I am content. I am the puzzle you will never solve. So! La, la! You will never cease to wonder. Look!"

She pointed her finger at a man who was crossing the green below them.

"I am a puzzle to zat man also. He thought that he understood."

"Landover? What do you mean?"

A spasm of fury transformed her features. She hissed out the words:

"I did spit in his face last night, zat is all."

The 13th of April, 1918, came on Saturday. Defying superstition, Ruth selected it as her wedding day. It was a bright, warm autumn day, bestowed by a gallant sun, and there was great rejoicing over this evidence of God's approval. It came as a winter's whim, for that night the skies were black and thunderous; the winds roared savagely between the lofty walls of Split mountain and whined across the decks of the slanting Doraine, snug in the little basin, while out on the boundless deep the turmoil of hell was raging.

And so began the honeymoon of the stowaway and the lady fair, even as the "voyage" of the jockey and his bride had begun a fortnight before.

"Another slick lookin' gazabo—looked mighty well to do; must a been some kind o' mechanic or a banker—he says he ain't got no change, so he offers me a flock o' oil stock. I turns up my nose an' I says: 'Say, do I look like fish to you? You can't stick me with that queer junk. If you don' beat it I'll turn you over to a cop.'

"He says, 'What do you want—Liberty bonds?' I says, 'Yes, an' I take 'em at face value, which is more than what a lot o' youse fawraners what calls yourself Americans 'll do.' That shut him up, an' he comes in with a quarter—little enough. If I got to give each o' them Boolgarians a lesson in citizenship, five minutes' argument an' a lecture, for two bits I'll starve like a gent.

"I tries to put the bee on a fat woman ten minnits later. She says, 'You poor man—here, go and get yourself a square meal'—an' she tinkles two dimes an' a penny in my fin. I looks at it an' says, 'Lady, where'd you get your idees o' the price o' square meals?' She never answers me, but ducks like a coward, havin' skinned a man what never done her no harm, an' protected by what we call laws an' justice again my follerin' her an' pastin' her one like I should of. She's the kind what I bet she goes to church on Sund'ys an' claims to be a Christian. A profiteer, that's what she is!

"Why, it was only the other night I forget for a half a minnit the decadence o' the decade, an' when a live one come to'rds me I bust right into the old spiel—before I could think. I begin givin' him the good old canvas, bracin' him, an' whisp'rin' in a hollow voice that I been goin' from place to place lookin' for work, but ev'rybody turned me from the door. He backs up a step an' slants me up an' down an' says for me to tell that stuff to Sweeny—they wasn' no such thing these times as no work.

"He thought he had me stopped, but I done a quick think, an' I says, 'No, sir; in my line o' work they ain' no vacancies.' He says, 'An' what's your line o' work?' I says, 'I'm a bartender.' Well, you could o' knocked him for a gool. The tears spurts to his eyes an' he says, 'Bartender! O, what sacred mem'ries that gentle word brings back to me. Here, old scout'—an' he palms me a handful o' chicken feed. The nex' gink I tries it on it don't work so good, though. He up an' slams at me: 'Bartender? It took us a couple o' hundred years to eradicate that dirty word out o' the langwidge.' An' he shoves me offen the curb an' beats it.

"Now, how you gonna be a forchune teller an' know in advancet which way a party is gonna hop?

Now the wet can'idates is frantically tryin' to convince the drys that both boys is members o' their club an' is vyin' with each another to see which one is most in favor o' women's votes.

"If they was one thing left that was needed to push the nation on the fritz it's to let women vote. That's all! Can you imagine a gang o' hens troopin' to the sacred huntin' groun's where you an' I was accustomed to exercisin' our unalienable rights o' indicatin' with a X the people's choices?

"They say business requires stability. Well, they ain' no more important business in the nation than what votin' is, is there? Votin', then, if anything, calls for stability. An' how you gonna get any with a few million dames let loose to mark ballots right an' left, right an' wrong, as they sees fit? What good is voters if you don' know how they're gonna vote? They ain' no other trade in the world run like that. Merchants knows what goods they're gonna get in an' what goods they're gonna shove out, sometimes years ahead. "Politicians is so busy straddlin' pro'bition, which they hate but which they're for, an' women's votes, which they detest but which they boost, that they ain' hardly got time to enac' no legislation exceptin' to raise the rev'nue rates an' tighten up the enforcement stachoots appertainin' to that eighteent' amendment.

"The national debt don' worry nobody, becus what we owe fawran countries we don' never have to pay, since the fawraners is gonna kill each other off till they won' be nobody left to collect, an' what we owe ourself—well, what does the right hand care what the left hand doeth?

"Well, what are you gonna do about it?" asked Luke, the Dude, with his phlegmatic cough, as he shot a string tied cuff.

"I'm gonna let it go," said Slim. "The world ain't been so by jingo to me that I'm gonna get a lame back pushin' it back on the track."

would not scruple to rook his confreres in London. In short, Peter fancied the duke as an expert in the gentle art of the Double Cross.

"It would be a beautiful thing," Peter said to himself, "if I could make the duke finance my million dollars' worth of love-making." Peter contemplated the idea and became fond of it.

As private secretary to Mr. Willard, Peter had potential advantages to the Duke of Tenstairs. Peter perceived it, and allowed the duke to have his way about it. Undoubtedly Peter possessed crumbs of information which would be vastly profitable to a mercenary nobleman, and who can blame such a nobleman if he rather condescended to such a secretary, and flattered him and appeared to give him much of his confidence? Certainly not Peter.

"Everything hinges on the report of the American expert," said the duke to Peter, and he showed his white teeth through a smile.

"Without doubt," said Peter.

"The report is due," said the duke, with meaning.

"Indeed."

"It would be advantageous if one knew what it contained ahead of all others," said the duke.

"Naturally," said Peter.

"Now, I wouldn't go so far as to say I know the contents of that report," said the duke with a very knowing look, "but I have done my best—I have done my best."

"And your best would be very good," said Peter.

"I rather fancy so," said the duke.

He wants me to think he knows what the report will say, said Peter to himself, and consequently he doesn't know what it will say. But I'll bet a cookie he knows mighty well whether those properties are any good or not. We'll see.

"If," said the duke, "the public knew what I have an idea I know, the bottom might drop out of De Groot—and then, again, it might not."

Peter was silent to that, but he said to himself, "If this bird sells a share of stock, I'm wise. We'll see . . . Now if I was a crook and wanted to pin the bee on my friends in a deal like this, how would I go about it?"

So Peter endeavored to place himself in the shoes of a crook, and to function mentally in crooked style. It was easy, for the mental processes made use of in such cases are usually absurdly simple. "If it's good," said Peter, "the duke will sell. He'll kick that stock down to nothing, and then he'll buy in. Um. . . ."

"I wonder," said the duke, "if you would do me a favor?"

"Certainly," said Peter.

"Sell a hundred shares of De Groot at the market. I don't want to be known in the trade."

"Naturally," said Peter.

He went to his room that night and speculated upon possibilities and likelihoods. "I've got a hundred thousand dollars," he said. "It's no good. I might as well have nothing. I'd rather have nothing. Therefore I will have nothing—or stretch that piece to a million. . . . And much obleeged, duke."

Whereupon Peter went into the market and sold De Groot short, putting up a five point margin. He sold no less than twenty thousand shares before any decided slump appeared—because, apparently, he had beaten the duke to it. His average sales were at thirty-five . . . Next day the curb was glutted with rumors. De Groot was worthless. The report of the expert had been stolen, and it showed the mines to be of negligible producing value. Even the most interested parties were dumping their holdings and standing from under. De Groot tumbled. It hit thirty before closing of the market. It was at twenty before noon next day and closed at seventeen. Next day the descent continued until the stock reached five, and there it paused uncertainly. Peter reflected.

Next morning he closed his account with a profit of six hundred thousand dollars, and was close to his million—but it was not a million. "The come-back, if there is a come-back, will be slower," he said, and gave orders to his broker to buy easily and gently up to twenty thousand shares.

"No margin stuff this time," he said. "If I've guessed right I want the certificates."

He got them. In lots of a hundred, five hundred, they dribbled in, until, in his own safety deposit box he had twenty thousand shares of De Groot stock which cost him an even hundred thousand dollars. Then he waited . . . Somebody else started to buy! Peter owned one fifth of the stock of a ten million dollar corporation, and had the certificates to show for it.

"Now if the duke really is a crook—' said Peter hopefully, and because it was Sunday and the time was his own, he went out on Long island to make seven hundred thousand dollars' worth of love to Dorcas Willard. She liked it much better than she did the previous hundred thousand dollars' worth.

"Peter," she said, "I can't stand it much longer. Auntie is unbearable. And the duke—he's always underfoot. I—O, sometimes it seems as if they've taken my will away from me and shut it in a dark closet where I can't find it. One of these days they're going to squeeze a promise to marry him out of me—then that will be too bad for you, Peter, because I always keep my promises."

"Hold out as long as you can," said Peter, hoping very, very much that the duke was as crooked as he suspected he was.

"Just why won't you marry me now, Peter?"

"Can't afford it."

"But when mamma died she left me a million dollars. It's mine. We could live on that."

"And have folks call me Dorcas Willard's husband. Nix. You're going to be Peter McGee's wife, and mightly proud of it."

"I should be anyhow, Peter."

"O, I shouldn't balk on account of your million. I love you enough to marry you with five millions," said Peter recklessly.

"So does the duke."

"Um . . . But I'm your father's secretary, and he wouldn't accept my resignation, and left it to my decency, don't you see. So I can't marry you till I've got my million."

"I'll give it to you, and then you'll have it," she said with finished logic.

Monday morning Mr. Willard kept his secretary busy with various matters until luncheon time. Peter was efficient—as efficient as he would have been if he had not been crazy to get his broker on the telephone to find out what was happening to De Beers. After luncheon he could not find Dorcas—at least not until he had searched for her all over the place. He found her crying in the Sunken Garden, which seemed to be her favorite crying spot.

"If you'll wait just a minute till I telephone," he said, "I'll comfort you. I'll——"

"Go away," she sobbed. "Go away from me. Don't come near. I hate you . . . I hate any man that won't marry me . . . I—I'm going to promise to marry the duke. I know I am."

"You come in the house with me," he said. "Come right this minute." He was very stern about it, and she was, without doubt, much frightened. At any rate she complied.

He held her hand tightly so she could not run away from him, and led her to the telephone. Still grasping her hand, he lifted the receiver with the other hand and called his broker.

"How De Groot?" he asked.

"Moving up."

"How much?"

"Two points since morning."

"H'm . . . Hold this line. I'll be right here on the other end of it. Send somebody to report to me every five minutes."

He turned to Dorcas. "You sit right here," he said. "I think I'm going to marry you this afternoon."

"You think so."

"I'm forty thousand dollars nearer it than I was when I woke up."

A voice in the telephone said, "Five hundred shares just sold at 9. There's a rumor the expert is in New York."

"Hope he is," said Peter, and to Dorcas: "We've just moved another forty thousand nearer."

"What if it drops?" said Dorcas.

"You'll—you'll have to marry the duke, if you can't hold out."

A voice from the telephone: "Dropped two points. Rumor the report is adverse."

"Outch!" said Peter, but he gripped Dorcas' hand until she wriggled. A wait of fifteen minutes ensued, then an excited voice came over the 'phone. "De Groot's busted loose. The engineer's report is published. Says the mines are as good as the best De Beers. She's whooping. Everybody's grabbing. Going up by jumps. Market's gone crazy."

"Me, too," shouted Peter, and he pulled Dorcas to him and kissed her a full million dollars' worth. "Run up and get on your hat. Hustle. We're reaching for the million. It'll come any second. Hustle."

She obeyed. Peter kept his ear glued to the receiver.

"De Groot at forty . . . at forty-three —at——"

"I don't give a tinker's dam where it's at," shouted Peter. "I've got it . . . I've got it, and some left over." He figured quickly. De Groot selling at forty made his stock show him a profit of seven hundred thousand dollars. Add that to six hundred thousand already in hand, and to his original one hundred thousand, and he had close to a million and a half. He rushed to the stairs.

"Hustle, Dorcas; hustle!" he shouted.

It was 8 o'clock when Mr. and Mrs. Peter McGee returned to Amos Willard's Long island home. They ascended the stairs to Mr. Willard's room and entered.

"Er—Mr. Willard," said Peter, "allow me to present Mrs. McGee."

Mr. Willard's eyes showed hurt. He shook his head. "Peter," he said, "I'm disappointed . . . I had confidence in you . . . ."

"Yes, sir," said Peter. "Would you mind glancing at that?" He tossed a bank book onto the bed where Mr. Willard lay. Mr. Willard examined it, and scowled and peered at Peter. "When you've finished with that," said Peter, "you might look these over," and he tossed upon the bed certificates for twenty thousand shares of De Groot. "Touched forty about noon. Don't know what it is now." he said."

"I do," said Mr. Willard with some agitation. "I've just been informed that some associates and myself are offering par."

"The dear duke," said Peter with feeling. "He's presented me with two millions and a half . . . Plenty to support a wife—plenty."

"But—but how did you do it, Peter?"

"Well," said Peter, "I didn't like the duke, and I did like Dorcas——"

"Splendid finance," said Mr. Willard ironically.

"It answered," said Peter.

"I'll have to get a new secretary," said Mr. Willard.

"I am going to be rather busy," said Peter. "I've got two millions and a half worth of love to make, and it's going to take all my time for a while . . . Say, Mr. Willard, it's easy to get rich—if you're in love—and there's a duke."

Omaha Slim, Ace of Tramps, Soliloquizes on the Perplexities of a Topsy-Turvy World

"THIS here unprecedented an' unprincipled prosperity," said Omaha Slim, the ace of tramps, "has all but eliminated the hobo p'fession. Here we are, a couple o' bums in the midst o' excess wages an' excess profits, seein' everybody drag in important jack, whilst we not only haven't moved upwards an' onwards with the times but haven't even stayed clost enough to the vehicle o' progress to get a whiff o' the exhaust."

"Just another o' them horrors o' the war," repined Luke the Dude, as he polished the top of his left shoe on the frayed right leg of his trousers. "The world is gone nutty."

'Nutty is a mild description," said Slim. "Values has been turned on their ear. Nach'ral laws such as the principle o' supply an' demand has been thrun in the sewer, while men is beasts, rootin' an' snarlin' an' fightin' for the fruits o' sweet liberty as guaranteed by the treaty o' Versaye."

"Ver-whaty?"

"Versaye. Youse low dregs o' the gutters calls it Versails. But anyway you calls it, it runs for the end book with me.

"What did this here war and that there vict'ry that they made such a hullaballoo over do for the common people? If there is any people what's common, Dude, it's people like you an' me.

"Like a couple o' splendid citizens that we were—an' I claim to be a few splendid citizens myself, havin' always heretofore voted sev'ral times at each election—we viewed gravely the start o' the great embryolio in Eurrup. Like humanitarians, we immejately took sides again the kaiser, and damned him up an' down Whisky row as far as our voices could reach offen the beer keg in front o' the barr'lhouse.

"We was hoarsely yellin' for the U. S. to cut in on the shindy long before them Wash'n'ton statesguys got around to declarin' a state o' hospitility. An' when the boys begin to Mobile-ize was they any two patriots what set tighter an' cheered louder than what you an' I done, Dude? Was they?"

Luke shook his head and trimmed his thumb nail on his broken tooth.

"When we seen what fine fighters our lads was turnin' out to be many a time we says one regiment o' Yanks would go acrost an' wipe up Germ'ny like Texas Steve useta wipe up the Workin'men's Exchange when he got full o' squir'l booze. When we heard bands playin' martual tunes we swole our chests out an' says Ol' Glory was worth fightin' for an' dyin' for, an' we was for all the great sacrifices what the people o' this free an' easy land was makin' in order to trample the tyrant in the Dutch dust an' guarantee the freedom o' seas, the lakes, the rivers, an' the creeks.

"When we landed our firs' battalion on foreign soil you an' me knew no bounds—we was like a couple o' kids watchin' a dog fight.

"An' when our lads kicked the stuffin' out o' them heathens at Shotto Theory—well, we couldn' a been no prouder if we had done all of it ourself instead o' the small but vital parts we did play in the hist'ry makin' eepock.

"Well—we lived to see the war over, an' we may yet live to see peace declared. The gran' day o' the armistice—I'll never forget it becus a drunk gimme a half, thinkin' he was handin' me a dime or somethin'—we done our duty, didn' we? Didn' we? We did. I'll say we did. We got as pie eyed as anybody.

"An' then comes the reconstruction. O, what a kick in the slats that turned out to be!

"The wheels begin turnin'. They begin whizzin'. An' about the firs' thing they whizzed out was hootch. Nex' to the great flood we read about in Sund'y school this here pro'bition was the toughest disaster what ever overwhelms a people. The country turns all wet, an' me an' the likes o' you an' me is left low an' dry, an' we got no ark. We got no nothin'. S'loons is razooed. That makes us homeless. Free lunches, warm stoves, leftover suds is exterminated — that makes us hopeless.

"An' then what? Money goes cheap. Wages goes skyin' an' prices goes aereonautin'.

"That leaves us where?

"That leaves us flat, Dude.

"They's a dozen jobs for ev'ry man to take one, an' besides they's a thousan' guys strikin' again that job. Our headquarters destroyed by pro'bition, our means o' livelihood is rooned by industrial upheavals becus what chancet is a panhandler got when every sap knows work is cryin' to be did? To blazes with prosperity. Gimme a panic. Say, I'd rather be able to say, 'Mister, I been huntin' a job—any kind o' hon'rable work—all day, an' my wife an' children is home starvin'—an' get away with it—than have only one leg or some o' them other advantages what some o' the 'bos is got.

"When I try to touch a pedestrian these here days he's too busy dodgin' work himself to even listen to me, an' if I get his ear an' tell him I can't get work he laughs himself silly. It ain't enough seven guys in one night told me I was a liar, but four more offers me work. Jus' becus I beg for a livin' ain' no reason I got to be insulted.

"An' the few what still shell out, d'you think they come clean like they should in these here days when a dollar is worth about a plugged nickel? Meat is gone up, freight is gone up, bootleg booze is held at prohibitive rates. Has the alms o' the nation gone up? Not so I noticed it. Why, only las' night I with Fauntleroy curls, poor chap. If he'd had his hair cut regularly he wouldn't have looked such an ass when Delilah got through with him."

"I don't quite follow the parable."

"In other words, it's what a man's got in his head and not so much what he's got on it that makes him strong," he explained, still more or less cryptically.

"I am beginning to see. You made good use of what you have in your head. Is that it?"

"I made use of what you put into it a good many months ago, dear heart. You have been in my head and in my heart all these months, and so it was you who made me strong. Without you in there I might have been as weak as Samson was before he had his hair cut. No sensible man blames Delilah. In fact, men are rather strong for her. When you stop to think how long old Samson got away with it and what a shock it must have been to her after she trimmed him and found there wasn't anything left to speak of, you've just got to feel sorry for her. She took one good look at his head and understood why he let his hair grow. He was like the fellow who wears long whiskers to develop his chin. If Samson had had room enough in his head for a thought of anything except himself Delilah wouldn't have been able to catch him napping."

She could not help laughing. "You take a most original way of evading the point. Still, I am satisfied. You did not have room in your head for any one else but me, and that's all there is to it. I can't help feeling tremendously complimented, however. She is quite capable of turning any man's head."

"She plays fair, Ruth," he said seriously. "She keeps the danger signal up all the time. That's more than you can say for most women."

"Yes," said she; "she plays fair. She is a strange woman. She has given me a lot of advice, and I am just beginning to take it."

"If I had believed what she told me three months ago," said he, "this glorious hour would have been advanced just that length of time."

Ruth stiffened. "What did she tell you?"

"She told me I was a fool and a coward; that all I had to do was to walk up to you and say, 'Here, I want you,' and that would have been the end of my suspense. She told me something I didn't know and couldn't believe."

"Indeed! I like her impudence! She——"

"She told me you were as much in love with me as I was with you. Honest, was she right?"

Ruth sighed. "I suppose she was right."

"And would you have come to me if I had said 'I want you'?"

"If you had said it as you say it now, I—listen! Good gracious! There are the children!"

She sprang to her feet, blushing furiously. The door opened and three small children were fairly blown into the room—three swarthy, black eyed urchins, who stared in some doubt at the "boss" and the adored "teacher."

"Good morning, children," she cried out jerkily, and then glanced at each of the windows in quick succession. "You don't suppose——" she began under her breath, turning to Percival with a distressed look in her eyes.

"I wouldn't put it above 'em," said he cheerfully.

"We should have thought of the windows."

"Thank God, we didn't," he cried.

He went out into the storm with the song of the lark in his heart.

"God, what a beautiful place the world is," he was saying to himself, and all the while the sleet was stinging his radiant face with the relentlessness of angry bees.

As he swung jauntily down the road in the direction of his "office" all the world might have seen that it was a beautiful place for him. He passed children hurrying to school and shouted envious "hurry ups" to them. Men and women, going about the morning's business, felt better for the cheery greetings he gave them. Even Manuel Crust, pushing a crude barrow laden with firewood, paused to look after the strutting figure, resuming his progress with an annoyed scowl on his brow, for he had been guilty of a pleasant response to Percival's genial "good morning." Manuel went his way wondering what the devil had got into both of them.

Olga Obosky was peering from a window as he passed her hut. He waved his hand at her and then shook his head. He had passed her three dancing girls some distance down the road, romping like children in the snow.

Buck Chizler was waiting for him outside the "office." The little jockey had something on his mind, something that caused him to grin sheepishly and at the same time look furtively over his shoulder.

"Can I see you for a coupla minutes, A. A.?" he inquired, following the other to the door.

"Certainly, Buck; as many minutes as you like."

Buck discovered Randolph Fitts and Michael Malone seated before the fire. He drew back.

"I'd like to see you outside," he said nervously.

"Well, what is it?" asked Percival, stepping outside and closing the door.

Buck led him around the corner of the hut.

"It ain't so windy here," he explained. "Awful weather, ain't it?"

"What's troubling you, Buck? Put on your cap, you idiot. You'll take cold."

"Plumb nervousness," said Buck. "Same as if I was pulling up to the start with fifty thousand on the nag. I want to ask your advice, A. A. Just a little private matter. O, nothing serious. Nothing like that, you know. I just thought maybe you'd—gosh, I never saw it snow like this up home, did you? Funny, too, when you think how tropical we ought to be. There was a bad blizzard a coupla years ago in Buenos Aires, but——"

"Come to the point, Buck. What's up?"

Buck lowered his voice. "Well, you see, it's this way. I'm thinking of getting married. Tomorrow, if possible. Don't laugh! I don't see anything to laugh at in——"

"I beg your pardon, old chap. I couldn't help laughing. It's because I'm happy. Don't mind me. Go ahead. You're thinking of getting married, eh? Well, what's to prevent?"

"Do you approve of it? That's what I want to know."

"Sure. Of course I approve of it."

"I just thought I'd make sure. You see, nobody's ever got married here before, and I didn't know what you'd think of me—er—sort of breaking the ice, don't you see."

"She's finally said 'yes,' has she? Good girl! Congratulations, old chap—thousands of 'em—millions."

"Well, that takes some of the load off my mind," said Buck as they shook hands. "Now, there's one or two things more. First, she says she won't come and live in a hut where five men besides myself are bunking. I don't blame her, do you? Second, she says if we ever get rescued from this island she won't let me go to the war—not a step, she swears. I put up a holler right away. I says to her I was on my way to the war before I ever met her, and then she says I ain't got anything on her. She was going over to nurse. But she says if she gets married she's going to claim exemption, or whatever they call it, and she says I got to do the same, 'cause we'll both have dependents then. Then I says the chances are the war's over by this time anyhow, and she says a feller in the Argentine told her on his word of honor it wouldn't be over for five years or more. But that's a minor point. What's rusting me is this: How am I going to ret rid of them five guys in my cabin?"

"Have you told them you're going to be married?"

"O, hell, they're the ones that told me."

"It's pretty rough weather to turn men out into the cold, unfeeling world, Buck."

Buck scratched his ear in deep perplexity. "Well, it's got me guessing." He slumped into an attitude of profound dejection. "What we'd ought to have done, A. A., was to build a hotel or something like that. If we had a hotel here there'd be so blamed many weddings you couldn't keep track of 'em. That's the only thing that's holding people back. Why, half the unmarried fellers here are thinking about getting married. They're thinking, and thinking, and thinking, morning, noon, and night. And they've got the girls thinking, too, and most the widders and old maids besides. I don't see how a smart feller like you, A. A., happened to overlook the possibility of just this kind of thing happening."

"Good Lord, what have I got to do with it?"

"Why, darn it all, you'd ought to have put up a few huts with 'For Rent' signs on 'em, or else——"

"By George, Buck! I've got it," cried Percival excitedly. "Have you thought of a wedding journey?"

"A what?"

"Wedding trip—honeymoon."

"Well, we might walk up and down the main street here a coupla times," said Buck sarcastically. "Or take a stroll along the beach or something like that."

"What's the matter with a nice long sea voyage?"

"Say, I'm not kidding about this thing," exclaimed Mr. Chizler, bristling. "I'm in dead earnest."

"Has it occurred to you that the Doraine is lying out there in the harbor—— Here! Look out! I don't like being hugged by——"

"My gosh, A. A.! O, my gosh!" barked the ecstatic bridegroom apparent. "How did you happen to think of such a beautiful, wonderful——"

"How did I happen to think of it?" shouted Percival, just as ecstatically. "Why, darn your eyes, why shouldn't I think of it? Why did old Noah think of the ark? Why, I ask you?"

"He didn't," said Buck succinctly. "The feller that wrote the Bible thought of it."

"What time is it? O, Lord, nearly three hours yet before school is out."

"Say, are you off your base? Lemme smell your breath. You act like—wait a second! There's something else I want to speak to you about. Is it—is it all right for me to get married? She says I'll have to get your O. K. before she'll move an inch. She says nobody can do anything around here without you say so. So I——"

"You tell her I give my consent gladly, Buck, my boy. Give her a good kiss for me, and say I'll speak to Capt. Trigger this afternoon about passage on the Doraine. By George, I—I think I'll go and speak to him about it now."

"Much obliged, boss. By gosh, you are a brick! There ain't anything you won't do for a friend, is there?"

Percival blushed and stammered. "I—I've got to see him anyhow, Buck—so don't thank me. By the way, while I'm about it, I suppose I might as well speak to Parson Mackenzie, eh? Or is it to be Father Francisco? And that reminds me, I'll have to see Malone and find out about the legality—got to have the law on our side, you see, Buck. Something in the form of a license, United States of America and all that, and also see about fixing up desirable quarters on board the Doraine. I may have to transfer quite a lot of—er—furniture and so forth from my hut to the ship, and——"

"Gee whiz, A. A., you mustn't go to so blamed much trouble for me!" gasped the delighted Buck.

"Eh? What? O, the devil take you! Beat it now. I'm going to be mighty busy this morning."

"I'll do as much for you, A. A., if you ever get married," cried Buck, once more wringing the other's hand. Then he was off up the road like a schoolboy.

Shortly before the noon recess, Percival returned from the Doraine. By this time the news had spread through the camp that there was to be a wedding. Every one he met hailed him with the excited question:

"Say, have you heard the news?"

"What news?"

"There's going to be a wedding."

"Good Lord!" said Percival to himself. "They must have been peeping through those windows after all."

Finding that he had ten minutes to spare before school was out, he decided to call upon Mrs. Spofford. That lady received him with icy politeness.

"I have been expecting you," she said. "Your friend Mr. Shay honored us with a visit last night. My niece is at the school. Will you sit down and wait for her, or——"

"I beg your pardon. What was that you said about Shay?"

"I said he came to see us."

Percival stared. "He did?"

"Please sit down, Mr. Percival. Do not ask me to tell you anything more about Mr. Shay," she went on hurriedly, and in some confusion. "I don't believe he would like it, and as he is a dangerous character I beg of you not to——"

"If Soapy Shay dared to intrude——"

"I implore you, do not think anything more about it. He was most courteous and polite and all that."

He remained standing, his gaze fixed upon her face. Somehow, he guessed the nature of Soapy's visit.

"I suppose he came as a talebearer."

"I must decline to discuss the matter, Mr. Percival."

"Mrs. Spofford," he began, with all the dignity of a courtier, "I have come to request the hand of your niece in marriage. I have loved her from the very——"

"O, God!" groaned the trembling lady. "It has come at last! It has come, just as I feared. For pity's sake, Mr. Percival, spare her! She is——"

"I beg your pardon," he broke in, flushing. "I think you misunderstand me. I am asking your consent to marry her. I believe it is still customary among gentlemen to consult the——"

"Permit me to interrupt you, Mr. Percival," said she, regaining her composure and her austerity. "What you ask is quite impossible. My niece is, ah, I may say tentatively engaged. I am sorry for you. Perhaps it would be just as well if you did not wait for her to come in. She will——"

"Mrs. Spofford, I am obliged to confess to you that I have already spoken to Miss Clinton, and I may add that she is not tentatively engaged. She has promised to be my wife."

She drew back as if struck. She was silent for many seconds.

"It would appear that my consent is not necessary, Mr. Percival," she said at last. "Why do you come to me?"

"Because, while you may not suspect it, I was born a gentleman," he said stiffly.

She received this with a slight nod of the head and no more.

"My niece, no doubt in her excitement, has neglected to ask you one or two very important questions," she said levelly. "First of all, have you any means of convincing us that you do not already possess a wife?"

He started. "You are right," he said. "That is an important question, and she has not asked it. I have no means of convincing you that I have never been married, Mrs. Spofford. My word of honor is the only thing I can offer."

She regarded him narrowly. "Do you consider that sufficient, Mr. Percival?"

"I do," said he simply. She waited for him to go on, and was distinctly impressed by his failure to do so. So far as he was concerned, there was nothing more to be added.

"How are we to know what your past life contains? You may have left your homeland in disgrace. You may even have been a fugitive from justice. We have no means of knowing. You were a stowaway on board the Doraine. That much, at least, we do know. We know nothing more. You are smart, you are clever. Surely you must see for yourself that under other circumstances, under normal conditions, my niece would not have condescended to notice you, Mr. Percival. We are on an undiscovered island, remote from the environment, the society, the——"

"Permit me to remind you, Mrs. Spofford," he interrupted, a trifle coldly, "that you have just remarked that you know nothing whatever about me. Isn't it barely possible that my life may contain something desirable in the shape of family, position, and environment?"

"I recall that Mr. Gray did speak of knowing the Percival family. My niece never allows me to forget it."

"Mr. Gray did not know my family. He knew of my family, Mrs. Spofford, if that conveys anything to you. Not that they would not have been proud to have known him, for he was a gentleman. As for my own case, I can only say that I am not a fugitive from justice, nor have I done anything more disgraceful than the average young man who has been through college and who, ignoring the counsel of his father, proceeds to find out for himself the same things that his father had found out a great many years before, and his father before him, and so on back to the beginning of man. My great-great-grandfather on my mother's side was a comparatively recent settler in America. He didn't come over from Scotland until about 1750. My father's people came over in the days of Lord Baltimore. Most of my remote ancestors were very wicked men. You will find that one of them was executed in the Tower of London the same week that Lady Jane Grey went to her death, and another was openly in love with Mistress Nell Gwyn, thereby falling into disgrace with a monarch named Charles. I admit that I come of very bad stock."

A fleeting twinkle lurked in her eyes.

"You are very adroit, Mr. Percival."

"Which is as much as to say that I have an agreeable and interesting way of lying. Is that what you wish to imply, Mrs. Spofford?"

"Not at all. I say you are adroit because you place me in an embarrassing position. If I believe your confession that you come of bad stock, I must also believe that you come of an exceedingly old Maryland family." He bowed very low. "My niece, Mr. Percival, is an orphan. I am and have been her protector since she was fourteen years of age. She is the possessor of a large fortune in her own right. Her father, who was my brother, gave her into my care when he was on his deathbed. I leave you to surmise just what were his dying words to me. She was his idol. I have not failed him in any respect.

"You ask me to give my consent to your marriage. I cannot do so. No doubt you

THE TEENIE WEENIES.

THE DUNCE WANTED TO BE A CHICKEN, BUT HE CHANGES HIS MIND.

BY WM. DONAHEY.

"WELL, men," said the General one morning as he pushed back his chair from the Teenie Weenie breakfast table, "we must get in a supply of stove wood for the Cook."

"Ah, s-s-say!" growled the Dunce. "We've all the time got to work. Jinks, I wish I was a chicken, with nothin' to do but loaf around the chicken yard all day and have some one throw feed into me occasionally. They can sleep when they want to and they all the time do just as they please."

"Well, you're not a chicken," answered the General, "and if you want to eat in this establishment, you've got to work."

The Dunce went about the work, cutting up an old clothes pin into firewood, and he soon forgot all about being a chicken.

The General hadn't forgotten it, however, and the next day, when the little folks set out for a walk, the General led them up to a chicken yard, where an old hen stood peering out between the palings.

"Good morning, madam," said the General, politely raising his hat to the hen. "It's a pleasant morning."

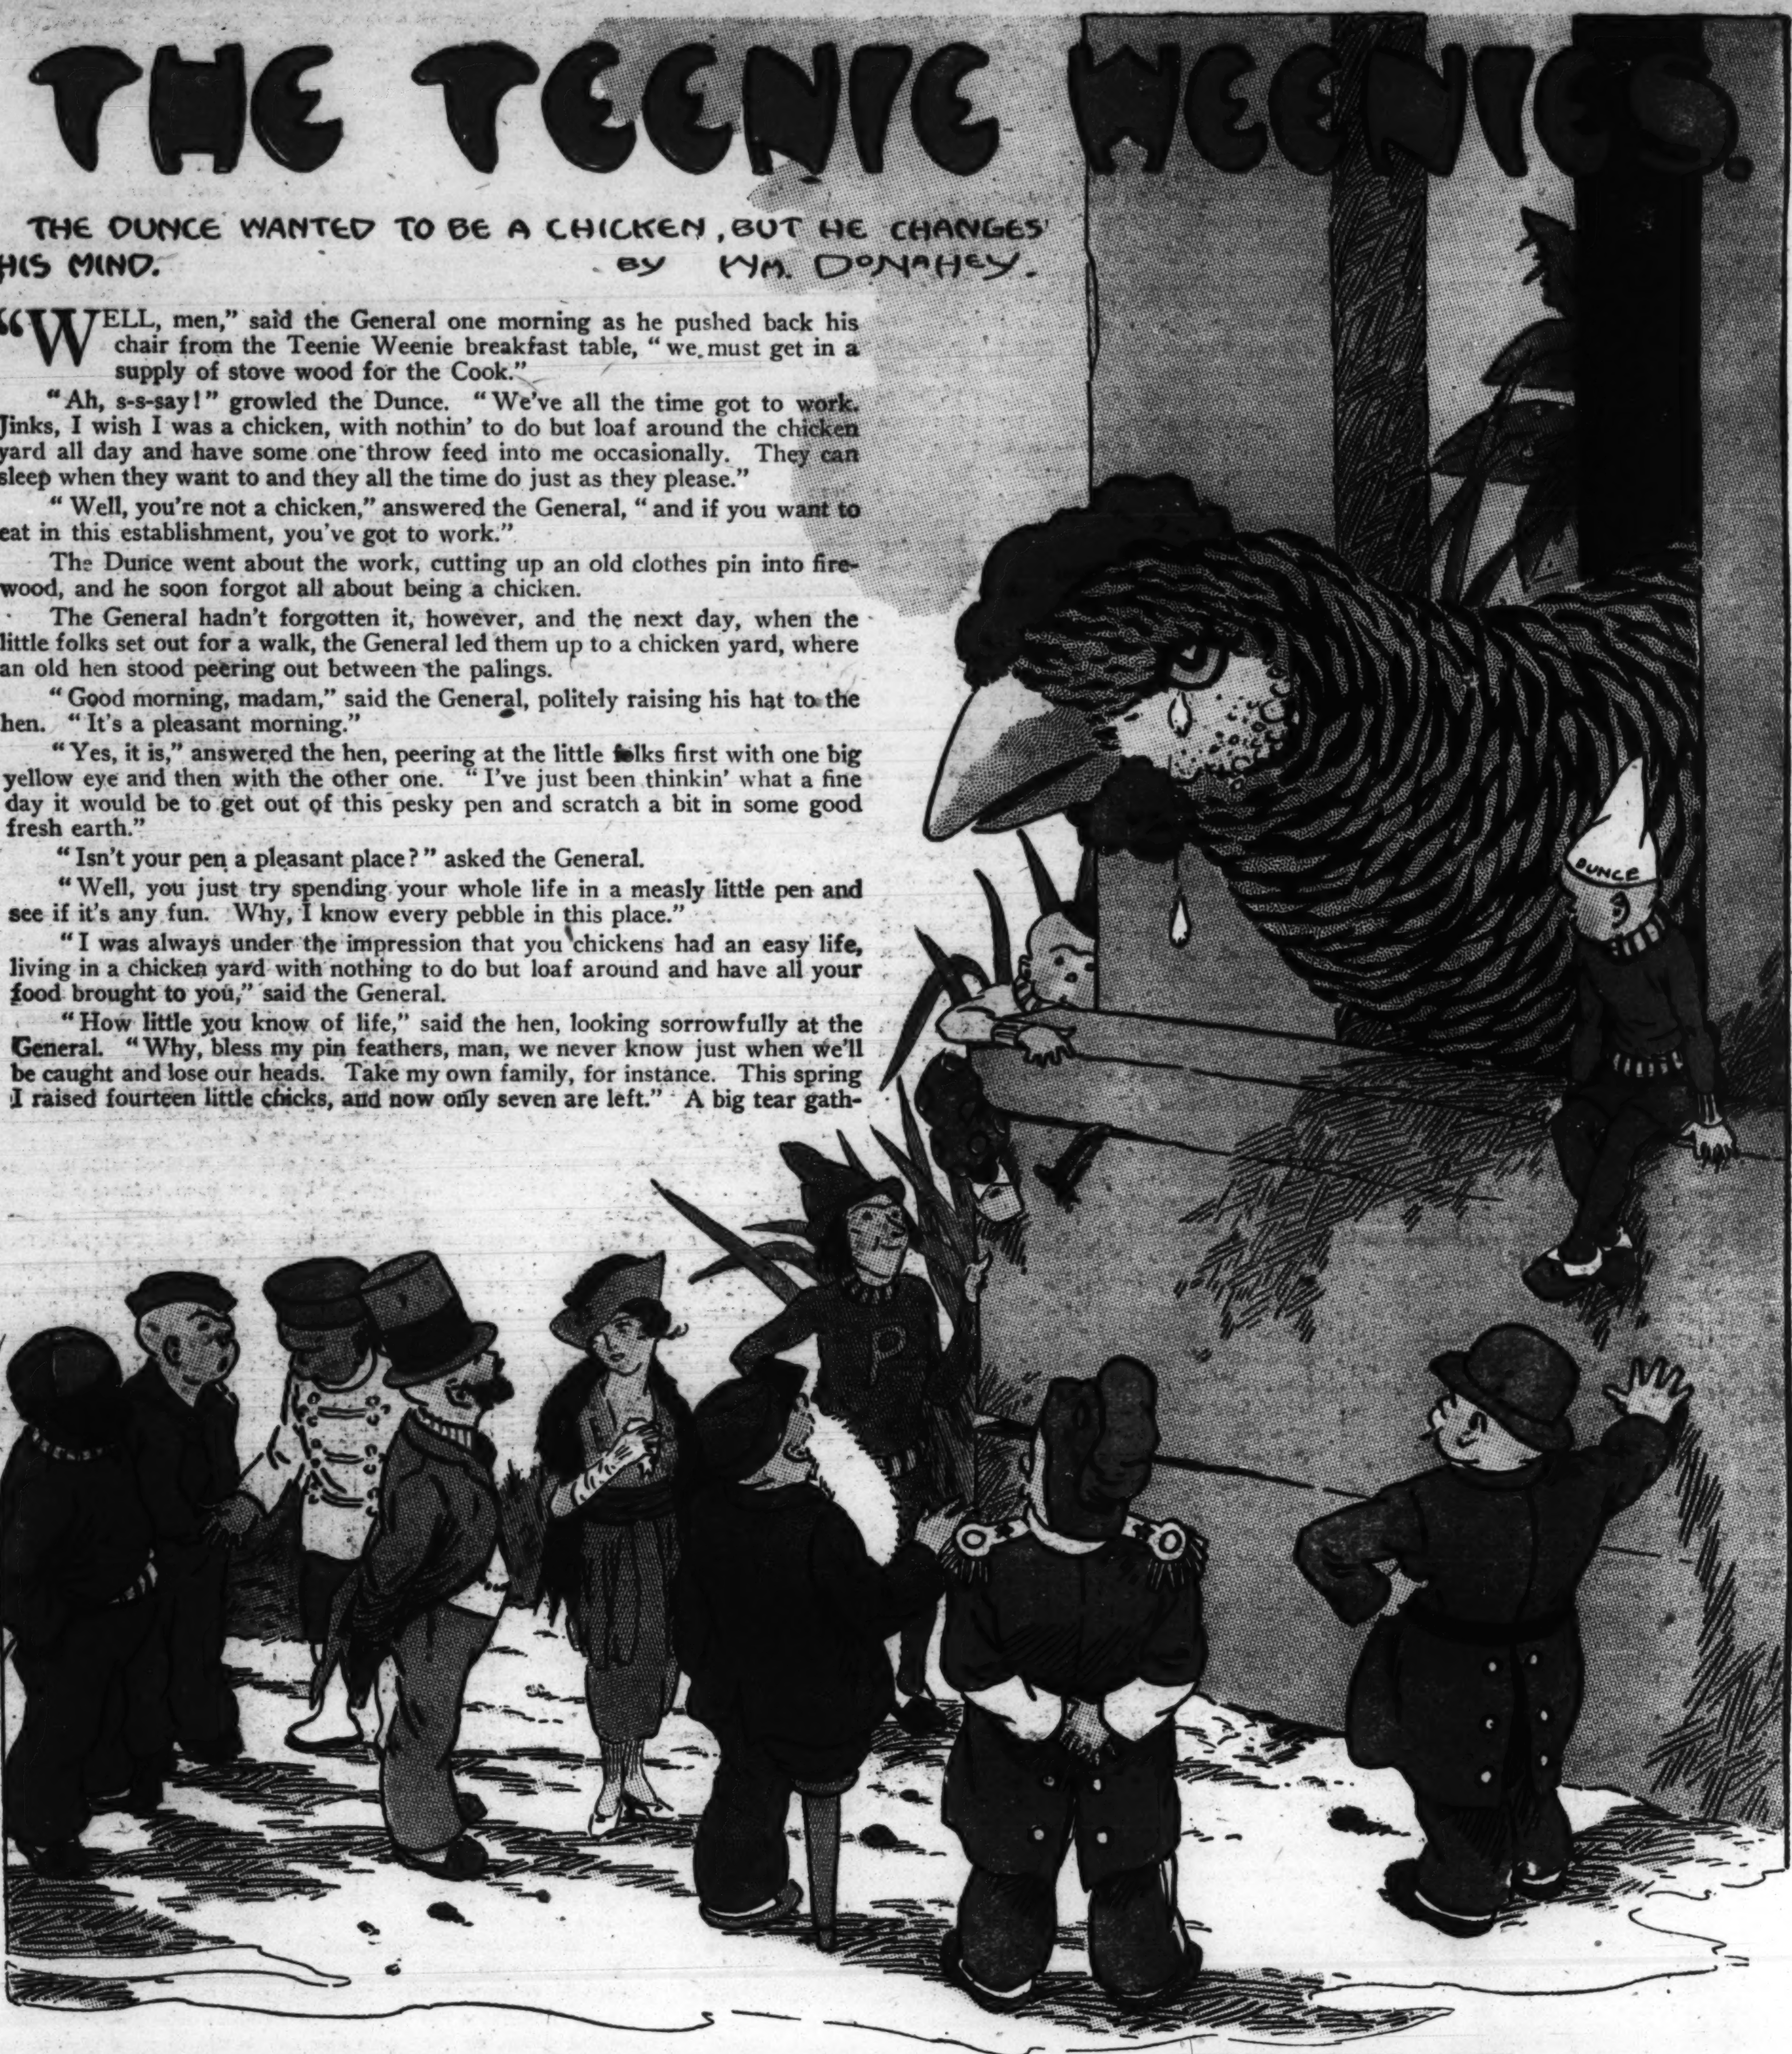
"Yes, it is," answered the hen, peering at the little folks first with one big yellow eye and then with the other one. "I've just been thinkin' what a fine day it would be to get out of this pesky pen and scratch a bit in some good fresh earth."

"Isn't your pen a pleasant place?" asked the General.

"Well, you just try spending your whole life in a measly little pen and see if it's any fun. Why, I know every pebble in this place."

"I was always under the impression that you chickens had an easy life, living in a chicken yard with nothing to do but loaf around and have all your food brought to you," said the General.

"How little you know of life," said the hen, looking sorrowfully at the General. "Why, bless my pin feathers, man, we never know just when we'll be caught and lose our heads. Take my own family, for instance. This spring I raised fourteen little chicks, and now only seven are left." A big tear gathered in the hen's eye, slid off her cheek, and fell with a splash at the feet of Paddy Pinn.



"How terrible," murmured the Lady of Fashion, getting out her tiny handkerchief.

"Yes, mighty tough," sighed the Doctor.

"What happened to the rest of your chicks?" asked the Dunce, who had climbed up on to the fence and was much interested in the hen's story.

"Et!" snapped the hen. "All of 'em et. Five of 'em went in five straight Sundays, and then two of them were served to the minister, who had dinner at the big house one day last week."

"O-o-o-oh!" gasped the Dunce, very much impressed.

"It won't be long before the rest go, and when the fryin' season is over why, why I suppose I'll slip out of this life in a savory broth or stew."

The old hen was quite overcome with grief, and the tears fairly streamed off her beak.

The Lady of Fashion was weeping into her dainty handkerchief, and several of the Teenie Weenies were rubbing their eyes and noses.

"I-I-I think we had better be going," said the General, and raising his hat he hurried away, followed by the rest of the little people.

"Well, Dunce," said the General when they had walked some little distance, "do you still want to be a chicken?"

"W-w-w-well, I-I-I wouldn't be a chicken all the time, but it is sort of nice not to have anything to do," answered the Dunce. "But I'll say I don't think I'd like to be et. No, sir, I don't want to be a chicken. I'd r-r-r-rather be a Teenie Weenie—Jimminie fishhooks, but I'm glad I'm a Teenie Weenie." And the Dunce turned three or four handsprings to show he was quite satisfied with his place in life.

TEENIE WEENIE GOSSIP.

The Clown was badly shaken up one day last week when he fell from a tomato vine while skinning the cat.

Last Friday four of the Teenie Weenies set out to visit their friend, the squirrel, who lives in the big woods some distance from the shoehouse.

It was quite late before the four Teenie Weenies started for home, and it looked much like rain. They hurried as fast as their little legs could carry them, but before they had gone far the rain came down. The little chaps ran under an old salmon can for shelter, but before they reached it a big raindrop hit the Chinaman on the back of the neck and sent him sprawling on the ground. The Sailor quickly pulled the Chink under the can, where the four Teenie Weenies spent the night, as the rain kept up until almost daybreak.

Last Saturday afternoon the Teenie Weenies rolled an apple over to their friend, the Rhyming Rabbit. The old Rabbit, who had been crippled up with rheumatism, was so happy he almost smiled. In spite of the fact that the rabbit is a gruff old fellow, the Teenie Weenies enjoy visiting him, for he always talks in rhyme, and this amuses the little folks a great deal.

Under the shade of a huge fern along the bank of the creek, quite near the Teenie Weenie village, lies half a paving brick, and here Tess Bone and Buddy Guff spend much of their time. The Teenie Weenies, who have seen the little couple sitting there, holding hands and staring moon-eyed into the water, have named the brick "Lovers' Rock."

The Turk has found a way to toughen spider web, much to the joy of the Lady of Fashion. The little lady has knit several pairs of stockings from the prepared web, and she says they will last much longer than those made from the uncured web.

WEST WIND DRIFT by George Barr McCutcheon

THE STORY—Set helplessly adrift by an explosion of bombs planted by German agents, the great liner Doraine, bound from South America for a port in the United States, has been all but wrecked by a storm and then driven by wind and tide into a basin which is the center of an uninhabited island. Here the ship runs aground, and the survivors of the disaster set about planning for a future in which the hope of rescue seems hopelessly remote. The dominant figure among them is Algernon Adonis Percival, an American mining engineer, who started the voyage as a stowaway, his money having been stolen at the port of embarkation. In the general bewilderment over the strange situation Percival's natural qualities of leadership have asserted themselves, bringing him a position of some authority and, incidentally, the interested regard of two women—Ruth Clinton, an American girl, traveling with her aunt, Mrs. Spofford; and Olga Obosky, a Russian dancer. In directing the work of building huts and exploring the island Percival clashes with Abel Landover, a famous capitalist, who refuses to submit to discipline and is worsted in a hand to hand encounter with the young engineer. This proceeding Ruth resents as needlessly brutal, and thereafter she treats Percival with marked coolness, at the same time showing herself not at all reluctant to accept Landover's attentions. Landover has begun to assume that there is an understanding between him and the girl, and makes the mistake of speaking slightingly of Percival once too often—whereupon Ruth astonishes her admirer and herself by confessing that, after all, she is really in love with Percival. Still agitated by this self-revelation, she goes to the " town hall " where she has been teaching the children of the colony, expecting to find her classroom empty.

FOURTEENTH INSTALLMENT.

The Governor's Lady.

RUTH stopped just inside the door and looked about her in astonishment. The benches had been drawn up in an orderly semi-circle about the fireplace. Beyond them she observed the figure of a man kneeling before the fire, using a bellows with great effect. The big logs were snapping and cracking and spitting before the furious blasts.

She closed the door and started across the room in his direction. Suddenly she recognized the broad back and the familiar but very unseasonable panama hat. Panic seized her. She turned quickly, bent on making her escape. Her heart was beating like a triphammer; she felt strangely weak in the knees. As abruptly, she checked the impulse to flee. Why should she run away, now that the moment she had wished for so ardently the night before was at hand? Chance had answered her call with amazing swiftness. She was alone with him—she could go to him and lay her weapons at his feet and say—as she had said a hundred times in the night—" I can fight no more. I am beaten."

But now that the time had come for bravery she found herself sorely afraid. A chill swept through her—a weakening chill that took away her strength and left her trembling from head to foot. The crisis was at hand, the great, surpassing crisis. She found herself hazily, tremulously wondering what the next minute in her life would be like. What would be said in it, what would happen to her? Would she be in his arms, would his lips be upon hers—all in the minute to come? Was the whole course of her life to be altered in the brief space of a minute's time?

A warm glow suddenly drove off the chill. It came with the realization that he was building the fire for her, that his thoughts were of her, that he had stolen into the building to make it warm and comfortable long before she was due to arrive, and that he would steal away again as soon as the " chores " were done.

He arose to his feet and stood over the fire for a moment or two, watching its lively progress. Apparently satisfied with his efforts, he turned and started toward the door. She was standing in his path, a shy, wavering smile on her lips.

He halted, and, after an instant's hesitation, stammered:

" I—I never dreamed you'd be around so early. I thought I'd run in as I was passing and build a fire for—for the kiddies. Get the place warmed up a bit before——"

" Will you let me say something, Mr. Percival?" she broke in, hurrying the words.

He fumbled for his hat. " I am sorry if you are annoyed, Miss Clinton. Please believe me when I tell you I hoped to get out before you came. I came early so that you would not find me——"

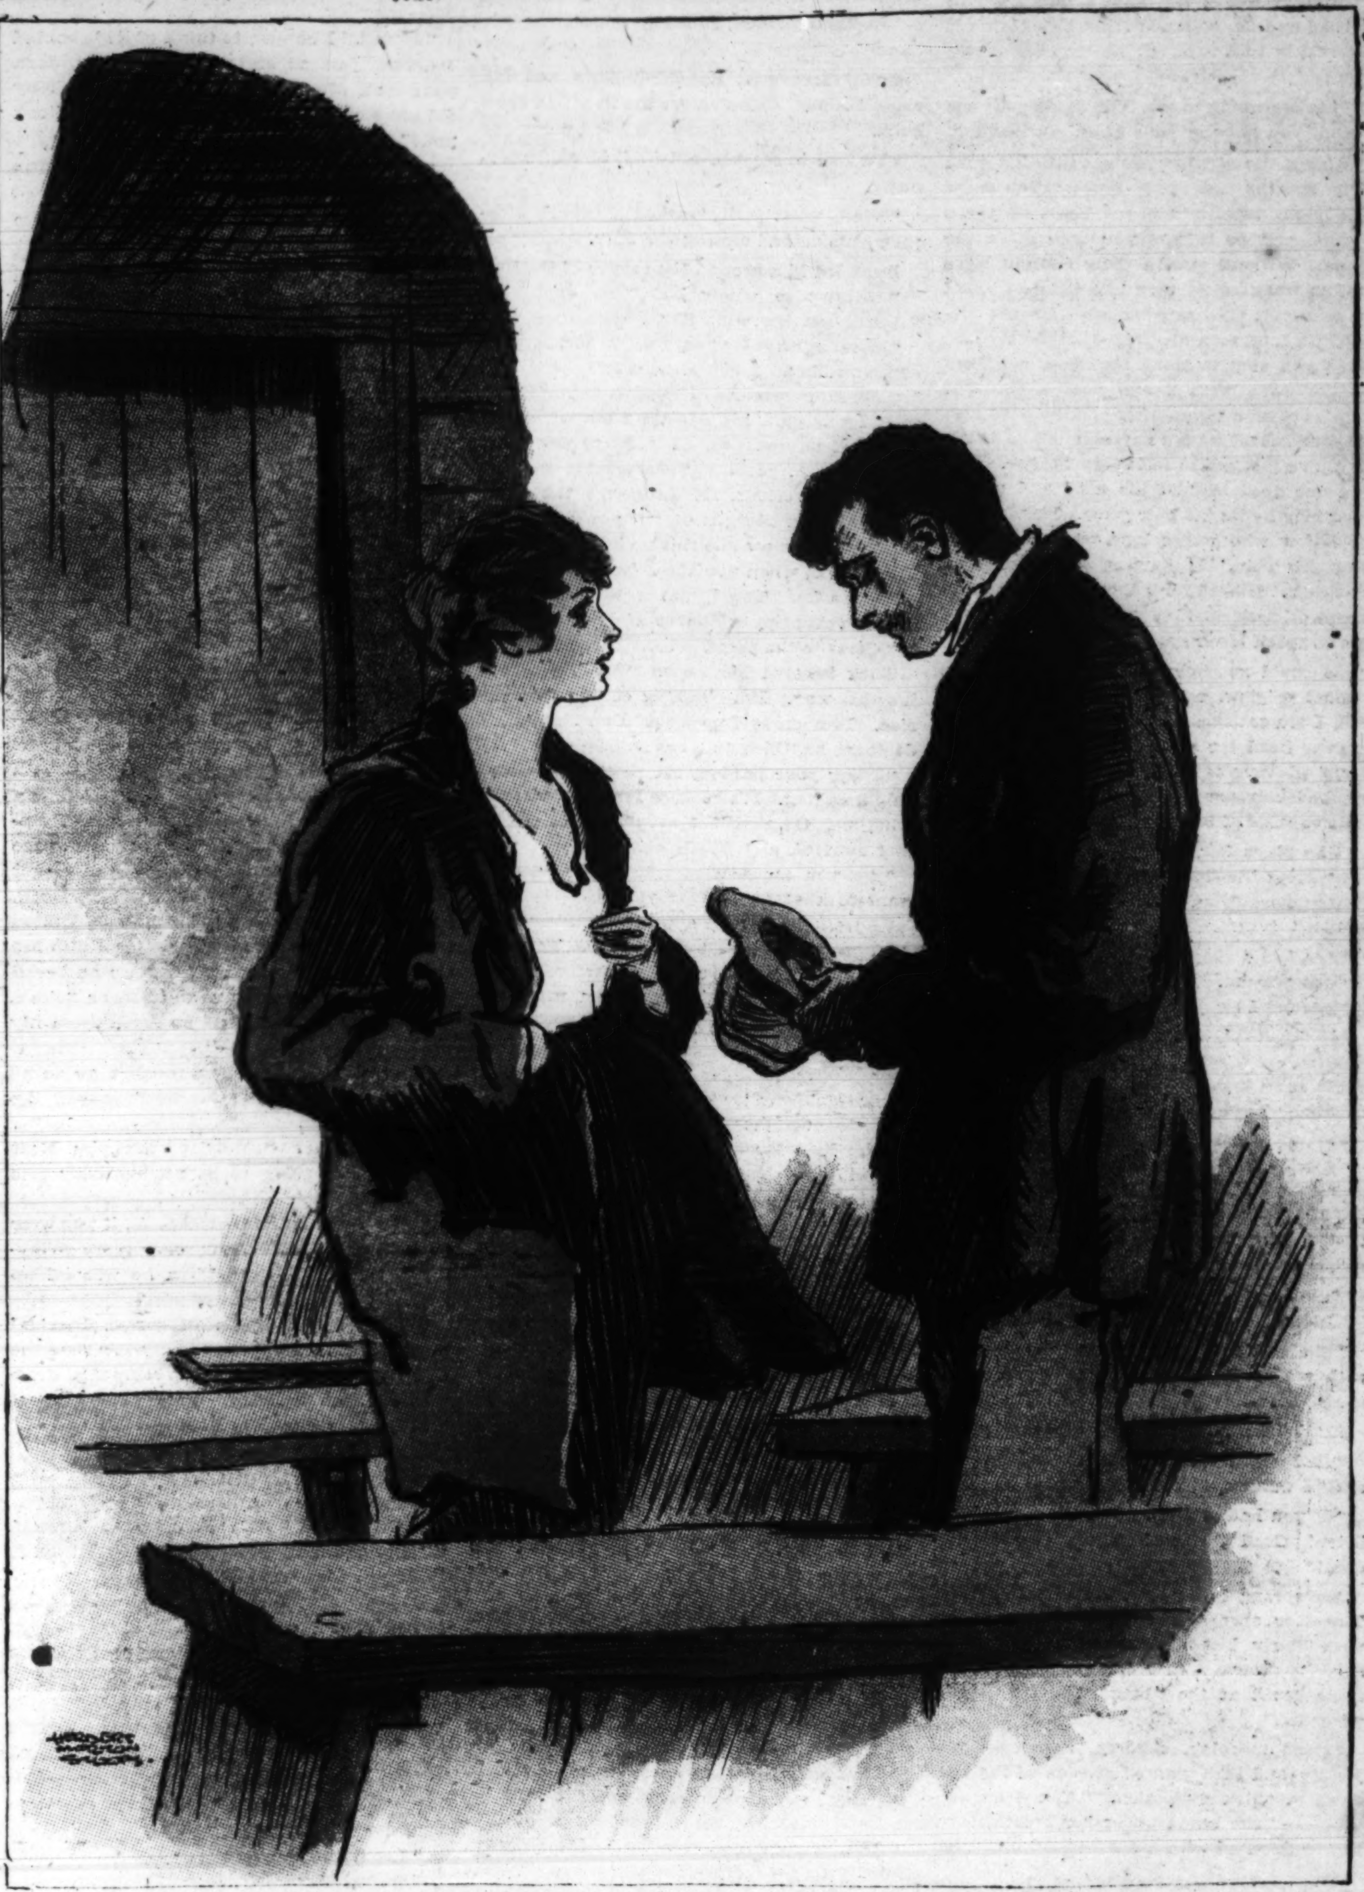
" You are not letting me say what I want to say."

She came toward him, her hand extended. " O, I don't want to thank you for lighting the fire and putting the room in order. I want to tell you that I surrender."

" Surrender? " he exclaimed, staring.

" I cannot fight you any longer," she said breathlessly.

He looked dumbly first at her hand and then into her eyes. She was an arm's length away.



" I am sorry if you are annoyed, Miss Clinton. I came early so that you would not find me——"

"Fight me?" he mumbled, uncomprehending.

" You—you said we could not be friends. I knew what you meant. If—if you love me—O, if you do love me, we need not be friends. But I know you love me. If I did not know it I could not have come to you like this and——"

" Do I love you?" he cried. " My God, I—I worship you."

She held out both arms to him. " Then we will try no more to be friends," she murmured softly. " Here are my arms. I surrender."

A long time after he said to her as they sat before the jubilant, applauding fire—the only witness to their ecstasy:

" Now I understand why we have never really been friends. It wasn't what God intended. Even in the beginning we were not friends. We thought we were, but we weren't. We were lovers, Ruth, from the very start."

" I tried hard to hate you," she sighed, drawing a little closer in the crook of his encircling arm. " How wonderful it all is! How wonderful."

" I never believed it could come true. I hoped—God, how I hoped!—but it didn't seem possible that this could ever happen. I've wanted to hold you in my arms, to kiss your dear lips, to kiss your eyes, to touch your hair, to press you tight against my heart. And here I am awake, not dreaming, not longing, and I have done all these things. Lord! I wonder if I can possibly be dreaming all this for the thousandth time."

" I was thinking of you when I came into this room, not ten minutes ago, and suddenly I saw you. I was terrified. I knew then that my dreams were coming true—I knew it, and I don't know why I did not run away. Any self-respecting, modest girl would have done so. But what did I do? I, a supposedly sensible, well brought up——"

" You caught me trying to run away," he broke in. " I give you my word, my heart was in my throat all the time I was working over that fire, scared stiff with the fear that you would come in and bayonet me with one of those icicle looks of yours. And see what really happened! "

They were silent for some time, staring into the fire. Suddenly his arm tightened; he drew a sharp breath. She looked up quickly.

" Why are you frowning?"

" I was just thinking," he replied after a moment's hesitation.

He gave a queer little jerk of his head, as if casting off something that bothered him. Into his paradise had slipped the memory of a night not long since when he held the yielding, responsive form of another woman in his arms and felt the thrill of an ignoble passion surging through his veins. The kiss of the sensualist had burned on his lips for days; even to this hour it had clung to them; he was never free from the fire it had started in his imagination. And always on Olga's red, alluring lips lurked the reminder that she had not forgotten; in her eyes lay the light of expectancy.

" Of whom?" asked Ruth, not coyly, but with a directness that startled him. She seemed to have divined that his thoughts were not of her in that brief, flitting instant.

" Of myself," he answered, quite truthfully.

She laid her hand on his. " I forbid you to think of any one but me," she said.

He was silent for a moment. " I shall never think of any one but you, Ruth Clinton," he said earnestly. " You have nothing to fear."

" I believe you," she said, and pressed his hand tightly. After a slight pause she went on, looking straight into his eyes: " I might have lost you, dear, and I could have blamed no one but myself. She—she is very alluring."

He shook his head. " I've always been of the opinion that Samson's hair needed trimming. His mother probably brought him up

To Remove Corns

Hard or Soft Corns—Old or New Corns —Big or Little Corns

"Gets-It"

never fails to peel them off—quickly, easily, painlessly.

Whoever continues to endure an aching corn for even five minutes has only himself to blame. Never was pain relieved so quickly as corn pain is stopped by "GETS-IT."

Just as cold water quenches thirst, so does two or three drops of "GETS-IT" bring to the tenderest corn instant relief and then makes that relief permanent by peeling the corn off completely, in one piece, root and all. Costs but a trifle—everywhere.

Watch Pyorrhea Go

With War's Wonder Antiseptic

Gum soreness and bleeding usually end in one week. Destroys germ cause promptly. Free trial proves it.

Nothing like Kloria has ever been known before for sore, bleeding gums, pyorrhea, etc. Usually within one week, all gum soreness and bleeding disappear, and soon the shrunken gums tighten around the teeth again. Anyone can easily apply it, and the results are really amazing. Doubt it, if you must, but try it.

This is the same wonderful new antiseptic agent which healed war wounds often in one-fourth the usual time, and conquered germ infection where all old-standard antiseptics had failed.

Never before was there an antiseptic so healing, so effective in destroying germs, and with so many uses in every home.

Kloria doesn't irritate, is soothing, pleasant, and absolutely safe, because not poisonous. Yet by scientific test, it is over 40 times more germ-destroying than carbolic acid.

Apply it without fear to any skin disease, such as eczema or barber's itch, and notice how quickly the trouble fades away. Mark how it soothes soreness, irritation and itching. Note how promptly it destroys the pus infection of boils, carbuncles and sores; how it heals cuts and burns more rapidly than was ever known before. For dandruff, simply wet the scalp with Kloria and watch the scalp itching disappear in a few applications, yet it is harmless as water to the hair. Try it for mouth-wash and gargle—see how quickly it relieves sore throat—how clean the mouth feels. Harmless, yet far more effective than poisonous antiseptics for personal hygiene.

Dissolve a few Kloria Tablets in water and instantly you have, at a cost of a few cents, a large bottle of liquid antiseptic which is clean, colorless, stainless and virtually odorless.

All druggists, 50c. Money refunded if not satisfied.

New Motion Picture Stories

Stars and producers are searching the country for new, workable story-ideas. Literary genius is not essential. It never was. Learn how you can now master this new art more easily than you may believe. The industry is face to face with a famine in photoplays. More men and women must be trained to write photoplays if the industry is to survive.

$250 to $2,000 for Workable Story-Plots

Elizabeth Thatcher. Never had literary training or experience. Sold her first story to Thos. H. Ince Studios.

IF you have a spark of creative imagination—if you have any story ideas—even if you have never written a line for publication, the motion picture industry now offers you an exceptional opportunity. From $250 to $2,000 are being paid for suitable new ideas.

A little over two years ago the famine in photoplays became acute. Public taste changed. Play-goers began to demand real stories. Plenty of manuscripts were being submitted, but most were unsuitable. For writers did not know how to adapt their stories to the screen. A plan for home study had to be devised to develop new writers. So Frederick Palmer, former staff writer for Keystone, Triangle, Fox and Universal Studios, and author of hundreds of photoplays, organized a correspondence course in photoplay writing and selling, which has received unqualified endorsement of the foremost producers, stars and scenario writers.

$3,000 for a Story

FROM all walks of life people are now supplying motion picture stories. One of our students sold his first story for $3,000. "His Majesty the American" (Douglas Fairbanks) and "Live Sparks" were written by Palmer students. James Kendrick of Texas has sold six stories since enrolling less than a year ago. Space does not permit naming dozens of others who, without literary genius or training, have succeeded in this new field of art. Many of our members have taken staff positions in studios—four in one studio alone.

A Pleasant Study

MANY of our successful members begin to sell their stories shortly after enrolling. For you start work on your picture play almost immediately. The Palmer Handbook is furnished, also a glossary of studio terms and phrases. And twelve leading figures in the motion picture industry have contributed special printed lectures covering every phase of photoplay plot construction. We bring the motion picture studio to you, step by step. Our Marketing Bureau helps to sell your stories after we help you develop and perfect your plots.

Advisory Council

THE educational policy of the Palmer Photoplay Corporation is directed by the important figures in the industry. Cecil B. DeMille, Director-General of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation; Thomas H. Ince, head of the Thomas H. Ince Studios; Lois Weber, America's greatest woman producer and director; Rob Wagner, motion picture writer for the Saturday Evening Post.

Cecil B. DeMille, Director-General, Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. Member, Palmer Advisory Council.

FOR those who are really interested in this new opportunity, we have prepared an elaborate book, "The Secret of Successful Photoplay Writing." It lays before you the Palmer Course and service in greater detail. And remember, there is one peculiar thing about the Palmer Plan. MILTON

MILTON is one of the most effective—yet perfectly safe—germ-killers known. MILTON kills poisonous microbes wherever it comes in contact with them. MILTON thoroughly disinfects the diapers and removes all stains and odors; a tablespoonful to a quart of water is sufficient.

PERFECTLY SAFE in all of its many uses

MILTON is not poisonous, will not corrode the skin; cannot take fire or explode. It is perfectly safe to have about the nursery. Yet it is more efficient than many usual and sometimes dangerous compounds.

Baked Beans the Brer Rabbit way are a new delight! Try the recipe in the Brer Rabbit Recipe Book.

How to get the real Southern flavor in your goodies

THOSE famous old-fashioned Southern dishes—gingerbread, fruit cake, cookies, 'lasses pie! The fame of Louisiana's good things spread far and wide.

Recipes were passed along, copied carefully—but what became of that celebrated "Louisiana plantation flavor"?—Ah! That had come from something all the recipes called for, from something that practically went out of existence for years—from the home-made molasses. It was the flavor of that old-fashioned sugar-cane molasses.

Spurred by the memory of that delicious taste, two young men raised in Louisiana, determined to revive this bygone delicacy of their plantation days and to put up for the women of America molasses that would duplicate that old-time aroma and flavor.

This is Brer Rabbit Molasses, named for the hero of the plantation stories of their boyhood.

The moment the women of America used Brer Rabbit they recognized that here at last was the molasses for which they had been longing—a molasses so fragrant and so full flavored, sweet and pure, that one taste takes you back to the joys of childhood.

The minute the can is opened the delicious old-time aroma makes you hungry.

Taste it. That luscious full flavor that gives your gingerbread, cookies, dark cakes and breads the rich, delectable flavor of plantation days.

See how much lighter they bake up—the foods you make with Brer Rabbit Molasses. What new softness and richness they have! The family will enjoy the real plantation flavor—the flavor that has made Brer Rabbit the most popular molasses in the world.

You can get Brer Rabbit at your grocer's—both the light molasses (gold label—for table use as well as for cooking) and the dark molasses (green label—a stronger flavor for cooking). Penick & Ford, Ltd., New Orleans.

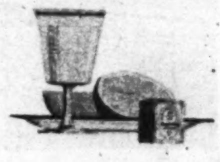
Pimples, blackheads, boils—

are signs of a lowered vitality

A familiar food now used to correct them

How to take yeast



Some take it in fruit juices or in water

Some spread it on crackers or bread

Othe.s like it plain

"THE causes of acne (pimples and blackheads) are always found in a lowered vitality," writes a skin specialist connected with several of New York's important hospitals. And "the repeated occurrence of boils should always be looked upon as an indication of lowered vitality," he also states.

Thousands of men and women suffer from these painful and embarrassing ailments. About three times as many women as men are troubled with pimples and blackheads. Boils, on the other hand, afflict more men than women.

To correct these widespread ailments, yeast, the familiar little cake of food, has long been prescribed by physicians and hospitals.

Today, the special value of Fleischmann's yeast as a "conditioner" and health builder is becoming widely recognized. It is now known to be the richest source of "vitamine"—a newly discovered food element, essential to health but lacking in many every-day foods. It thus helps correct the basic causes of acne and boils.

In investigations carried on under the direction of Dr. Philip B. Hawk in leading institutions in Philadelphia and New York, its value for treating pimples and boils was demonstrated. There was rapid improvement in cases of acne, and cases of boils were either greatly improved or cured more rapidly than ever before noted—and without recurrence.

To learn more about this new importance of yeast in diet, fill out the coupon below and send for the new booklet, "Yeast for Health." Constipation, a trouble that is often contributory to pimples and boils, is also being corrected by the addition of yeast to the diet. You will find interesting reports on its value for this trouble also in this booklet.

How to take yeast

Take from one to three cakes of Fleischmann's Yeast a day, before or between meals. You will quickly learn to like its taste. Different people prefer it in various ways—dissolved in fruit juices or water—spread on crackers or bread or just plain. Those who are troubled with gas should first dissolve it in boiling water. People ask: "Won't it, when taken, have the effect it has in raising bread?" No. Yeast is highly digestible and it is assimilated just like any other food. Place a standing order with your grocer for Fleischmann's Yeast.

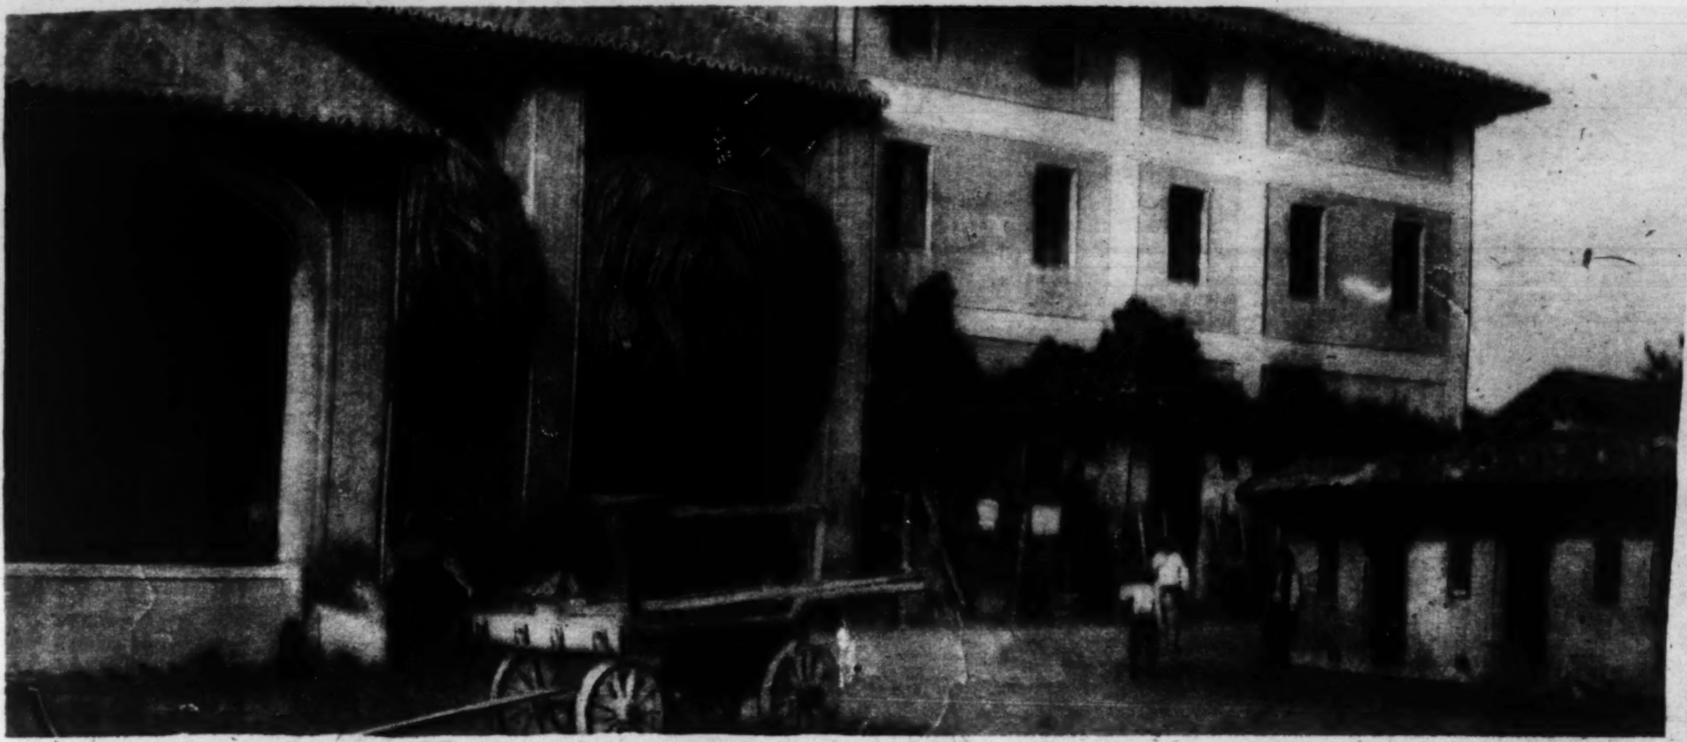
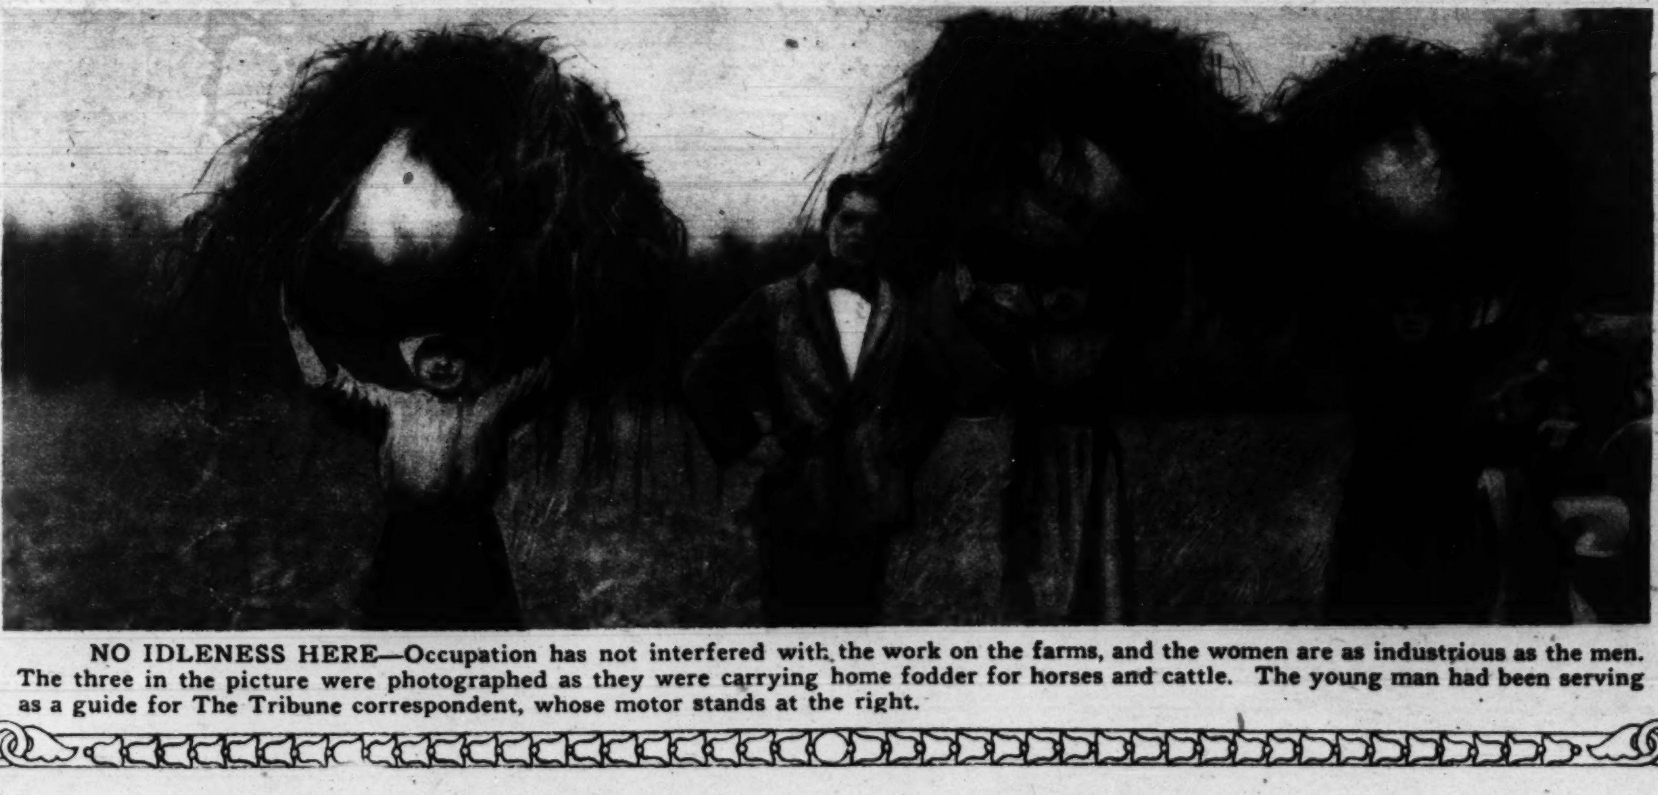
COMMUNISM in ITALY

(Photographs from John Clayton, Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.)



BUILDINGS ON THE ESTATE OF THE MARQUISE DE PIOVERA, near Genoa, which was taken over by the peasants during the recent Italian uprisings. The stately manor house and the fine barns which formerly belonged to the marquise are now occupied without rent by the peasants.

PEASANT LEADERS OF OCCUPATION on the estate of the Marquise de Piovera, in front of their headquarters in the village of Piovera. Men of this type and their families have established communal homes in what were formerly the great rural manors.



NO IDLENESS HERE—Occupation has not interfered with the work on the farms, and the women are as industrious as the men. The three in the picture were photographed as they were carrying home fodder for horses and cattle. The young man had been serving as a guide for The Tribune correspondent, whose motor stands at the right.

That tense moment

when you caused a stir of admiration

A FLURRY of white! The tinkling conversation softens to an undertone. There is a slow turning of heads—an irresistible levelling of all eyes. For a moment, the gayety is hushed!

All eyes are centered on the newcomer—on the dazzling beauty of her complexion. Smooth, delicate as almond blossoms—with a shimmering transparency, a warm glow of color! It dazzles!

She has woven a spell around her—not with a classic profile or the most exquisite of gowns—but with a clear, brilliant complexion, the one feature of beauty that every girl can attain with a simple understanding of the requirements of the skin.

There is no reason why you yourself cannot be the center of interested eyes—why your entrance should not stir that tense wonderment. You can bring out all the latent beauty of your skin—that delicate transparency, the satin-smoothness, the natural brilliancy and warm rose tints.

Use the Soap that Agrees with your Skin.

Through its special process, called Heat-Toning, Pears' Soap is a particularly beneficial cleansing agent. While it cleanses the surface as ordinary soaps do, it does more—it soothes the sensitive underneath-life of the skin and agrees with it.

By this Heat-Toning process, Pears' becomes a finished soap—at the stage where the manufacture of other soaps is over and the product is ready for sale, Pears' is Heat-Toned, changing the very nature of the soap cake, even the color, while the light, creamy lather, instead of irritating delicate, sensitive skins actually is an aid to skin-beauty.

Pears' Soap can be purchased at leading druggists, department stores and fancy grocers throughout the country. If you have never known the pleasure of Pears' and the benefits to be derived from its daily use, this is an excellent time of the year to put it to the test—in these November winds.

How to give your nails a perfect manicure

Cutex Cuticle Remover comes in 35-cent and 65-cent sizes. Cutex Nail White, Cutex Nail Polish and Cutex Cold Cream are each 35 cents. At all drug and department stores in the United States and Canada

WITH the least bit of time, the least bit of trouble and expense, your hands can always be as well-groomed as though you had just come from the manicurist.

The most important part of a manicure is the care of the cuticle. Never cut it. Specialists say that such cutting causes hangnails and rough, uneven cuticle. And the more you cut the cuticle, the faster it grows.

Try this manicure once—and you will never go back to cutting. Wrap a bit of cotton around the end of an orange stick (both come in the Cutex package). Dip it into the Cutex bottle and work the stick around the base of the nail, gently pushing back the dead cuticle. Wash the hands, pressing back the cuticle with a towel.

Next apply Cutex Nail White directly from the tube underneath the nails. This leaves the nail tips snowy-white. Finish your manicure with Cutex Nail Polish. For a brilliant, lasting polish, use the Cutex Paste Polish first, then the Cake or Powder Polish.

Six manicures for 20 cents

Mail the coupon below with 20c, and we will send you an Introductory Manicure Set, which contains enough of each of the Cutex preparations to give you six wonderful manicures. Send for it today! Address Northam Warren, 114 West 17th St., New York City.

If he should step off—

Yet the total impact of your 8,000 steps a day is greater

IF he should step off the top of this 16-story building, he would hit the pavement below with an impact of 600 tons.

Yet the impact would not be as great as the total impact of the 8,000 steps you take on the average every day.

This startling comparison reveals one of the greatest sources of fatigue in modern life. Only a few years ago we walked on soft dirt paths and elastic turf which cushioned every step. For such walking Nature provided a bony arch of the foot and the pad of flesh at the heel to absorb the lighter shocks.

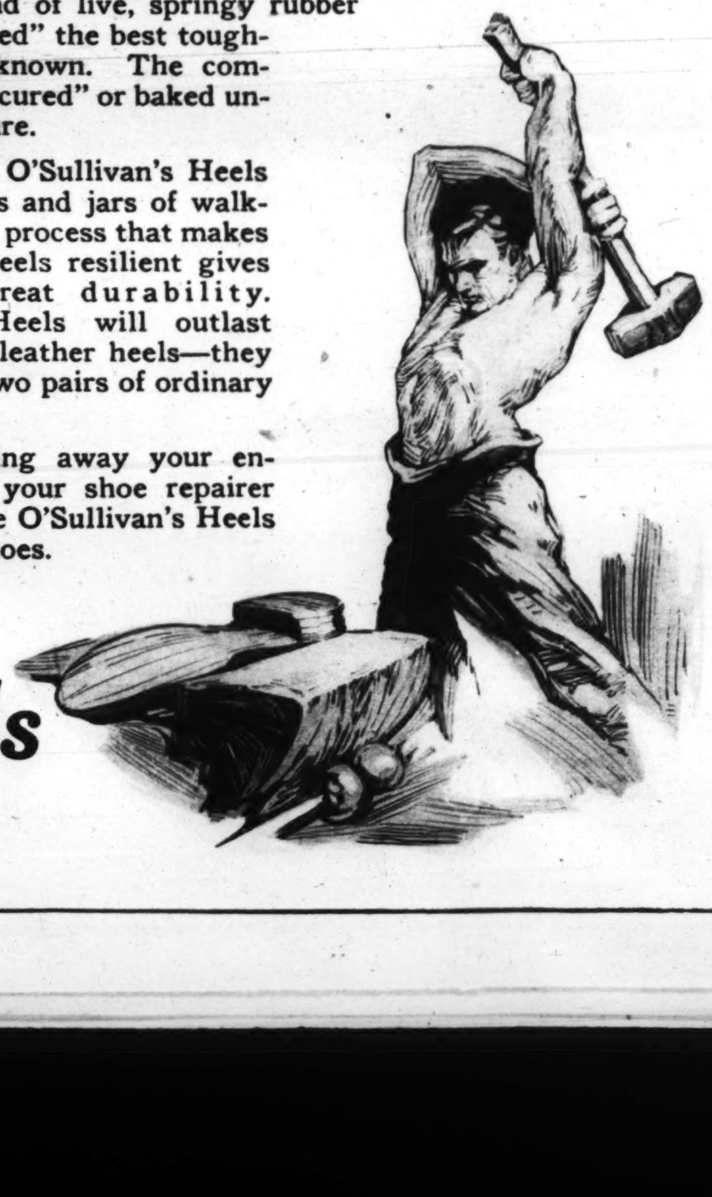
But conditions have changed. Hard, unyielding pavements, side-walks and floors have replaced the natural ground in all our cities and towns. Now every step with leather heels or ordinary "dead" rubber heels upon these modern pavements acts as a hammer blow to your nervous system. The repeated shocks of your 8,000 steps a day take their toll of nervous energy—contribute largely to that feeling of over-fatigue you so often experience.

Yet you can eliminate this source of fatigue. You cannot change the pavements, but you can change your heels. O'Sullivan's Heels absorb the jolts and jars of walking on hard pavements.

To secure the resiliency, the springiness of O'Sullivan's Heels, the highest grades of rubber are blended by a special formula. With this blend of live, springy rubber are "compounded" the best toughening agents known. The compound is then "cured" or baked under high pressure.

This is why O'Sullivan's Heels absorb the jolts and jars of walking. The same process that makes O'Sullivan's Heels resilient gives them their great durability. O'Sullivan's Heels will outlast three pairs of leather heels—they often outlast two pairs of ordinary rubber heels.

Stop pounding away your energy. Go to your shoe repairer today and have O'Sullivan's Heels put on your shoes.



With every step on hard heels you are pounding away your energy.

We shall keep an eye on the lady. Pretty girl, isn't she?

LLOYD HUGHES, now being starred in the Ince production "Americanism," is one of the best looking and most talented of the young men who are newcomers to the screen.

Mr. Hughes was born in Bisbee, Arizona, in 1899, and educated at the Polytechnic, L. A. He worked for Paramount in a number of pictures, was seen in Jewel-Universal's "Heart of Humanity," was with Robertson Cole in "The Turn of the Road," and is now back with Ince-Paramount.

Beautify your Hair with "DANDERINE"

35c a bottle! Freshen your scalp! Stop falling hair! Remove dandruff! Have lots of wavy, glossy, beautiful hair! You can!

IF YOU care for heavy hair, that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair; besides, it eradicates every particle of dandruff; you cannot have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its luster, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp, the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast.

If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggly, or too oily, get a bottle of Knowlton's Danderine, apply a little as directed, and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually, why not now?

Little rules that help you look your best

Occasionally you meet girls who are beautiful without effort; but most lovely people are lovely because they know the rules. To make the powder stay on, to prevent roughness, dullness, lines — requires intelligent care. Here are a few simple rules, approved by skin specialists, which every woman would do well to follow.

Never permit your face to look shiny

Powder—Yes. Just enough powder to have that soft, natural look. And when you powder do it to last. Powdering in public is an admission that you are uneasy about your appearance.

The only way to make powder stay on is —not to put on an excessive amount—but to begin with the right powder base. Then you can carefully powder your face, and never have a moment's concern about its losing its soft, fresh appearance.

For this you need a cream which will not reappear in an unpleasant shine. Pond's Vanishing Cream does not contain a bit of oil. It disappears at once never to reappear. Before you powder take just a little Pond's Vanishing Cream — a tiny bit — on your finger tips. Rub it lightly into your face. Notice the instant smoothness it gives your skin. Now powder as usual. See how smoothly the powder goes on — how natural it looks. You will find that it will stay on two or three times as long as ever before. You need never again fear a shiny face.

A rough skin a sign of carelessness

To go out even in the milder weather of winter without protecting your skin is simply reckless; for wind and cold whip the moisture out of your skin and cause roughness.

Skin specialists say you can protect your skin from this injury by applying, before you go out, a cream which makes up for the moisture that the wind whips out. For protection, as for a powder base, you need a cream without oil. The same pure, greaseless Pond's Vanishing Cream which you use as a base for powder, contains an ingredient famous for years for its softening, protective properties. Always before going out, smooth a little Pond's Vanishing Cream into your face and hands. It is a good idea to carry a tube of it right in your handbag so that immediately before and after motoring you can soften your hands and face with it. In this way the delicate texture of the skin will not suffer from exposure.

Never let your skin look tired

When you are tired, yet you must look your best, you can bring your skin new freshness by applying a cream that is instantly absorbed by the weary skin. The instantly disappearing qualities of Pond's Vanishing Cream give it a remarkable effectiveness in bringing immediate freshness to your skin. Just a bit of it rubbed into the skin relieves in a moment the strained look around mouth and eyes and brings new transparency to your complexion.

The bedtime cleansing that brings a clear skin. Never retire without it

One of the chief reasons for a "muddy" look in the skin is the dust that gets lodged deep within the pores.

The only means of keeping the skin clear is to remove deep-seated dust. For this cleansing you need an entirely different cream from the one you use for a powder base, and protection. The right cream for cleansing is one prepared with an oil base. The formula for Pond's Cold Cream was especially worked out to supply just the amount of oil to give it the highest cleansing power. At night rub Pond's Cold Cream into the pores of the face, neck and hands, and wipe it off with a soft cloth. Give your skin this cleansing with Pond's Cold Cream regularly and you can keep your skin clear.

Catch the little lines before they grow deep

By starting in time you can keep your face free of the wretched little lines that will keep starting. For this, too, you need a cream with an oil base, a cream that will work into the skin gradually. Pond's Cold Cream has just the smoothness and body required to make a perfect massage cream.

Every normal skin needs both of these creams. Neither cream will foster the growth of hair.

Get a jar or tube of each at any drug or department store. See how quickly they make you look your best.

Fashions Beauty Contests

SOME REASONS for WINTER EVENINGS by Corinne Lowe

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Now that Olga and Bridget and Dinah have repudiated the kitchen, the most of us are become Cinderellas. The only time that we can reclaim our past grandeur is in the evening, and, this being the case, evening gown has become about the only fairy godmother this unfairylike world can support.

As we sit by the ashes—or, more properly, by the fireless cooker—it is pleasant to think that this godmother waits just around the corner. Indeed, there is psychological explanation for the fact that during the last year the evening gown has received more attention than ever before.

It is just as one woman puts it. "The evening is the only time I've got to remember I ever was a lady," says she, "and I dress myself right for the part. This year I'm spending all the wages I used to pay my cook on three new evening dresses."

Speaking in general of the new gowns, it may be mentioned right here that they are gowns, not separate skirts, with widely separated bodices. We are more decked than décolleté, and the extreme styles of last year seem to be at an end. The most formal of evening gowns are cut quite high in the back, and there is a decided impulse toward capes and draperies of lace or tulle which veil both shoulders and back. Square and round and V-shaped neck lines are all represented, and it is hard to say which form is preferred.

The most stunning of the extremely formal evening gowns are draped, and draped in a manner almost as classic as ancient Athens herself could have suggested. An illustration of the draped evening gown of the season is found in the blue panne velvet model at the left, with its trimming of emerald beads and of silver. And, by the way, velvet is used as extensively in this realm of clothes as it is for afternoon frocks. Black, various shades of blue, and that most vivid of all tints, geranium red, are the colors most favored in this fabric.

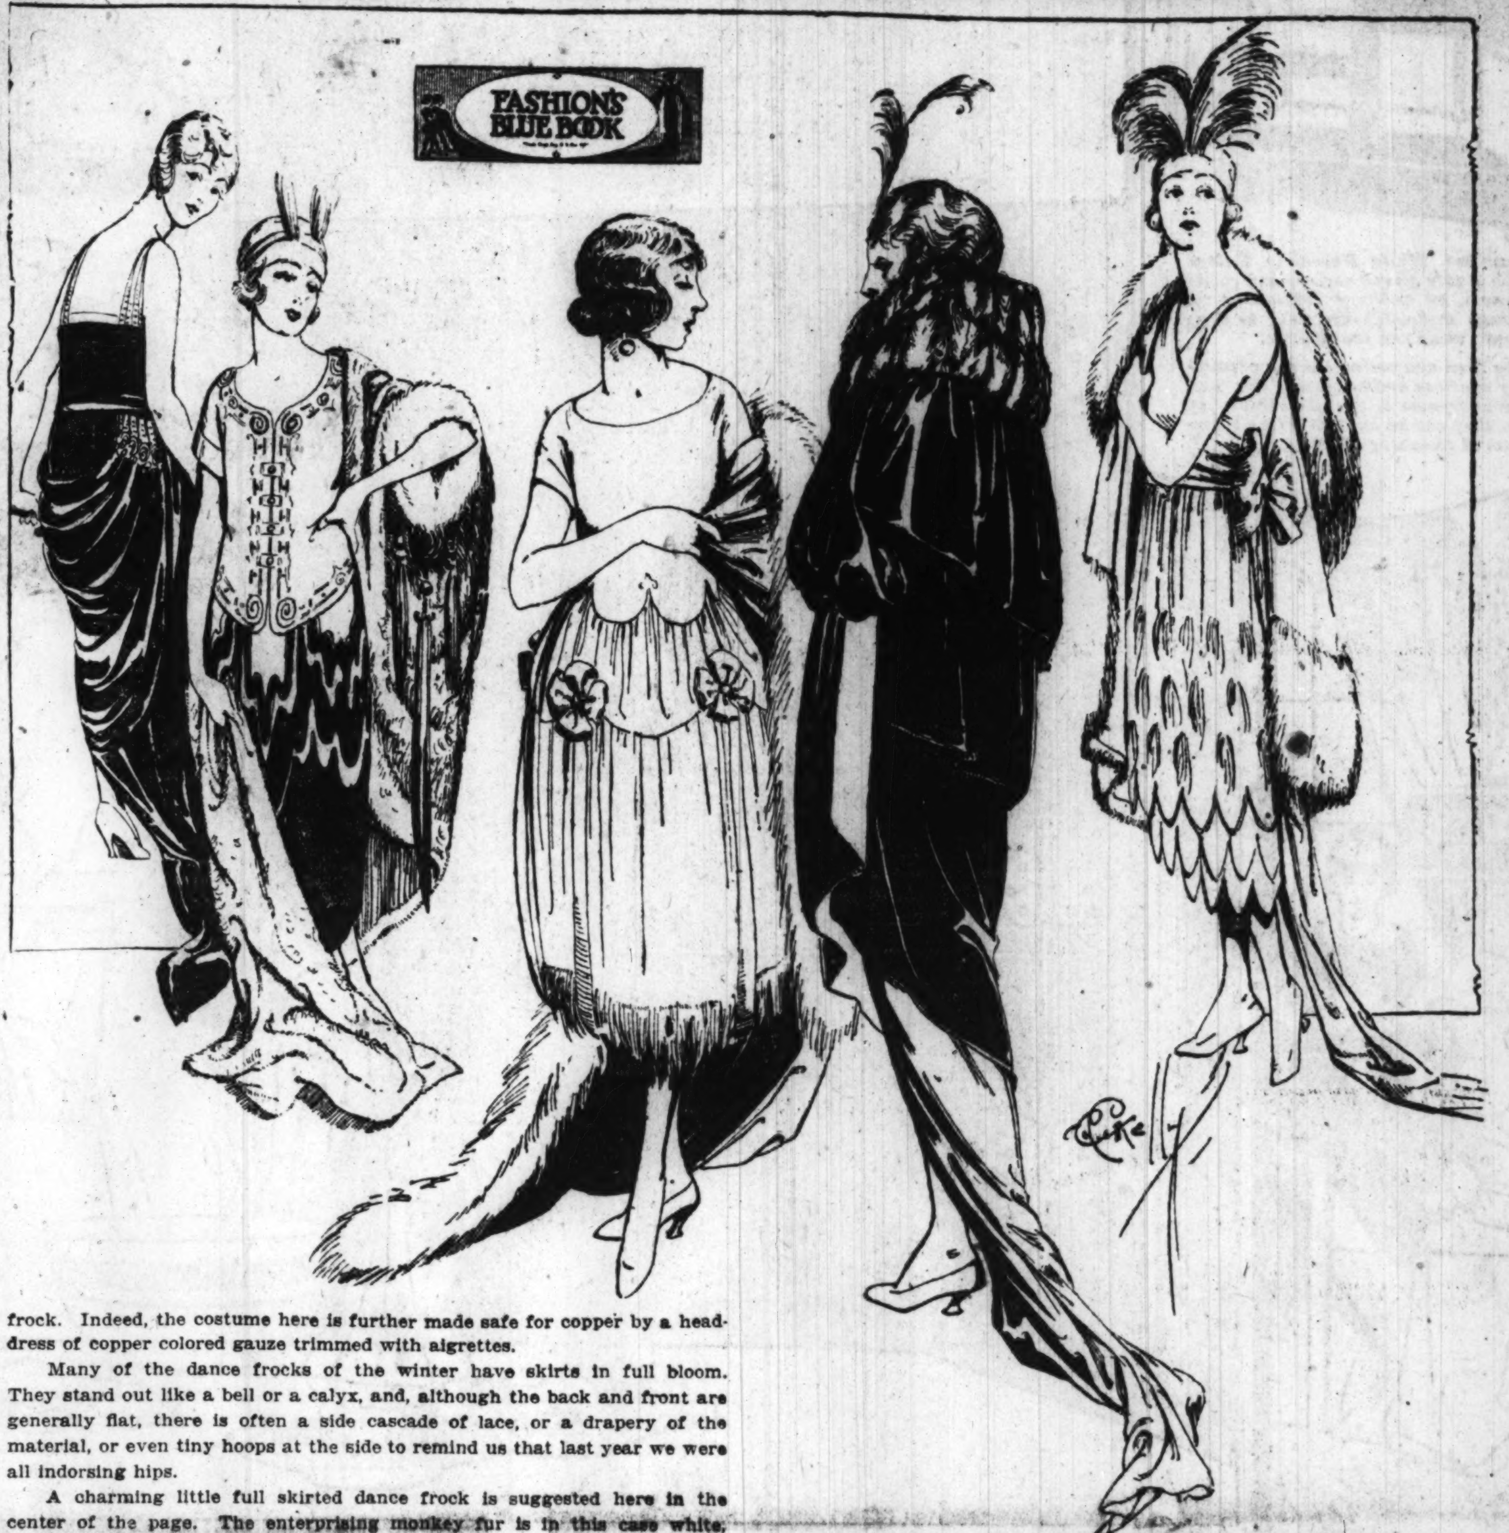
That the classic is the "classy," as far as evening gowns are concerned, is indicated not only by drapery but by ornamentation. Many of the embroidery motifs shown this year were stylish in the time of Pericles. They appear on day frocks as well as the most elaborate ones, and, after looking over the season's offerings from Paris, it would seem as if every designer had worked with an Etruscan or Cretan vase before his eyes.

There is a certain magnificence about some of these new velvet robes that makes us think of coronation robes and mantles. Renée, for example, has created one evening ggown of a wonderful shade of dull blue, the back décolletage of which is banded in silver thread embroidery with motifs borrowed from classic Greece. It goes to show how little need we have of hanging ourselves with jet and paillettes and what not in order to arrive at pictorial richness of effect.

In addition to the Greek and Egyptian draped effects so widely utilized in the formal evening gown, we have other sources of inspiration. Both the renaissance and the moyen age have contributed to make some of our dinner frocks and evening gowns look almost the copies of the tinted figures in some old missal.

Take, for example, the dinner frock shown second from the left. Why, Queen Matilda herself might have worn it as she fled by night from her castle walls! For the long corsage was practiced in this exact form in the days of the Plantagenets. This frock is also of velvet, although here it is in two tones. The bodice is a light shade of terra cotta, while the skirt is of a darker hue. Copper metal threads, mixed with crystal beads, form the embroidery of the corsage, and the note of copper is echoed in the copper satin lining of the cinnamon caracul coat.

It must be remembered, indeed, that the woman who wishes to dress well by night adheres to the same line of conduct as does she who wishes to dress well by day. That is to say, she sees to it that her wrap tactfully repeats in either lining or trimming some color shown in the accompanying frock. Indeed, the costume here is further made safe for copper by a headdress of copper colored gauze trimmed with aigrettes.



Many of the dance frocks of the winter have skirts in full bloom. They stand out like a bell or a calyx, and, although the back and front are generally flat, there is often a side cascade of lace, or a drapery of the material, or even tiny hoops at the side to remind us that last year we were all indorsing hips.

A charming little full skirted dance frock is suggested here in the center of the page. The enterprising monkey fur is in this case white, and it is attached to a skirt of lemon colored tulle draped over an underskirt of silver cloth. The corsage of lemon velvet extends its influence to rosettes on the skirt, which drop velvet ribbons of the same fabric and shade to the hem, where they are turned.

The dance frock with a skirt made of narrow ribbon panels, arranged to hang flatly and then generally turned under the hem, is one of the successes of the season, and since launched by Renée has appeared in hundreds of versions.

However, tulle is seen on the majority of the frocks of this character, and lace of all kinds possesses the same authority here as elsewhere. Often there is a touch of fur asserted among these delicate fabrics, and one of the most charming of the imported models punctuated each of the large medallions of its lace overskirt with a tiny tail of ermine.

In both dinner and dance frocks we find again the quaint and charming custom of combining two materials or two colors, or both. Thus Lanvin has created a delightful evening gown which contrasts a snug fitting little black velvet basque with a skirt of silver lame, which flares from the knee down, like that of a Spanish dancer. And a number of less spectacular models join black velvet bodice to skirt of embroidered black tulle or lace.

Tiers—busy tiers! Their field of industry is now not only the frock skirt but the wrap. So many of the French wraps which we have seen are built in three tier effects, a bit of engineering which, of course, offers all manner of contrast of color and material, inasmuch as the various sections may be made alternately of fur and cloth.

The evening wrap, second from the right, does not avail itself of this opportunity for tier variety. It is sufficiently arresting as it is, for nothing could be more graceful than the disposition of its material. This material is sable colored velours, which is lined with silver satin and collared with sable fur.

The white evening gown is one of the salient features of the winter mode. Madeleine et Madeleine have scored here, in fact, a notable success. Now, we have all heard of the Snow Queen. But it has rested with this famous French house to invent the Snow Princess. Of course, this is not the legal name of the gown, but the play on words is inevitable. One thinks of it every time one sees the model, and this is frequently, for it has appeared in almost every noteworthy collection of imports shown in New York this autumn.

The frock is made of white velvet, and it follows the semi-princess line, which is the one strikingly novel silhouette of the season. That is to say, the material is crushed into soft folds below the waist line—a process which defines without emphasizing the lines of the figure. The sole trimming of this frock consists of a jet ornament on either hip, from which depend side trains of black tulle. Indeed, the white evening frock generally adds some touch of black.

This last statement does not apply, however, to the frock at the right of this page, for the skirt of white marquisette is edged with pearls and the tassels of ostrich are of white. The corsage and train are snowy satin, and only the latter permits a glimpse of gray satin lining. A cape of tawny velours de laine, trimmed with red fox, and a cap of gold tissue with paradise complete this costume.

The train is still with us, and is inspirational as a cougar. You can never tell from what side of the frock or what fold of the drapery it is going to spring out at you. Frequently it is formed, as is the case with the model just described, by a continuation of the girdle or of the corsage. Often it is a wisp of tulle or lace attached to an ornament on the hips and dipping down below the sides of the skirt.

This latter is the schedule observed, for example, by the Madeleines' famous princess frock of white velvet. Double trains are extremely good this year, and among these the device used by Renée is worthy of particular note; for this famous designer cuts the back section of evening frocks in the center of the hem and allows the square panels to drip at the sides.

Scientific Refrigeration at Record-Breaking Price Saving

When you and your guests are assembled around the table and you are waiting for dessert, it helps out to know that the cream has not "turned," over night.

That assurance can be yours, and with it another. You can know that meats, fruit, milk, butter and all other table delicacies are equally as good—are as sweet and wholesome as when delivered—if, summer and winter you keep them away from dirt, dust, germs, insects and heat, in a roomy, correctly-chilled Alaska.

With the Alaska Cork Insulated Refrigerator you have scientific refrigeration at its best, and considering daily food-saving and ice-saving, at a cost so low that every economy record is broken.

Alaska supremacy is a matter of science. The "cubed" cork and "confined" air walls used in Alaska construction combine with tight-locking doors and top and air-tight joints to keep in the cold and out the heat to an amazing degree.

Yet this real refrigerator costs you no more than the ordinary kind. Why not insist on having it—the "cork insulated" Alaska!

Advanced construction throughout—all sizes, all prices—beautifully and durably made, lined either with seamless, round-cornered Porcelain; or with White Enamel—sanitary, easy to clean, labor-saving—incomparable.

See the Alaska line at your dealer's, and send for attractive booklet.

Beautiful Hair by Antoinette Donnelly
MAUDE MARTIN ELLIS

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you if you wish a personal reply send stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, the Chicago Sunday Tribune.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

"O THIS is a sad life," confided a fetching young matron in a club washroom. "Here I've spent nigh thirty years nursing along a poorly endowed head of hair and just when I have it to the point where it covers my skull hopefully it up and turns gray on me. Now, I ask what is a poor girl going to do?"

"That isn't half the woe, old dear," sympathetically responds the girl addressed, "as waking up one fine morning to find your locks half what they used to be. And that's me! I'm afraid to touch my hair for fear I'll have to dress it on the brush instead of on my poor troubled old head. That's woe! Wouldn't you rather be gray haired than bald, I ask you? Why, mine is going so fast pretty soon there'll be nothing to keep my hat from sliding down to my chin."

Gray Hair Can Be Joy.

Of such are the wails of the hair troubled!

I ask you, is there grief equal to the separation of a mother scalp and the children thereof? There may be, but you'd never suspect it if you heard the agonized cries for help that come to me by mail!

The gray hair cannot be helped but extra care, and then it can be made the dominating and loveliest feature of a person. A beautifully dressed head of gray hair is a joy that you must have experienced as well as I have at the opera and theater. So instead of regarding it as an affliction and resorting to dyes which succeed almost invariably in giving a hardened effect to the face—particularly where henna shades are resorted to—it should be accepted as the impetus for especial care and becomingness in its dressing.

Hair Can Be Saved.

But the departing and departed locks offer poor solace. The vista ahead presents a seat among the baldheaded immortelles. And no lady wants that prominence. If she puts up a good fight, she need not have it, either!

If she begins the fight as soon as she detects the burglar brush getting away with more than a normal shedding she has started on the right and royal road to recovering her coveted crown.

Or, better still, if she will go in for burglary insurance by daily installments of vigorous brushings, "there ain't going to be no loss and there ain't going to be no woe."

If the average woman neglected brushing her teeth the way she will slide into bed at night and into her clothes in the morning with no more brushing of the hair than it takes to get the snarls out, toothlessness would be hiding behind many a pair of lips.

No need commenting on the fact that a good head of hair is an enviable possession. A girl learns that along with her A. B. C.'s, if not before. Her mother speaks admiringly of a school chum's hair, or other mothers may eulogize over her own. And on up through girlhood and into womanhood she hears this phase of beauty constantly commented upon.

Too Much Neglect.

Yet, mother's job of training the growing girl to brush her hair as regularly as her teeth seems to be a matter of peculiar neglect. Yet, many of the trials of the grownups would be eliminated if the young girl were trained to believe that hair should receive this daily attention.

A simple enough deduction it is that hair requires a clean scalp and a healthy one to thrive upon. The once-in-two-weeks shampoo, or three weeks, as the case may be, is not sufficient care. There is a daily accumulation of dust and grime and soot that works its way through hair to scalp and unless removed becomes mixed with the oils and fat secretions thereof and presently a diseased scalp is discovered and the hairs begin to depart.

The scalp contains the blood vessels that nourish the hair. It should be thick and pliable and move freely over the bones of the skull. If the scalp is drawn tightly over the skull it tends to constrict the blood vessels and so lessens the supply of blood to the scalp and cause atrophy of the roots.

The Value of Brushing.

Now, brushing stimulates the sebaceous glands to activity. It stimulates the roots thoroughly. It is cleansing It distributes the fat of the sebaceous glands throughout the hair and prevents that dry, lusterless appearance which so often unmakes the beautiful head. The brushing will prevent dandruff. Brushing, too, is the easiest and quickest way to massage hair. Five minutes' brushing morning and night—brushing as if you meant it—brushing until there is a feeling of life in the scalp, is the trick of a good head of hair.

If the hair is falling in quantities, brush just as vigorously, no matter if the brush does terrify you with its dead hairs. There's no good in keeping them, and in addition massage your scalp vigorously every night for a few minutes. Even without a tonic you will be surprised what scalp massage will do to arrest falling hair. Just take your four fingers of each hand and make them work together, going over the entire scalp and rubbing for dear life. You do not need to be familiar with any special scalp manipulation. Just work over the entire scalp. If this does not do the work add a tonic to the finger tips.

A Good Tonic.

As I said in a recent story, salt brine [common salt and water dissolved into a good strong brine] has proved a satisfactory remedy with a number of women. Or a good tonic is: Resorcin, forty-five grains; glycerin, one ounce, and equal parts water and alcohol to fill a six ounce bottle. This tonic is best for dry, falling hair. For oily hair, the following is recommended: Resorcin, forty grains; water, one and one-half ounces; alcohol, one and one-half ounces; witch hazel, one and one-half ounces. The witch hazel and alcohol, being astringents, help reduce the pores to normal size and have a drying effect.

Shampoo when the hair is dirty which under normal city conditions, is every two weeks.

Keep Brushes Clean.

Don't undo the work of cleanliness by wearing dirt and dust infested padding. I saw a young girl in the car the other day with the most extended "cootie cages," as the boys vulgarly dub them, the framework of which protruding through was of such ugly and dirty material that it was thoroughly repelling. I suppose she wears that day after day and week after week, stifling any fresh young strands of natural hair in their infancy.

Keep your brush scrupulously clean. And insist on its being as private to your individual use as your tooth brush. You have no idea how much dandruff is transmitted through a family brush and comb.

BEAUTY ANSWERS.

RED HANDS: EQUAL PARTS glycerin and camphor applied nightly is a fine thing to beautify your hands. Manicuring instructions are too long to print, but will mail them to you in return for stamped, addressed envelope.

ETHEL: THE OVERDEVELOPED girl of 16 is a more or less common condition through which the growing girl passes and emerges quite proportionately formed. However, you must, to arrive into full womanhood gracefully, go in for school gymnastics and games, outdoor life, and an abstemious eye kept betimes on the candies and sweets that prove the young girl's Waterloo. I can send you exercises that will reduce the bust. Stamped, addressed envelope, please.

LILLIAN R.: YOU ENCLOSED 25 cents in stamps, which was entirely unnecessary, as a single 2 cent stamp will cover all expense attached to answers from me. But that was not your crime. You failed to give your address. So I'm saving the stamps and the formulas asked for until I hear from you again.

How does a love letter contest appeal to you? Don't you love to read them? Don't you love to receive them? Can you write a good one yourself? The Tribune is going to pay $5 for every love letter published. So, if you can write a good one, or if you have one in your private or family possession you would like to enter in the contest, send it to Doris Blake, Chicago Tribune. As no letters will be returned, send copies of the ones you wish to retain possession of.

MY FUNNIEST CHILDHOOD ADVENTURE

What was the most amusing thing you did as a youngster? You must have been up to some tricks. We'd like to hear about it. Address Funniest Childhood Adventures, Chicago Tribune. Don't get this contest mixed with Bright Sayings. It's deeds we want to hear about. The Tribune will pay $1 for every letter published.

A Bob for Rover.

My inseparable companions were my next door neighbor, of the same age, and his dog Rover, the family pride. Rover was always being exhibited at dog shows, but he wasn't a bit set up about it. He was big and black, with long, shaggy hair. We hitched him to wagons, and rode him "horseback," and he never protested.

One day I came home from having my hair trimmed, as I wore it bobbed, and a bright thought struck me. Why shouldnt' Rover have his hair bobbed? I made the suggestion to Rover's master and he was greatly impressed. So we found the necessary scissors and set to work. It took us some time, as Rover was a big dog and we did a thorough job, cutting it as close as possible. Then we viewed our work with satisfaction. Rover was beautifully "bobbed."

I shall never forget the shrieks and screams when Rover wandered into the kitchen—nor the sessions afterwards with our respective families.

Five Telltale Pennies.

One morning a little friend of mine and I decided that what we wanted most in the world was a lemon and a stick of lemon candy. Mary's mother had given her a nickel, but I knew that mine would not approve of such extravagance. So in her absence, I helped myself to five pennies that I found in her desk. After tying them in a corner of my handkerchief, we started for the store, and, of course, at the foot of the walk, met the person we most wanted to avoid.

She took one look at our guilty countenances, and began the usual questions as to what we were doing, where we were going, and if we had been good. We tried to respond naturally, both of us with fluttering hearts, and the stolen pennies weighing heavily in my hanky, and would have been successful, I am sure, had not a terrible thing happened.

Just as mother turned to Mary, and asked her, "Mary, are you sure Helen's soul is perfectly white?" the pennies slipped from my hand, and rolled one by one with a sickening clatter on to the cement walk.

The only lemons I got that day were the ones my wrathy parent handed me with a firm hand and a firmer hairbrush.

CARD TABLE COVERS.

CARD table covers are something every woman should have several of—there are so many times when they are necessary, and besides having a supply for one's self why not make one or more for Christmas gifts?

There are several pretty ways of making them, and one of the best is made with a fitted piece which makes the cover similar to a box cover. Shrink materials if you wish the covers to be satisfactory after a laundering. There are beautiful linens in the natural color, white and all other colors, that are suitable, and after the linen has been shrunken and smoothly ironed (don't iron it too wet, but iron every bit of it until absolutely dry), cut the linen the size of the table top, measuring way to the edges, and allow for a three-eighths inch seam on the four sides. After cutting the linen a half inch in, pull a thread and cut by it—never cut linen any other way. Cut strips of cretonne four or five inches wide, and seam together at the four corners so it will fit the table top, then finish the bottom edge with a narrow hem.

If the linen is in the natural color, get cretonne having a ground to match, and with bright colors over the surface. One initial can be embroidered in one corner, using the cross-stitch or laid embroidery, as one prefers. Or a small heart, spade, club, and diamond can be stamped on so they lap a little and then embroidered. Indeed, there are all sorts of things one may do to vary the style a little.

Then some of the covers are cut so they are about 1½ inches larger all around, then the table top and the edges are bound and pieces of linen tape sewed at each corner, to tie to the table legs. Others are cut the size of the table top and on either side of each corner an eyelet is worked and through these cords or tapes are run to tie to the legs of the table. Those made all in white are very good looking, and while some might prefer the embroidery in white, others might like to introduce some color or colors in that way.

Why not make a set of four covers, each one a different color? There are such wonderful shades to choose from, and one in blue, or even two in blue, but different shades, one in a rose and the fourth in green (being sure that the colors are chosen in the right shades to look well together) would be most effective. Cut them 1½ inches larger on the four sides, finish with a narrow hem (which should be allowed for extra), and then work a narrow border design in cross stitch above the hem all the way around. Have the initial in cross stitch also.

They are worth taking pains to make well, for they will last almost indefinitely and always look well.

The TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

By Jane Eddington.

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

ROASTING AND BRAISING OF MEATS.

THE main figure on a highly dignified dinner table has been, for nobody knows how many hundreds of years, a large piece of meat, generally roasted meat. On an occasion such as a Christmas feast this meat has been borne to the table in a pageant, greeted with applause, admired for its garnishments, carved with ceremony.

There might be other meats for the meal, but this main dish outranked them, especially in bulk, as a turkey outranks a quail. These latter were the entrees. The "piece de resistance," in ancient polite terms or in the French blue book of dining, was called a relevé—it relieved the soup. The French believe in serving this sort of meat early in the dinner, while the appetite is still keen; the English delay the event. We imitate one or the other, having no original conventions of our own in any matter whatsoever concerning dining. There is an infinite deal that is entertaining, even amusing, about dining if we would look into it with the idea of making eating, which we do use so much as entertainment, more of a polite comedy of manners.

Have Exalted Turkey.

We have exalted the turkey somewhat as a central fact in a meal—the Thanksgiving dinner and others. Some people try to get the French feeling for "Tony," the sucking pig, as a Christmas dinner piece of architecture but it is only those who have given more consideration than ordinary to the art of garnishment, who care to attempt this display as a central feature of the dinner.

We cling to the larded tenderloin, or fillet of beef, if we are in the rising social scale, via the dining route plentifully lined with mahogany trees. But we lack the truffle, except as it comes in bottles, fabulously priced. We are poor vegetable cooks, therefore do not know how to supply the lack of such an elegancy. We do know how to garnish our filet with potatoes, generally or too universally Franconia potatoes.

Does not all this talk presuppose fine cooking? Yes, it does; really the finest cooking of meats, for real dining. As we certainly do have low standards in this cookery, it is hard to devise ways of making any impression in a few paragraphs of print that may make some small ripple in raising these standards. And besides this, the great table in a long dining room is becoming almost extinct. On the great family day of celebration it is often hard to find a dining room big enough for the assembling of the immediate relatives. Our main concern, therefore, must be learning to cook and to present small pieces of meat instead of large, perhaps with the duck and the guinea hen instead of the turkey and capon, or with a cut off the chuck piece of the whole saddle of beef.

Loses in Roasting.

The smaller the piece of meat the more exactly and carefully must we cook it. It dries out more readily with strong heat, and then toughens up. The one scientific fact about foods that any woman attempting to cook should know is that heat much above the boiling point of water will make meat as indigestible as a board. Paradoxical as it may seem, then, we subject a roast to strong heat when we put it into the oven, or before a fire, should we chance to be able to roast it in the latter fashion. But the old spit turned the meat constantly so that no spot got hardened, and we in oven baked meats must soon lower the strong heat, desirable at first to set the surface and keep in the juices. Otherwise it will be unevenly cooked, some parts dried up, most others toughened.

A piece of meat loses weight in the roasting. This is no sure sign that it has lost a grain of nutriment, although it may have lost flavor and much nutriment. But nutriment is surely lost, and a great deal of it, when a roast of meat is in such a condition that a piece of the surface will scale off easily and when this piece will break up into little brown slivers as stiff as toothpicks.

It is obvious that you cannot eat this any more than you can the brown lace surrounding an egg fried over too hot a fire. Even the outmost edge of a fried egg may be tender, and when it is all the egg is better food than when the outer edge is brown and bony. So all of a roast of meat will yield all the nutriment in it if it is correctly cooked, but all will be more or less indigestible—not to be digested—when brown toothpicks can be made from its outer slices.

Making Delicious Gravy.

In order to seal the pores of the meat, a great saving of fuel, hot fat may be poured over any roast of meat before it is put into the oven. Instead of a 400 degree oven it may then be put into one of 300 and slowly roasted to tenderness, instead of fast roasted to toughness. In pot roasting or braising we sear the surface in fat in the pot, rolling it well in seasoned flour first to help in the sealing and also in the gravy.

If this flour is gently browned it helps to make a delicious glossy gravy. Burned, and you will get a bitter and unsightly gravy. If a piece of meat is quite fat the flour is particularly needed. A small piece of brisket bacon or a bacon square if soaked and cleaned may be potroast-

The tip of the one of a turkey, when "the " has been correctly trussed, be the central and highest point graceful long mound. The skin of is turned back, the bony part to cook with the giblets, the turned back, firmly tied and fold der and trussed to the middle the wings.

By constant bast during its three hours of cooking. fifteen or twenty minutes for every pound, it is possible to present a wonderful "piece de resistance." No water is needed. Melted butter may be used finally to froth the surface. As to all the details of procedure they would fill a book. This time we have tried to emphasize the presentation. This emphasis is needed.

The Subject of Carving.

On the subject of carving there have been whole treatises, and a new and up to date one is needed. Fine carving belongs to the age when good taste and manners were the very breath of life. We have gone to the opposite extreme today. Since today a good practical common sense reason can be found for every item of table manners, we can find a practical reason for carving a piece of meat thriftily, for that is what fine carving is, not mere junk cutting.

A twelve pound turkey can be carved so that from twelve to sixteen people may be amply served, with leftovers, in chief a clean rack to simmer twelve hours for a gravy stock. No bone needs to go to anybody, if the drumsticks are cooked with care, and the wings mostly left for the great service they render of making the set up of the roast stable. A correctly served piece of meat will not be turned over by the carver, or from end to end, etc. Of one of the ancient carvers, who did his work for an amusement place where only the finest music and so forth was "served," while refreshments were neat and scanty, it was said that he could cover the whole ground—eleven or twelve acres—with slices from a single ham

Recipe

2 tablespoons granulated gelatine
¼ cup cold water
1 cup boiling water
½ cup sugar
1 cup orange juice
2 tablespoons lemon juice
½ box Campfire Marshmallows
1 candied cherry

Soak gelatine in cold water, add boiling water; when dissolved add sugar and fruit juices. Strain through a fine strainer. Put a thin layer of jelly in a fancy mold that has been rubbed over with cooking oil and wiped out with a piece of soft paper.

Cut Campfire Marshmallows in four pieces each. Arrange pieces of marshmallows in the bottom of the mold to resemble the petals of a flower with the candied cherry in the center.

When jelly is firm, add another layer of jelly and cover with pieces of marshmallows. Let this latter become firm and continue adding jelly and marshmallows until all are used. Chill, remove to serving dish and garnish with whipped cream.

One package of Jello or Jiffy Jell dissolved in one pint boiling water may be molded with the marshmallows as above.

Second Floor

A DWELLING OF TASTE.

RUSKIN tells us that to have true beauty, we must ornament construction, never construct ornament. The decoration must be a part of, the object decorated, never a separate thing artificially applied. Failure to observe this simple rule has caused some of the worst architectural failures in history. It is responsible for what may be called the Rutherford B. Hayes period of domestic architecture in this country, when houses were built without any beauty of line, and then "decorated" by scrolls and screens and curves and twists cut out of wood by jig saws, and nailed to the helpless building which had no voice to protest.

The surest way to avoid this blunder is to choose the right sort of building material, and there is no sounder choice than face brick. The varied colors and textures of this material can make any wall interesting; they ornament construction in the truest sense of the term. At the same time, brick is so handy that it gives the competent architect plenty of chance to vary the lines of his structure, and thereby enhance its interest. The walls of this house, for example, are beautified not only by the tones of the material, but by the form of the openings. The broad arch of the recessed doorway, the round arches of the lower windows, repeated in the entrance of the living porch, just glimpsed at the back, add the charm of an old world cloister to the practical comfort of a dwelling that is modern to the minute.

In design, the house is a compromise between the square plan and the broad and shallow colonial plan. The central chimney and lines of the roof are from the square side of its ancestry. The central doorway and the living room clear across one side are colonial features. It is most interesting to see how these usually contrasting plans are combined in harmonious proportions.

The central hall, with its narrow windows on either side of the entrance door, starts out to be purely colonial, but stops short. Instead of going clear through the house, it travels only about one-fourth of the way, and ends in a handy coat closet. This plan makes the hall merely a dignified form of vestibule.

At the left is the living room, 11 feet by 20 feet 6 inches. It runs clear across the house, with windows on three sides, in true colonial fashion. But the fireplace is not located in the outside wall. On the contrary, it is on the inner wall, just back of the coat closet. Here a delightful fireplace nook has been formed out of what otherwise would be the central part of the hall. This plan not only adds much to the size and convenience of the room, but conserves heat, utilizes space, and saves money. All the flues in the house, one for the living room fireplace, one for the dining room fireplace, one for the furnace, and one for the kitchen range, are accommodated in that single chimney. At present prices of labor and materials, this saves a good many dollars.

At the back of the living room, overlooking the garden but projecting to the side so as to give a view of the street in front, is the brick pillared living porch. During the warmer months, this will be the most occupied part of the house, and even in winter, it frames the landscape in pleasant arches that add to its charm.

On the right of the entrance hall is the dining room, 11 by 13 feet, lighted from two sides, and containing an old fashioned fireplace. At one side of this fireplace is a built-in cabinet. Directly back of the dining room is the kitchen, small, but so handily arranged that it is quite enough for a family living in a six room house.

The stairs occupy a square bay, which juts out even with the porch at the back of the house. The basement staircase opens from the kitchen. The steps to the upper floor go up from an alcove of the living room. This device not only saves space and money, but the landing window gives light from above, a thing always to be desired, but very hard to get in a small house.

The upper floor contains three bedrooms, all with closets and cross ventilation, a bathroom, and three hall closets. Seldom indeed does so small a dwelling have so much storage space.

The walls of this house are of face brick, with common brick for backing, and face bricks likewise are the front steps and the pillars of the living porch. The roof is covered with asphalt shingles and the interior is finished with gypsum plaster on steel lath.

Answers to Queries.

MRS. B. G.: Use taupe rugs, light French gray side walls, gray and mulberry striped draperies, one or two chairs in old blue, some accessories in American Beauty rose, and an accidental touch of lemon color.

MRS. A. B.: I think a plum colored two toned rug would be nice. Let the side walls be French gray. Use peacock blue and old gold for your davenport pillows. You might also have one of garnet colored silk.

REFUSING PROMOTION.

WHEN Marion sat down to luncheon with us last Wednesday it was with a rather subdued and preoccupied air that she picked up the menu card. She didn't look at it immediately, and when she did it was as if she didn't see the printed list before her. Ann too, noticed that she was paying no attention to the selection of her luncheon, and after one or two indirect but vain attempts to attract her attention she finally said:

"What's the matter, Marion? Something gone wrong at the office?"

Marion looked up surprised, then smiled half apologetically. "O, no," she said. "Nohing's gone wrong. That is, I don't think it is anything that I need worry about. But I turned down a promotion this morning, and it strikes me as a pretty serious thing to do. I was just wondering whether or not it might affect my future chances."

"What!" exclaimed Ann incredulously. "Did you turn down a chance at a better job? What made you do it, and why didn't you tell us about it before?"

"I didn't have a chance to tell you before. It was only this morning that the offer was made to me, and I had to decide on the spot."

Ann grew impatient. "But I asked you, what did you turn it down for?"

"While I've been fairly contented with my position for the present," began Marion, "I've always hoped for a better and a bigger one in the future. And today, when I might have realized my ambition, I had to say no.'

"The superintendent of all our eastern branches was in town yesterday and I heard him telling the president that he would have to find a new man for the assistant manager's job at the largest and most important branch house in his division. This morning the post was offered to me at nearly double my present salary.

"If I had only myself to consider I wouldn't have hesitated for a moment. But I couldn't go so far off and leave my mother, delicate as she is alone. Nor could I think of having her give up the few relatives we have and start a new life in a strange city. She would be very unhappy if she had to do that. And I doubt if she would be equal to the strain of moving and getting settled in a new home."

"It was a tempting offer," I said to her. "But under the circumstances I don't think you had any alternative but to refuse it."

"I explained my circumstances very carefully to the president, and he seemed to take my refusal of the post in a kindly manner. But I have been wondering since whether I will have a chance ever again at a wonderful job like that."

In spite of her assurance that it wasn't anything to worry about, I saw that Marion was somewhat uneasy about the matter. I did my best to reassure her, but I knew that her fears weren't entirely groundless. No business man likes to have a member of his staff deliberately refuse promotion, and in case of another chance arising he is likely to remember the fact and forget the circumstances. It is a precept of business ethics that promotion when it comes must be accepted, and that its acceptance is not contingent upon one's personal convenience.

I've known one and heard of several girls who have turned down chances for promotion simply because the new work or its location involved some slight inconvenience to themselves.

This conversation of ours reminded me of a friend of mine who was employed in the suboffice of a large real estate firm several years ago. The office was situated near her home, and she liked the work there. When it was announced to her that she was to be transferred to the downtown office she told her employer that she preferred to stay where she was. She didn't like the long ride to and from the central district, nor the noise and bustle of that section of the city. However, she was told that she had no choice in the matter other than to accept or resign. That being the case she decided to stay with the firm and to move downtown. She has gotten along wonderfully well in the new office. Success was thrust upon her.

Washing with the "EASY"

PRESSURE SUCTION

No other method of washing gives the housewife such complete freedom from worry and work on wash day. The reasons are two: first, the "EASY" is the most efficient washing machine because it washes by air pressure and suction.

There is no friction, wear or tear on the clothes; second, the "EASY" eliminates all the labor because there is no work in connection with the preparation of the machine before the washing, during the washing, or after the washing.

The two vacuum cups move up and down 60 times per minute. Before the down stroke they change position so that the air pressure and suction are applied to all the clothes in the round copper tank. On the down stroke the air in the two vacuum cups forces the hot soapy water through the mesh of the garments—on the up stroke they suck the soapy water through the mesh. Dirt or foreign subtances, lodged in the mesh or stuck on the garments, cannot resist this 60 times per minute air pressure and suction. There is no friction, rubbing, jerking or dragging of the clothes—no wear or tear. The "EASY" will wash the daintiest laces or the sheerest fabrics and silks. Your woolens, flannels and blankets will not only be spotlessly clean but you will be delighted to find them fluffy and pleasant to the touch.

The "EASY" is made from metals, namely, solid copper, brass, aluminum and steel. It is durable and sanitary. Its simple construction makes it easy to operate and understand. All mechanism, including the famous G. E. motor, is suspended from an iron base under the copper tank and out of the way. It occupies less space and yet has a larger capacity than other washers, which is due to the large round tank which has no corners or crevices to collect foreign substances or dirt. Its three legs, with swivel castors, allow it to be moved about easily.

It is fitted with electric swinging wringer, also gas heater under tank, if desired. Its capacity is adjustable to small or large washings.

Demonstration on your next washing in your own home without obligation to you.

Try Standing in Your Stocking Feet...

with your toes turned far out. See how the weight is thrown on the inside of the foot, how the foot is flattened to the floor?

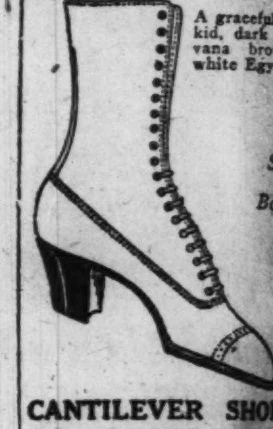
Then stand with your toes pointed straight ahead. The arch curves up. The weight is shared by the heel, the ball, and the outside of the foot.

That is just one contrast between ordinary shoes and Cantilever Shoes. Ordinary shoes, which twist the foot to point the toes out, cause fallen arches, because they throw all the weight on the inside of the arch—its weakest point.

The Cantilever Shoe is patterned from the outline of the foot. The natural inner sole line allows the toes to point straight ahead as they normally should. The weight is distributed so that no strain comes on the arch. They encourage correct posture and easy carriage.

Cantilever Shoes permit the muscles to exercise with perfect freedom. The shank is flexible. It does not restrict the movement of the muscles, but gives with the foot. In a Cantilever Shoe the muscles surrounding the bones of the arch grow strong from use. Cantilevers correct and prevent fallen arches by exercising the foot.

Put a spring in your walk, a smile on your face. Buy Cantilevers this week. Good looking, trim lines, fine leathers. Widths from AAAAA to EE. Write for booklet.



A graceful boot in black kid, dark tan calf, Havana brown kid, and white Egyptian cloth.

Case of Necessity.

On a rainy morning some time ago I wore old roomy oxfords. I was the first passenger getting off the street car. One of my oxfords reached the street before I did, and (you will remember, it was a rainy morning), to avoid walking in my stocking, I calmly sat down on the car step and put on the oxford, knowing all the time that at least twenty-five people wanted to get off. But I had to! M. L.

Beets Were Tough.

I was having some intimate friends to dinner a short time after I was married, and served beets, as I knew they were especially fond of them. After they were served I remarked that the grocer certainly had sold me tough beets, whereupon my husband asked how long I had cooked them. My knowledge of cooking being limited, it simply hadn't occurred to me that beets should be cooked. I had peeled and sliced them and then put them in vinegar. H. N.

In a Hurry.

As I have to take an early car to work, and leave the care of two children to my eldest daughter, I try to do all that I can up to the last moment before I leave. One morning, when I was all ready to leave, I found I had five minutes to spare. My little girl was waiting for her breakfast, so I seized a towel in a hurry, tied it on over my skirt, and baked some wheat cakes. Then I heard the street car coming and bolted for the door. Every one on the car looked at me and smiled. I discovered I still had the towel on and the pancake turnover in my hand. A. N.

Kept On Walking.

It was a hot Sunday afternoon, and every one was out on front porches. I was walking in a strange neighborhood, when a small boy with a big voice shouted: "Oh, mother, look at that big lady!" Mother looked; so did every one else. There was no corner to turn or hole to drop into, so I, five feet eleven inches tall, not particularly wide, but extremely sensitive, just kept on walking. M. The Last Word in Paris Fashions

PARISIAN EVENING GOWN.

By Mary Brush Williams.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—Take a bolt of material and a million dollars' worth or so of pearls, wrap the material tightly round the female form divine, letting the end drag from one shoulder into a train, permit the pearls to hang in ropes from the middle of the back or the shoulders to the floor, and you have the recipe, the model, almost the pattern, one might say, from which to make the approved Parisian evening gown in the house.

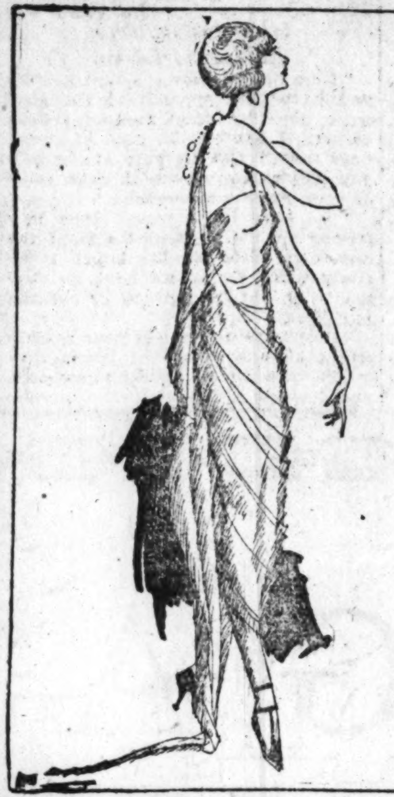
The first sketch shows how successfully Callot has done it in one dress. The models are appearing frequently now in the salons of the rich and great and by that token more of variations of the suggestion are bobbing up suddenly in the big houses. The shops are copying them, and all of this goes to prove that the style has taken and is in for a run. It is so different to the outline of the days past that it indicates something quite revolutionary in the way of styles for years to come. Sooner or later, the day dresses will be influenced by the movement as surely as anything.

The accompanying model is made of geranium colored faille silk, draped gracefully from one shoulder, from which point the great length of material is anchored which descends into the train. Trains from one shoulder, by the way, are very smart this year. The only ornaments are big pearls strung on a gold chain and alternating with groups of smaller ones. These form the shoulder straps and are sown or scattered over the dress in unexpected places. A group of them anchors the drapery at the hips. A strand of them is draped across the back of the gown. Maybe you think I am chronicling small beer, but really this gown, both in its line and the character of its trimming, is typical. A pearl sown dress, with Empire drapery is typical of the highest class models of the season.

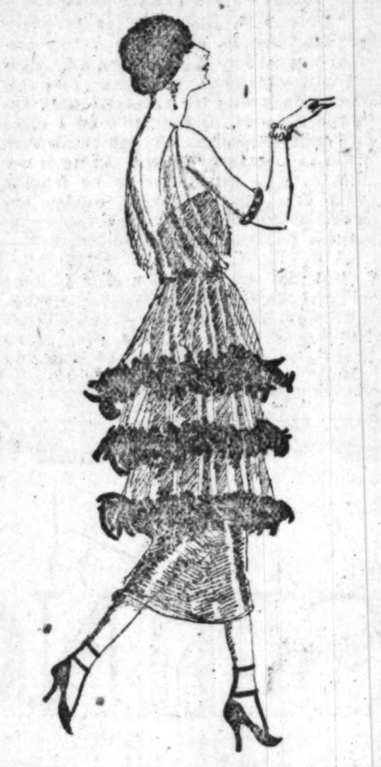
The second model also is valuable because typical. Very long sleeves, or no sleeves; edgings of fur in tiers; three ruffles of material edged with something of a long slinky line. In this sentence and the preceding paragraph you have the essence of winter styles. This particular model happens to be by Callot. The artist and I have spent a good deal of time there lately and have seen so many things that were beautiful! This one is of dark, bottle green chiffon over darker green satin, with black coque feathers as an edging of the tunic. I can't stand them myself, but nobody asked me what I thought, and they are a very smart trimming of the season both for dresses and hats. The dress has a twisted belt of black satin.

The third dress also is valuable as illustrating the style of the day. Don't bother me with the comment that it is not new! It is not the new things that are significant for a person getting up a wardrobe for immediate wear, but the things that have taken. The three tiers of ruffles in soft materials are one of the popular styles of the winter just as they were last year. I should never get a dress made in that model if it were a long time investment, but if I expected to wear it out this year and this was a becoming style, I should put the scissors into the material as fast as ever I could. The blouse of this dress is the prevailing model of the season. A round neck, with the material caught on the shoulders, the back covered, except for very formal evening occasions, and sleeves short. This particular dress is of leaf brown chiffon, and has a simple tie around belt, finished with a bow.

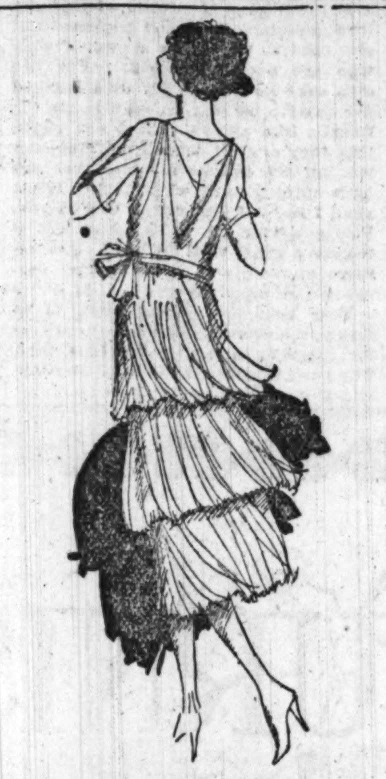
The fourth model is valuable for showing a certain tendency toward the princess. Perhaps if you are looking toward the future you might have your gown made along these lines. But whether it will take, rests with you and the future. Your dress will be in the nature of a speculation if you make it along these, severe princess lines. This one is very smart. It is of flame color soft chiffon made on very simple and very long lines. It was worn by an extremely chic Parisienne the other day in her own home at tea. The skirt is quite short in front and edged with mink fur, as were the sleeves. The same fur in stripes of darker and lighter skins made a very high and chic collar. She wore gray hose and red satin slippers.



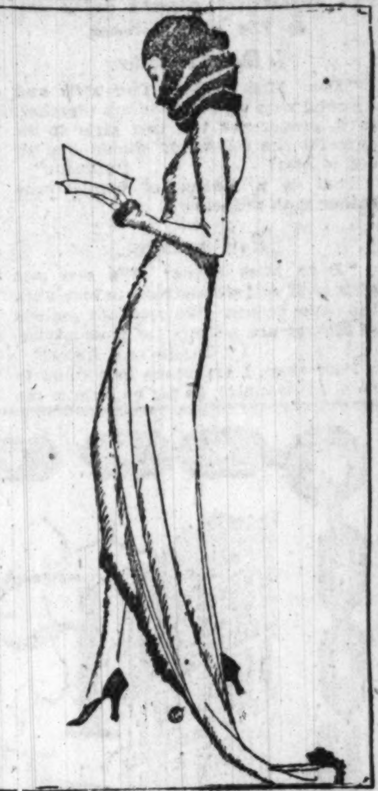
Gown of geranium faille silk with draped back and trimmings of pearl.



Afternoon dress of bottle green chiffon over dark green satin, tunic edged with black coque feathers.



Gown of leaf brown chiffon with round neck and skirt in three tiers of plaited ruffles.



Dress of flame colored chiffon made in Princess effect. This may be the silhouette of the future.

Bright Sayings of the Children

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

The Tribune will pay $1 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Write on one side of the paper. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, The Tribune, Chicago.

The youngster was left with his aunt while his mother went on a short trip. Immediately on her departure he began to cry, and it seemed that nothing would stop the flow of tears. Finally, after several hours of this, his aunt brought out some candy. He accepted it and asked:

"Why didn't you give me this before? Then I would have stopped crying sooner." M. M.

Merritt is a lad who never misses a chance to fight. Recently he and his mother were spending a week end in the city visiting an aunt. The aunt lived in an apartment building and there were no children who lived close to her.

When Merritt returned home his father inquired how he enjoyed his visit.

"Not very much," answered the youngster. "There wasn't a kid lived near to fight with." V. M. B.

Not long ago we were having a barn repainted. Brother, who had been intently watching the progress from day to day, came running in to the house one morning and through tears exclaimed: "I asked one man what flavor he was going to paint the door—and—a—he laughed." E. V.

Billie enjoyed getting the mail.

When the postman came along one day he said: "Dim me some mail."

"None for you, Billie," the postman replied.

And insistent Billie said: "Well, just dim me any old mail." J. C.

Marion had been left in the care of her grandmother while her mother was away on a visit. Her mother had been in the habit of telling her to come home as soon as school closed.

On the first day her grandmother neglected to caution her in this respect.

On the second day as Marion was leaving for school she turned and said, "Grandma, if I don't come home right after school don't you worry if you don't know where I am, because I will know where I am." A. F. H.

While taking an auto drive through the country Charles saw three horses abreast in a field plowing. With all excitement he exclaimed, "O, Aunt Emma, see the team and a half of horses." E. M. L.

Margaret, upon being told by her aunt, "It is time to go to bed, Margaret," replied: "O, that is Chicago time." We live in the suburb and do not go by Chicago time, keeping only one clock on account of train schedules. E. L.

Sister started a diary the other day and the first entry was: "Got up this morning at 7 o'clock."

She showed it to me, and I said: "Got up, indeed. Haven't you been to school? Does the sun get up?"

"No, it rises."

So I scratched out "Got up at 7" and write, "Rose at 7" in its place.

That night she completed the entry for the day with: "Set at 8 o'clock." R. W.

CHARACTER READING

by Doris Blake

In the dictionary of character reading it is said that large, clear blue eyes denote ability. These eyes when seen in profile appear almost transparent.

Gray eyes are also a mark of ability.

Wrinkles and folds in the upper eyelid denote a great love of accuracy, especially in historic facts. Mathematical accuracy is shown by eyes that are full underneath and wrinkled.

Projecting teeth denote a grasping disposition, especially when great breadth is seen at the upper part of the nose next to the cheek.

An active person has nostrils which are both long and narrow.

A sharp chin combines craft and acuteness.

A lipless mouth which tends to turn upward at the corners denotes affectation.

A strongly defined ridge or prominence at the base of the nose near the ridge denotes aggressiveness.

Ambition is recognized in women by eyes that appear to roll as they move in their sockets. It is also recognized by a wrinkled, relaxed skin, with an arched nose, restless mouth, well rounded forehead, and a conspicuous chin.

A talent for analyzing and inventing is shown when the fleshy part of the nose that divides the nostrils droops down below the nostrils.

The upper lip curving to a point in the middle denotes application.

Desire for admiration and approbation is shown in the upper lip when it rises in the center and displays the front teeth.

A love of argument and controversy accompanies a pronounced ridge at the root of the nose, near the bridge, more especially where there is great fullness under the eyes. This quality is always present when the ridge of the eyebrows projects downward beyond the outer corner of the eye.

Asperity of character is displayed by a harsh, high, perpendicular, knotted forehead, the outline of which in profile is rectilinear. In such a face the nostrils would be wide, with deeply furrowed, long lineaments of the cheek.

Authority is indicated by two or three short transversed lines at the toor of the nose.

When the hairs at the outer extremity of the left eyebrow stand up, the subject is likely to believe in creeds and dogmas; this will certainly be the case when the hairs of the right eyebrow do the same.

The crow of the head raised and well developed and the upper lip wide at the corners of the mouth, the under lip being full, are signs of benevolence and a philanthropic character. This is further accentuated by three or four horizontal lines above the eyebrows.

Upright ears, large nostrils, and a strong chin, the mouth being firmly closed, but neither sharp nor constrained, when seen in profile, are all characteristics of courage.

Broad mindedness is indicated by great breadth between the eyes, with a broad forehead and a long upper lip. The latter trait gives comprehension, the faculty of taking in everything.

The nose wide at the tip, with arched eyebrows, varying high above the eyes, the forehead being smooth and sloping backward, denotes carelessness.

Cautious people have nostrils that lie flat to the face, and the nose terminates in a thin, pointed tip.

A person with an ignoble character has a head which is prominent close behind the ear, a narrow forehead, and only a short space between the outer corners of the eyes and the ears. A long nose, when accompanied by a sharp pointed chin, is also an unfavorable indication.

A prominent upper lip is a distinctive feature of a noble character. It is generally found in persons of superior merit. The three sections of the face—forehead, nose, and chin—will be of equal length in such a face.

A high forehead, as long, if not longer than the length of the nose, with small closed nostrils and the lower lip compressed against the upper in the center, denotes chastity. A face in form rather oval than broad, with the above characteristics, is indelibly stamped with the mark of purity.

A turned up snub nose indicates cheerfulness. If the lower lip is curved in the center the subject will also be whimsical.

A low and wide forehead denotes cleverness.

Broad nostrils which extend right up to the front of the nose denote coarseness.

A flat chin with thin lips and small ears denotes coldness.

Four or five perpendicular lines between the eyes denote conscientiousness.

Eyes that are obliquely set close together denote deceit. Another indication are eyebrows that meet or droop down to the roots of the nose.

Large ears that stand out far from the head, and thin compressed lips denote cruelty.

An angular chin denotes discretion.

One deep perpendicular line between the eyes indicates love of detail.

It Doesn't Matter.

"Dear Miss Blake: Two girls and a young man go out to lunch together. Is it proper for the two girls to sit opposite the fellow, or should one sit beside him? PUZZLED."

That is a matter of convenience rather than propriety.

Both in Love.

"Dear Miss Blake: We are two girls of 17 and we are both in love with the same fellow. We are both jealous of him, so are writing for your advice. "GRACE AND ANNA."

Poor chap, I see where he's going to have his troubles, so far be it from me to advise that you fight it out among yourselves.

Forego Her Company.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am in love with a girl and have been assured that my love is reciprocated. It happens that she used to go with a crowd of girls who are notoriously bad. For her own sake as well as my own I asked her to give up this crowd, but she refused. She admits that I am right, that they are not decent, not respectable, but she refuses my plea that she have nothing to do with them. What shall I do? I am leaving this to you. Please advise me, Miss Blake, as it means a great deal to me. She refuses absolutely to listen to any persuasion on my part. M. P."

Your best bet, young man, is to forego the company of the girl entirely for there is nothing more true than "by one's friends may they be known," and if she continues in the knowledge that they are not decent nor respectable, the girl's own moral status would not insure any future happiness for you.

Don't Take It Seriously.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 16 years of age, and in love with a boy one year my senior. I have been acquainted with him for over a year, and feel that I care only for him. He took another girl out, and since then I have not spoken to him. Do you think that I am foolish in so doing? As he is my first love, I would like to be friends with him again. Kindly advise me what to do. As yet I have never accepted another boy's invitation out. "A. D."

I should say you are a silly 16 year old girl to get mad because some other girl was taken to the show. What difference will it make a year or so from now, and until then or later you should not consider the man seriously.

In Need of Lamps.

"I am one of your constant readers and have long appreciated the good work done by your wonderful little corner. I am now in need of assistance myself and am sure of the help you will extend to me through some of your many kind readers.

"We have lately moved to a new section on the northwest side of the city, and, although the house is already wired for it, we have no electricity or gas for lighting or cooking purposes.

"Do you think some of your readers might have a couple of lamps they might loan us for lighting purposes, and perhaps a discarded oil stove for cooking, until the improvements are made in the streets? We find it very inconvenient without lights and no means of cooking, without the trouble of lighting coal fires.

"We have so many expenses that we really cannot afford to buy these things, especially when we may need them for perhaps only a short time. I would willingly call for it, if some kind hearted person will help us. "G. J."

If you have a lamp lying unused in your storeroom, may I ask that you send to me for the address of G. J., who will greatly appreciate the gift

Fine Winter Outfit.

"I have a good suit for a boy 14 or 15 years of age, who wishes to attend an out of door school. It consists of a heavy blanket coat, buckskin trousers, top boots, cap, and gloves—all in perfect condition. MRS. N."

This sounds like a fine outfit with which to brave the elements. The donor's name will be sent upon request.

Do You Know Why We Mark All Prices in Plain Figures?

Because we are not afraid to have you know exactly what we charge for our merchandise. Ask Our Salesmen About This Money-Saving Proposition

This refers to our Free Savings Bank Account Plan, whereby you get back one dollar in cash on every ten dollars you spend with us for merchandise. Clean Your Rugs With a Hoover

THE perennial beauty of a valuable rug is the reward of frequent and thorough cleaning. Such cleaning is easy to perform with The Hoover because it beats. . . as it sweeps, as it suction cleans. All injurious embedded grit is fluttered out by gentle beating. All stubborn litter is detached by swift sweeping. All loose dirt is withdrawn by strong suction. Only The Hoover combines these three essential operations. And it is the largest selling electric cleaner in the world.

Derryvale Irish Linen Table Cloths

at Less than Today's Cost Price

1,150 pieces of pure Irish linen damask table cloths, also 428 dozen pure Irish linen napkins to match, tomorrow at one-quarter less than our regular selling price marked on these goods, which is less than the manufacturer's cost price today.

These cloths and napkins are all clean, new, fresh goods in round patterns. There are five qualities in the lot and 30 different patterns, not an old design in the lot. The reason these goods can be offered so cheaply are two: first, the tremendous quantities we buy; second, because these goods were purchased before the prices had risen to these present levels. We might say that there is very little chance that goods of a like quality can be offered at such prices for a long time to come, as flax is not being produced in anything like the requisite quantities for the world's needs. Patterns by Clotilde 9802—Woman's and misses' apron. Sizes 24 to 34 inches waist measure. Size 26 requires 2⅛ yards of 36 inch material and 7¾ yards of binding.

9798—Woman's dress. Sizes 36 to 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3¾ yards of 36 inch material, with 1⅛ yards of 30 inch contrasting.

9812—Child's one-piece box-plaited dress. Sizes 2 to 10 years. Size 6 requires 2⅝ yards of 36 inch or 2⅛ yards of 44 inch material.

HOW TO USE THE PATTERNS

THE box plaited dress, No. 9812, for a child from 2 to 10 years, will make up attractively in a number of materials. For the small tot wash materials are always prettier and seem more suitable, while the older child would look well in wash materials or something heavier.

Choose for the little girl chambray or linen in one of the lovely shades of blue, pink, tan, or white, and trim with some embroidery.

For the older girl challis, serge, homespun, or any similar material will be good. A yoke lining of thin silk or muslin should be used, and the long sleeves can also be lined if one prefers.

The pattern is easy to use, the only point where there might be trouble being in the laying of the box plaits. And there need be no trouble there if a little care is taken.

Lay them before sewing any seams together, and do this work on a table or lap board. Pin the seam of a box plait together, then open the plait as it is to go. Take hold of it firmly at top and bottom and hold out straight. If it is not perfectly smooth the seam is not put together exactly right, and it is easier to take out your pins and readjust the seam than to rip any sewing. No amount of tacking or pressing will make a side or box plait lie smoothly unless it is laid correctly.

The dress is made to fasten on the shoulders and be slipped on over the head. Baste and press the plaits from top to bottom, and when laying the hem rip the plaits loose far enough up to lay the hem, then before basting the hem fold the plaits at the edge, and see if it is even across the bottom. After the hem is put in, baste the plaits to the bottom, and leave the bastings in until the dress is finished. Press well, and remove the threads by cutting at close intervals and using a stilletto to pull them with.

No. 9802 shows a pattern for quite an unusual looking apron. It is large enough to be really useful and yet there is no reason why it cannot be made really pretty as well.

Unbleached muslin would be a little out of the ordinary, and the edges can be bound with bias strips of chambray, gingham, or percale in some plain color. Or any of the striped or figured wash materials would be attractive, and ricrac braid makes a good finish for the edge and helps to keep the apron from tearing as well.

A smart design for a dress is shown in No. 9798, and it depends on the materials chosen whether it needs much decoration or not.

If something figured or a plaid or check is used, the narrow collar, sleeve edge, and band under buttons can be of some contrasting plain color, and with a tiny belt nothing else will be necessary.

If a plain color is used, much or little emboidery can be used. There can be a straight band around the bottom of the skirt, a more or less covering design on the waist, and a little of it on the sleeve edges. Wools in gay, contrasting colors are seen a great deal, and chenille embroidery is beautiful.

Then there is a narrow ribbon used a good deal, in such designs as daisies and outline patterns. For this work a tapestry needle is necessary, and the ribbon must not be pulled too tight. Velours, serge, or any similar materials will make up well in this design, and seem more appropriate than lighter weight ones.

The skirt is cut in three pieces, slightly goring, and measuring one and three-quarter yards around the bottom.

How Miss Morgan secured a position paying $25 a week—

Miss Morgan had a fairly good position but she was not satisfied. She wanted to move up! She knew what she could do if the opportunity ever came to her. But somehow, there seemed nothing ahead to strive for in the work she was then doing!

Part of the time she served as telephone operator and part of the time in the general office doing clerical work. None of the important men in the business ever saw her—few if any, knew her by name. She felt, to use a homely expression, "lost in the shuffle."

One Sunday morning she happened to read an advertisement on The Illinois School of Filing. It appealed to her as worth investigation so she sent for the free book—"Filing as a profession for women." It gave her an insight into filing which she had never had before. It answered all her questions—it helped her reach her decision.

She could not afford to give up her old position so she studied at night.

As soon as she had completed the course she obtained a position at $25 a week. Today she is the most delighted girl you ever saw.

She now feels that she is doing something worth while—that, in filing, she has a profession—that she is no longer "lost in the shuffle," but that she really amounts to something.

I asked Miss Morgan the other day what she thought of The Illinois School of Filing.

"I think," she replied, "it is a wonderful school. It did so much for me that my two sisters are also taking the course. I wouldn't be surprised if they get even better positions than I have."

A FISHING LETTER.

LIKE taking up all first jobs, I took mine with shaky knees and trembling hands. When the manager dictated to me I could hardly hold the pencil in my hand. My face flushed. I quaked all over.

The first week of my job the manager gave me a letter all about a fishing trip he had taken the past summer. In the letter he spoke of various parts of his rods, about the reel, the fish hooks he used, the line, and most every other fishing term to be thought of.

How little a girl knows about fishing! And in my fear of the terms I knew not how to take down in shorthand, I missed a good many things the manager said, found my notes were so bungled up I couldn't read them. Afraid to tell him of my trouble, I took my notebook with me to lunch and studied it at the cafeteria as I ate, when suddenly I got an idea.

With notebook in hand, I went over to a sporting goods store, and after eying all the clerks I approached a nice looking young man who looked kindly and asked him if he couldn't help me in my trouble. The young man proved more than willing, so the two of us bent over my notebook, he supplying the various names of flies and fish hooks, helping me over the hard fishing terms that I hadn't been able to take down in notes, and by the time I left I had the letter scribbled out in longhand on wrapping paper he had at the counter. This young man had saved the day. Do you wonder that I shook his hand so warmly and thanked him with tears in my eyes?

After that when transferring for a west side train I often met him as he waited for the elevated train to pull in, and he always tipped his hat and often ventured a word or two to me. Then one evening he rode all the way to Marshfield on my train. Soon he made it a habit of waiting for me to come over the transfer bridge and we rode together most every evening.

Our club giving a party, I suggested that he bring a lady friend and come out to same, offered him an invitation. No, he had no young lady to take, but couldn't he escort me? I had already arranged for an escort, but I canceled this arrangement and went with Mac, and so from then on all my plans were made with Mac included. And today, well, most naturally a husband and wife always consult one another as to where to go and what to do.

Varied Activities of Women

Miss Pearl Brandt of Houston, Tex., the first girl railroad mail clerk to be appointed in the United States, is said to be more efficient than any man who has held the position.

In many parts of China the women pump the water from the canals up the banks for irrigation purposes by means of a primitive machine constructed on the treadmill system.

The wives of many English fishermen keep a black cat in the house in the belief that doing so assures their husband's safety at sea.

The women of far off Zanzibar are learning to play tennis.

French shoe manufacturers claim that American women have the prettiest feet of any women in the world.

Miss Hilda Hitchings, who was born with only a left arm, became an expert lawn tennis player and succeeded in winning championships in her native land of New Zealand.

In Stockholm, Sweden, there is an "old servants' home," where servants too old to work are given shelter and care in their last days.

More than 60,000 women are listed as stockholders in the Pennsylvania railroad.

Miss Sylvia Boyden, the only female parachute jumper of England, recently made a daring drop of 1,500 feet during an exhibition for King George.

Miss Gladys Unger, the clever English playwright, wrote her first play when she was 7 years of age, and in later years has seen more than twenty of her plays produced on the London stage.

"The Most Bread from the Least Flour"

Consider what that statement means—consider the possibilities of economy in baking that it implies—consider too that it is no empty assertion but that it is supported by the facts and has been proven by scores of tests.

The reason is that "Larabee's Best" is a strong flour and that it contains the right percentage of the highest quality gluten.

And Larabee's Best Flour produces not only "the most bread from the least flour"—but bread of exceptional flavor and food value.

Try "Larabee's Best" in your own kitchen and compare it with other flours.

The Theaters

By Percy Hammond

DEFLATION in the theater is a popular topic in the economics of our luxuries, and disturbing tales have been told about how the good plays and the good players have been buried in the avalanche of our prevalent thriftiness. They are reducing prices in New York, it is said, and the drama is upon its knees asking alms from the passing populace, even as overalls, Sears Roebuck-Swift et cie, and the rubber tires. It is said that the Theater has blown up and is drifting down to normalcy. We do not see it here. Since Miss Barrymore began to play "Déclassée" at prices extraordinary but not, in the circumstance, too high, no vacant seat has been at Powers'. Miss Jane Cowl's theater, the Cort, is much too small to hold her clientèle, and George White's Scandals draws a patronage to the Colonial overflowing. Good and popular entertainments will always prosper, when bacon, arctic overshoes, new hats, and eggs are regarded as an extravagance to be avoided.

Players, as a rule, do not know the sacrifice made by the average playgoer to see them. The standing in line, the cold visage of the ticket seller (in some theaters), the traffic with the chill broker, the hanging upon a street car strap, to and fro, the bad seats, and what it has cost to buy them. They do not know, many of them, that the performance of a play is an episode in the lives of many who go to see it, not so much here, as in New York, where playgoing is automatic, expense-account, and involuntary. One wonders if Miss Cowl realizes as she makes up for "Smilin' Through," that many persons from shopgirls to millwrights are depending upon her to ease the anguish of their long and tortuous hours. I suspect she does, for she is nothing if not conventionally conscientious.

Where shall we go, my correspondents ask, "when we come to Chicago and have nothing else to do?" I direct them of the suburbs who are my most faithful readers, first to Miss Barrymore in "Déclassée," then to "Abraham Lincoln" at the Blackstone; later to Miss Cowl at the Cort; to "Happy Go Lucky" at the Playhouse; to "Buddies" at the Woods; and if there is an afternoon extra to Miss MacKellar's performance of "The Storm."

I have this Marconigram tonight from James K. Hackett, who a day or two ago played "Macbeth" in London: "My dear Hammond," says he, "in memory of many past, pleasant hours, I know that you will rejoice in my great happiness." Mr. Hackett, in his "Macbeth," stampeded the London critics. You may not believe it, but the London Telegraph, the London Times, the London Morning Post, the London Chronicle, the London Daily News, the Pall-Mall Gazette, and all the other west end journals acclaim Mr. Hackett as the greatest Macbeth that ever acted the rôle. I have never read in all my life such dignified compliments about a player in "Macbeth."

"The Unwritten Chapter" proved disappointing to the public, and therefore to Louis Mann; and was storehoused last night in New York.

Early December will find D. W. Griffith's new picture "Way Down East" at the Woods', succeeding "Buddies," and William Collier in "The Hottentot," playing at Cohan's Grand after "Honey Girl" has bowed out.

W. L. George, the English novelist, is said to be negotiating with Brock Pemberton, producer of "Eenter Madame," concerning a dramatic version of "A Bed of Roses."

"Variety" is authority for the statement that David Belasco is preparing a version of "Carmen" for performance by Miss Leonore Ulrich.

George M. Cohan has dismissed the players engaged for his proposed revue, being too busy to go on with it, but he may reassemble them later in the year.

* * *

Among the dramas which ceased to be after their Chicago engagements are "Scrambled Wives," "Wedding Bells," "The Little Whopper" and "Self-Defense."

John Barrymore, it is announced, will not appear in the theaters this year, his health suggesting idleness, save for a picture or two, until next fall. Mr. Barrymore plans a visit to Chicago this month to see Edward Sheldon, the dramatist, who is ill at the Presbyterian hospital. Recent pilgrims to Mr. Sheldon's quarters at the Presbyterian have included Miss Maude Adams and Hal Rhodes, the novelist and playwright.

* * *

Among the singers in the De Wolf Hopper-Francis Wilson revival of "Erminie" will be Miss Rosamund Whiteside, daughter of Walker Whiteside, the tragedian.

Julian Johnson and Ray Long have adapted James Oliver Curwood's "The River's End" to the stage and it will be played by Lowell Sherman.

* * *

Miss Rachel Crothers' newest comedy, written for Miss Constance Binney, is about to go into rehearsal. It is entitled "Nice People," but otherwise details regarding it are lacking.

Miss Elsie Mackaye is to appear with her husband, Lionel Atwill, when he is seen in New York at Christmas time in the Guitry-Barker drama, "Deburau."

* * *

A misunderstanding between the Frohman corporation and Miss Adams over the film future of "Peter Pan" has led to the severance of their relations. A. L. Erlanger is now Miss Adams' manager.

Standing on One Foot

This is a time when people are unsettled, nervous, anxious about the future.

A worried person is hard to interest—still harder to please. Like a man standing on one foot and then the other, his mind is jumping from point to point, resting on nothing.

Have you noticed that the headliners in the theatres are having a hard time pleasing people—begging for applause? Hard audiences, demanding twice as much as ever before.

Realizing the mental condition of the public, I am giving YOU DANCERS:

"THE SAPHEAD"

Presented by Metro. Directed by Winchell Smith. Presented at the Rose.

THE CAST:

Bertie Van Alstyne	Buster Keaton
Nick Van Alstyne	W. H. Crane
Mark Turner	Irvin Cummings
Rose Turner	Carol Halloway
Agnes	Beulah Booker
The Rev. Murray Hilton	Ed Jobson
Flint	Ed Alexander
Valet	Henry Clauss

By Mae Tinée.

WE WAIL for "Something DIFFERENT!"
And along comes "THE SAPHEAD."
Puffs out a CHEST and says
"Here I AM!"
Your FIRST impression of the FILM is that it's a COMEDY.
THEN you think it's a MISTAKE.
More and MORE of Buster Keaton
Combined with a dose of IRVING CUMMINGS and you're convinced it
Will prove a FAIURE. And THEN
It up and FOOLS you
By turning out to be a
DURN GOOD PICTURE. (Begging the gallery's pardon!)
The STAR is cast as the
SAPPY SON of a
WALL STREET lion.
William H. Crane is the LION,
And you WILL admit that Mr.
KEATON has sashayed quite a PIECE
To manage to get into the LIMELIGHT
With MR. CRANE, who is ONE FINE ACTOR.
ANYHOW this SAPHEAD, who in REAL
LIFE would be classified as a
GOD'S INNOCENT and parked at
DUNNING, after almost breaking his dad's
HEART because he ain't BRIGHT and SHOWS the WORLD, justifies Himself for LIVING finally
By being a bluggy idiot and Thereby UNINTENTIONALLY
Saving father from RUIN.
Mr. Keaton's pet stock in TRADE seems to consist in Never smiling.
I don't think he's a BIT
Funny to look at—he Seems either to have taken
A COLD in the head or ELSE
A dose of PAREGORIC. But he's a
NUT and seems to PLEASE mightily
A lot of PEOPLE. If he'd looked just a LITTLE Brighter in this PICTURE he would of BEEN MUCH better—I think. (Who am I?)
But "THE SAPHEAD" is so well cast and DIRECTED and
The saphead's rescue of his father on the FLOOR
Of the STOCK exchange is so thrilling and AMUSING
And has such a PUNCH that I forgive Mr. Keaton
For LIVING. (He's wekkum!)

If anxious to locate Norma Talmadge—she's in Kingston, Jamaica, taking exteriors for her next picture, "Satan's Paradise." The production will be an adaptation of the novel by Andrew Soutar called "On Principle." In the screen version Harrison Ford and Montague Love will have prominent rôles.

Lillian Gish, it is reported, has started work in a Frohman Amusement company production under the direction of Jerome Storm.

Olive Thomas, according to papers said to have been filed in New York, left an estate of $25,000. Half of it will go to Jack Pickford and the balance to her mother and two brothers. This, unless, perchance, a will is found.

They do say that William Farnum has purchased an interest in the revival of "Erminie," in which Francis Wilson and De Wolfe Hopper are scheduled to appear. Ought to be worth viewing.

Did anybody whisper in your ear that there was a chance of Douglas and Mary leaving these shores for Europe? Rumor has it that the Fairbanks' Beverly Hill estate has been offered for sale.

Charlie Ray's going to try something new. In "Nineteen and Phyllis" he will appear smartly garbed—age 19 years.

This is Armistice week. It will be observed in various ways by the motion picture theaters. There will be an official Red Cross film displayed, and Barbee's will show a Prisma one reel picture entitled "Where the Poppies Bloom." It was made in Belleau woods and shows Quentin Roosevelt's grave and surrounding scenes.

You know that villain Robert McKim? They say he used to be a baritone soloist in a San Francisco church choir and that when he wasn't singing he was soliciting advertising.

Madame Olga Petrova intends to produce only two more pictures for the screen. She says the lights hurt her eyes.

MISS JANE COWL IN "SMILIN' THROUGH" -CORT- LEWIS-SMITH PHOTO

Ask Me! Ask Me! Ask Me!

MAX J.: O, you make me tired!

N. I. S.: That's an easy argument to settle. Yes, Lon Chaney, star of "The Penalty," was The Frog in "The Miracle Man." Also, yes—he has arms and legs. Who buys the dinner?

A READER: Sorry you missed any of the pictures. Watch the "roto" and you're apt to see them repeated. We often print pictures of the same people a number of times. Reason—they get late photographs we know you'd like to have.

MOVIE ACTOR: You might write to the studio director of any one of the studios, a list of which I'll send you for a stamped and self-addressed envelope. But, to be frank, I don't think they'd be interested in you unless they could see you in person.

Vaudeville Wit

McVICKER'S.

Allman and Nevins:

"Well, if it isn't my old friend, Cohen. How are you, Cohen?"

"Not so good; hope you are the same. Thank you."

"You've still got that foolish way of talking, haven't you? But, say, where have you been all these years?"

"I've been on it mine way to New York."

"It didn't take you ten years to get to New York, did it?"

"I went there on the B. & O."

"You've got to have your joke, all right. But tell me, how did you find New York?"

"I didn't have to look for it. It was there when I arrived."

"You don't understand. What I mean is how did you like New York?"

"O, how I like it New York?"

"Yes, that's how; how did you like New York?"

"Not very much. It was too tough. The steak I got there."

"I'm not talking about the eats. I'm asking you about the city."

"Just the same."

"What do you mean just the same?"

"The city was just like the steak."

"I see. New York is a tough city."

"Yes, tough."

"You shouldn't call a city tough, you should say common."

"Yes, just the same."

RIALTO.

Cook and Harrington:

"In the art gallery today I saw a picture of an onion."

"Was it natural?"

"So natural it brought tears to my eyes."

"What do you think of a man who takes his living out of the mouths of other people?"

"He must be a blackleg."

"No, a dentist."

"I'm going to retire from business and live like a gentleman."

"That will be a great change for you, won't it?"

"I try to act like a lady."

"O, yes, you're a very good actress."

"You look like some one I know."

"You look like some one I don't want to know."

Burns Mantle's New York theater letter will be found on page 11 of this section.

MUSIC

Forecasting Some Joys of the New Operatic Season

By Ruth Miller.

WITH the American première of "Jacquerie," that medievally putrescent lyric fragment which is to introduce our new operatic director, Gino Marinuzzi, to us as a composer and at the same time inaugurate our much heralded 1920-'21 operatic season, just ten days ahead of us, we are being showered, deluged, and inundated with illuminating announcements concerning the operatic this and that. And it is high time, if we would find our way about with any degree of operatic sophistication at the Auditorium this year, to scrutinize their edifying contents.

The first that comes to hand concerns the new French conductor, Henri Morin. This musician, who was chosen by the French minister des beaux arts to take charge of the French section of the Chicago Opera company, numbers first Anton Hekking, Hugo Reisman, and the unforgettable Nikisch, with whom he studied conducting, and Vincent d'Indy, under whom he studied composition for seven years, among his teachers. He comes to us with the record of having conducted extensively throughout France; at the Theatre Constanti at Rome; the Lyrico, Milan; the Monte Carlo opera; the Grand Opera, Paris; Covent Garden, London; and also at the Lamoureaux concerts, Paris. He achieved his greatest success, it is said, in conducting Russian ballets in Paris and London. Mr. Morin will direct the New Year's presentation of "Aphrodite," which brings Mary Garden back to us for her first performance of the season.

Among the new artists the one who is expected to make the greatest sensation and agitate the gelatinous hearts of the feminine operagoers is Joseph Hislop, a picturesque Scot. Consider the matter of fact Mr. Atwell's pæan of ecstatic description concerning him: "He is slight, with sharp cut features, pale and interesting, and in each of his romantic rôles suggests just having stepped out of a frame from the canvas of an old master."

When Mr. Hislop made his debut in London recently it seems that he created considerable frenetic excitement, the critics rapturously hailing him as a gifted forerunner of tenors of other than the swarthy Latin race. These delirious commentators even indulged in the fatal game of personal comparisons and declared he outclassed Caruso in "La Boheme."

Originally a portrait painter, Hislop fell from grace and developed the opera habit, touring on the continent from Stockholm to Milan. Herbert Johnson engaged the cause of all this reportorial ecstasy before any one outside of the continent had heard of him and while his fame was confined to the Scandinavian countries in which he "tried out."

Then, in midseason, Mary Garden, the shrewdly diant who inspires even the ossified to stuttering rhapsody, is scheduled to appear before us first in "Aphrodite," by Camille Erlanger. It might be pertinent to record that the operatic version of the notorious novel by Pierre Louys does not expend much time in converting its hero into a sanctimonious milksop, but leaves him in his supreme cynicism and contemptuous libertinism, and the curtain goes down with him coldly watching the most glorious of Alexandrian harlots thrown into prison and smiling with a mocking weariness as she swallows the poison that brings her death.

We shall have Galli-Curci with us again, that limpid voiced diva who proved of how little moment is critical opinion by flying straight in the face of the ponderous predictions of the eastern critics who wasted much valuable space saying that this singer, slender and resilient as a willop whip, would never become a popular idol because she could not sing in tune. The following season she returned to them with her already spectacular success almost doubled, and about half of every opera singing as merrily below pitch as ever, and, although they tore out the few remaining strands of hair, they affected the box office receipts not one monetary iota. The only thing that these recording angels of music proved with their analytical denunciations was that in this enlightened age a mere music reporter may, occasionally, if he indulges in the discreetly ambiguous literary style, point out the more evident artistic shortcomings of an adored singer without first making arrangements with his editors for an armed escort. Consider what Henry F. Chorley, one of the leading English critics of his day, has to say concerning Jenny Lind in his "Thirty Years of Musical Recollections":

"It can now without treason be recorded that the lower and the upper half of her register were of two distinct qualities. The former was not strong, veiled if not husky, and apt to be out of tune." But "woe to those during that season who ventured to say or write that any other great singer had ever sung at the Haymarket Opera house. They were consigned to such ignominy as belongs to the idiotic slanderer."

Lucien Muratore, who returns to us after a long and much lamented absence, needs no eulogistic comment from this typewriter. Neither does Titto Ruffo.

Among those classified as American contingent there are Riccardo Martin, a Kentucky born tenor, and Forrest Lamont, referred to as a "down east Yankee" and an example of what the native church choir singer may achieve, for it was in a choir loft that Lamont first faced the public.

Florence Macbeth, soprano, comes from Minnesota; Dorothy Francis, said to be one of the most promising of the new sopranos, is a native of Boston; Elsa Diemer, in the same section, was born in St. Louis; Rose Lutiger Gannon, contralto, whose splendid musical attainments need no introduction to lovers of oratorio, and Francis Paperte are Chicagoans. Cyrena Van Gordon, mezzo soprano; Philene Falco, a new contralto, and Margery Maxwell, soprano, are native of this country. Edward Johnson, born a Canadian, is one of the adopted Americans, and, as though to avoid the absence of representation from the most remote quarter of the Anglo-Saxon world, an Australian, Carmen Pascove, looms up amnog the new contraltos.

Among the new sopranos we find Rosina Storchio, who created the title rôle of Mme. Butterfly for Puccini at La Scala in 1904; Olga Carrara, Marcelle Gourard, Maria Santillan, and Ganna Walska. Among the new mezzos and contraltos not already enumerated is Gabrielle Besanzoni. Sallustro Cival has been added to the baritone sections, and the newcomers among the bassos are Carl Bitterl and Luigi Dentale.

Among those favorites who remain with us from last season are Yvonne Gall, Amelita Galli Curci, Mary Garden, Florence Macbeth, Margery Maxwell, and Rosa Raisa, sopranos; Cyrena Van Gordon, mezzo; Alessandro Boni, Edward Johnson, Forrest Lamont, Jose Mojica, Lodovico Oliviero, Tito Schipa, tenors; Georges Baklanoff, Desire Defrere, Hector Dufranne, Carlo Galeffi, Giacomo Rimini, and Titta Ruffo, baritones; Edouard Cotreuil, Virgilio Lazzari, Constantin Nicolay, and Vittorio Trevisan, bassos.

The schedule for the opening week begins Wednesday evening, Nov. 17, with Marinuzzi's opera, "Jaquerie." Thursday evening, the second night, is devoted to one of the revivals, "Jewels of the Madonna." Friday night will bring another revival, "Tales of Hoffmann," with Florence Macbeth in the rôle of the doll. The first matinee, Saturday afternoon, will be given over to "Tosca," in which Joseph Hislop, Scotch tenor, will make his Chicago debut; Saturday night the old reliable double bill, "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "Pagliacci." The week will be rounded out with "Il Trovatore" Monday night and Lereux's "La Chemineau" Tuesday night.

In other words, the open season for opera is upon us, and, viewing it merely as an unprejudiced outsider, we should say that it is going to be, with its personnel, its all enveloping and operatically satisfying repertoire, a record breaking season in the history of Chicago lyric drama.

Hulda Lashanska, soprano, will be heard in recital in Orchestra hall this afternoon at 3:30, under the direction of Wessels and Voegeli.

Arthur Kraft, lyric tenor, will be heard in recital in Orchestra hall tomorrow evening at 8:15 under the direction of Wessels and Voegeli.

Ruth Bradley, pianist, will give a recital this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock at Kimball hall. Her program includes Variations and Fugue on a theme by Handel by Brahms, a Chopin group, "Jeux d'eau," by Ravel, and "La Cathedrale" engloutie by Debussy.

Michal Fokine, creator of the new Ballet Russe, and Vera Fokina, prima ballerina of the Ballet Russe, will appear at the Auditorium theater tomorrow evening in a ballet divertissement. The program includes the famous Salome dance and five Russian folk dances. The Chicago Grand Opera orchestra will assist.

Margaret Weiland will make her debut in piano recital tomorrow evening at 8:15 at Kimball hall. She will play, among other compositions, the Mendelssohn Prelude and Fugue in E minor and Sonata Op. 57 by Beethoven.

Mishel Piastro, another exponent of the Auer cult, will take the place of Clarence Whitehill as associate artist with Mme. Francis Alda at the first Kinsolving musical morning next Tuesday at 11 o'clock at the Blackstone.

Florence Waakles, soprano, will appear in recital Tuesday evening at 8:15 o'clock. Edgar A. Nelson will be the accompanist.

Victor Young, violinist, will make his first American concert appearance in Orchestra hall on Tuesday evening, under the direction of Wessels & Voegeli. Mr. Young, it is said, is a product of the Maxwell street tenement district. When 10 years old he was sent to his grandfather, a tailor, in Warsaw, and there began his study of music. The young man was in Russia at the time of the overthrow of the Russian government. He became a prisoner of the bolshevists and later of the Germans. His program includes Saint-Saëns' concerto, "La Capricieuse," by Elgar; "Preludium," by Bach-Kreisler, and a Russian mazurka by Statowsky.

Mae Doelling, Chicago pianist, will give a recital Wednesday evening at Kimball hall, under the direction of F. Wight Neumann. She will play the Bach-d'Albert prelude and fugue in D major, "Spring Song" and "Maytime," by Anderson-Sowerby, and a paraphrase de concert sur le ballet, "La Belle au Bois Dormant," by Tschaikowsky-Pabst.

Cecile Ayres de Horvath will make her Chicago debut in piano recital Thursday evening at 8:15 at Kimball hall, under the direction of F. Wight Neumann. Her program includes the "Sonata Fantasie" of Scriabine and the sonata in B minor, opus 58, of Chopin.

The Chicago Symphony orchestra, Frederick Stock, conductor, will be heard in the second of its series of popular concerts on Thursday evening. The program includes Glazounow's "Carnaval" overture, Tschaikowsky's symphony No. 5, in E minor; Grieg's suite, "Peer Gynt," No. 1; the Strauss waltz, "On the Beautiful Blue Danube," and Chabrier's rhapsody, "Espana."

Efrem Zimbalist, violinist, will be the soloist with the Chicago Symphony orchestra at its regular symphony concerts to be given in Orchestra hall Friday afternoon and Saturday evening. Mr. Zimbalist will play the Beethoven concerto in D major, opus 61. The symphony of the week is Tschaikowsky's No. 5, in E minor. Chabrier's "Bourrée Fantasque" will serve as the opening number of the program, and it will be followed by one of the season's novelties, "Valses Nobles et Sentimentales," by Ravel.

Hazel Harrison will be heard in piano recital Friday evening at 8:15 at Kimball hall.

Concerning Ruth Miller

RUTH MILLER.
[Copyright: Matzene.]

In response to a number of inquiries regarding The Tribune's new music critic, it may be stated that Miss Miller made her Chicago debut as a violinist at the Blackstone theater in 1917.

She has studied harmony, counterpoint and composition under Hugo Kortschak, Arthur Olaf Andersen of the American Conservatory of Music, and Frederick Stock of the Chicago Symphony orchestra. The years 1912-13 were spent in Berlin. Since 1917 she has been teaching, composing and playing.

The Saturday Evening Post of Philadelphia has printed in the last year five extended articles on music by Miss Miller. It was through these articles that she came to the attention of the editors of The Tribune. Her appointment to the position of music critic followed.

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

Resuming Daily Routine Now the Election's Over

By Mme. X.

HAVING, we hope, once and for all shown the benighted idealists where they "get off," having demonstrated to an expectant world the practical common sense which is the pride and joy of our nation and which nearly went up in the flames of the great conflagration, we—you and I—can return to the main business of life. In the existence of many this main business is chiefly concerned with the best way to clothe the basic necessities of daily living with an esthetic ritual which shall persuade us of the immeasurable distance that stretches between us and our savage ancestors.

So eating, drinking, and dancing, marrying and giving in marriage, birth and death, and all the rest of the day's routine for most of us is so arranged as to make a pleasing pageant which gives employment to countless thousands and fosters the illusion that we have made great progress since our primordial ancestor ate nuts for a breakfast food, indicated his preference for a wife by knocking her down and dragging her off to his lair by her long and uncombed hair, while the other operations which were a part of diurnal routine were performed as simply as these.

Consider the Debutante.

I don't know whether among our savage contemporaries or ancestors there is or was such an impressive institute as the debutante, but I rather suspect it. Such an important element in the social life of today must have its roots deep down in our system. Each year these sublime, incomprehensible creatures appear, dewy and lovely. We look at them with wonder and not a little dismay.

At the head of the wondering onlookers are the parents. In all nature there's nothing so tragically anxious and eager as the mother of a debutante. There was once a time when the bud was almost as full of timid concern as her mother, but such is not the case, as a rule, thank goodness! nowadays.

The average young thing has the air of utter self-sufficiency which some of us struggle years to acquire. Perhaps it's only a bluff, but, if so, it's a highly successful bluff.

There's one credit should be accorded the mother of the debutante: she has presented to a world where beauty is such a cult a most distinctly "easy to look at" young person. There seem to be no more plain girls. Don't you remember them, those homely and good girls who were held up as models to the rest of their generation? Perhaps they have abandoned the melancholy business of competing with their fair and irresistible sisters on the social field. At any rate, the wall flower of tradition is hard to find.

The fashion of the moment, much as it is criticized, is certainly made to display the charms of youth. The abbreviated skirts, sleeveless frocks, short, fluffy locks, hats drawn down to the eyelashes, the loose, supple outlines and uncorseted figures were devised for youth, and for youth alone, not for maturity or age.

Youth Never So Keen.

The fashionable emancipation of the human form is merely a symbol of the even more striking emancipation of the individual young girl of today. Chaperons—what are they? Home duties, veneration for age, early hours, where are they in the scheme of things?

Chaperones are giddier than their charges. Home duties are performed by paid help. Age dreads the definite acknowledgment that respect implies. Early hours are achieved by late slumber. Thus is the slate of youth wiped clean of the muttered charges of those left behind in the swift progress of time and the generations. The net result is that youth was never so ardent, so interesting as it is today.

It is not possible for me to give a complete list of the names of those who make up this latest phalanx of young Amazons [for are they not equipped for battle, a battle of wits?], but the names of a few of them sound familiar in the ears of old Chicagoans.

There's Miss Katherine Hamill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hamill and of really old Chicago stock on both sides, a grandfather on one side being the late Charles Hamill and on the other the late John B. Lyon, both prominent citizens in their time.

Miss Anita Dunn is another scion of a well known family, as her mother was Miss Anna Chapman, a branch of the famous McCormick family.

Miss Catherine Rehm's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William R. Rehm, have long been associated with the life and development of Chicago.

Miss Grace Andrews, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene E. Andrews of Highland Park, will be introduced to society at a luncheon at the Woman's Athletic club on Wednesday, Nov. 17. In presenting her daughter at a luncheon, Mrs. Andrews is departing from the usual Chicago custom of giving debutante teas or receptions, and is adopting the present New York fad of giving luncheons to present formally this year's debs. Mr. and Mrs. Andrews also will give a dinner dance at the Opera Dance club on Nov. 17.

Mrs. Jessie C. Barnes of 446 Surf street will introduce to society her daughter, Miss Margaret Barnes, at a dinner dance at the Woman's Athletic club on Monday, Dec. 20.

MISS DOROTHY MAGIE PHOTO BY LEWIS-SMITH

Miss Dorothy Magie, daughter of Mrs. Frank Ogden Magie of the Shore Crest hotel, will be presented this winter, although no date has been set as yet for her debut.

MISS ELIZABETH ANDREWS PHOTO BY LEWIS-SMITH

Miss Elizabeth Andrews, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Frank Taylor Andrews of 448 Barry avenue, will make her debut at a tea on Thanksgiving day. Miss Andrews was graduated from Vassar last June.

A debutante who is of an old and famous family and who will attract much attention is Miss Muriel McCormick. She has postponed her proposed debut on the stage in Munich in order to return with her father, Harold F. McCormick, and have a glimpse of Chicago society.

Of Well Known Families.

Miss Theresa Higginson, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Higginson Jr., is not only identified through her parents with this city, but also with Boston, where her father's family connection is numerous and prominent.

Miss Margaret Keeley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Keeley, is a recent addition to the ranks of the debutantes, as she only lately returned from abroad. Her parents have been long part of Chicago's social and business life.

Miss Maisda Wakem, a cousin of Miss Theresa Higginson and a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Wakem, and Miss Florence Taft, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oren Taft, are also among the season's newcomers.

Miss Elizabeth Prindiville, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Prindiville, likewise of an old Chicago family, and Miss Carol De Windt, daughter of Mr. Heyliger De Windt, are both residents of our most classic suburb, Winnetka.

Miss Beatrix Thorne is of the well known Thorne family, her parents being Mr. and Mrs. George Thorne.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Robbins' youngest daughter, Miss Frances Robbins, is one of those to make her bow to society this winter. Her three sisters, Mrs. Kenneth Goodman, Mrs. Frank Hibbard, and Miss Isabelle Robbins are among the most popular of the younger women here.

This is but an incomplete list and gathered at random, but it suffices to show that, no matter what happens to those of us who have thought that without us Chicago society might perish, there is nevertheless a strong probability that it will continue on its triumphant career.

Tuesday's Gay Parties.

Election night was the occasion for many a jubilant festivity. The Casino was crowded with a dining, cheering throng, who applauded the bulletins which came over the wire every few minutes. The Saddle and Cycle, South Shore Country, Onwentsia, and other country clubs all had gay parties, but one of the most successful election night affairs was the supper dance that the Robert Gardiners gave in Mr. Gardiner's offices in the Rookery building.

About sixty of the young married set assisted the Gardiners in celebrating the Republican victory. The hosts had taken over an adjacent cafeteria, in which their guests were regaled with a delicious supper served on the long, clean, white counters. They sat on the high, whirling stools. To many of the fair guests it was probably the first time they had ever enjoyed the informal freedom of a cafeteria. It may start a fashion.

Among the company were Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Tree, who are in town on their way to California. The former is of old Chicago stock, his father, the late Arthur Tree, having been the son of Judge Lambert Tree and the grandson of H. H. Magie, an early pioneer. The old Tree house, on the site where now stands the Medinah temple, was a landmark in its time. Mr. Magie bought that whole block for $5,000 in 1846. Today the Masons are planning to buy half of it, that part where the artist's colony is sheltered in the Tree Studio building, for $400,000.

To return a moment to the young Trees, Ronald Tree's mother is now Lady Beatty, wife of the famous English admiral of that name. Mrs. Ronald Tree was the wife of the late Henry Field, brother of Marshall field of Chicago. The Trees were married abroad last summer and have been spending their honeymoon in Europe.

Last Thursday Mrs. Cecil Clark Davis, the well known portrait painter, returned from a lengthy stay in Rio Janeiro, Brazil, where she had a great success, both as an artist and socially. She is at the Virginia hotel. Her mother, Mrs. John M. Clark, is spending the autumn at Glen Cove, Long Island.

Mr. and Mrs. Leander McCormick, who have been visiting in Yorkshire, are sailing for home on the Olympic on Nov. 17, and will probably arrive in Chicago a few days later.

A Night at the Arts Club.

The Arts club is bursting into high drama this week. On Tuesday and Wednesday evenings its dramatic committee, of which Miss Alice Gerstenberg is chairman and Mrs. Lyman Walton is vice chairman, will present three pieces. The first one, "The Philosopher of Butterbiggins," is by Harold Chapin, an American who joined the English army before we entered the war and who died in service in 1915. The second one, with the encouraging title "The Song of Solomon," is by a budding Shakespeare, Mark Leland Odea of Winnetka, and is the first production of his first play. The third play, "Sold for a Song," is also a premier performance and is by Elizabeth Perkins.

During the first intermission Mrs. John E. May will sing some Indian songs. Miss Anna Morgan and Winfield Carnegie have helped train the actors. The dramatic standard of the Arts club is high, so the evening is full of promise of performance above the average. There'll be none of the hesitation and suspense so often incident to amateur productions.

Another institution which it is not easy to follow back to the days of our archetypal forebears is that of linking our charities and their support with

Bazaar Proceeds to Swell Fund for Crippled Children

A BAZAAR will be held next Friday and Saturday at the northwest corner of Sixty-third street and Woodlawn avenue by the members of the Martha Washington club. The proceeds will go toward the building fund for the new home for convalescent crippled children which the club is planning to build in connection with the new Armour institute at Seventy-fifth street and Windsor Park.

The club, which was organized in [illegible] with Mrs. Sophia Young as president, devoted its early efforts toward work in the Washington Park hospital. More recently they have broadened their work to care for all crippled and destitute children who come to their attention. At present one of the major interests of the members is the clinic for crippled children at St. Luke's hospital, which is supplied by the club with necessary braces and appliances to further the recovery of the little patients. The cases are investigated by visiting nurses and those found worthy are treated or operated on as their needs demand.

The great need at present seems to be for a home for those children who have been operated on and still need more than ordinary home care. The bazaar funds will go toward the building of this home, as will the proceeds from a rummage sale to be held later in the month and numbers of smaller affairs to be given during the club season.

The regular meetings of the club are in charge of several departments whose chairmen prepare varied programs on art, literature, music, philanthropy, and travel. Until this season the membership has been restricted to [illegible], but this limitation has been removed owing to applications for membership and the increased need of workers.

The Martha Washington club, of which Mrs. Francis M. Ackley is president, will hold a bazaar on Friday and Saturday at Woodlawn avenue and Sixty-third street. The club conducts a clinic for crippled children at St. Luke's hospital, and their present efforts are being directed toward building a home for the convalescent children in connection with the new Armour institute to be located at Windsor Park, Seventy-fifth to Sixty-ninth streets. The members also are planning a rummage sale to be held within a few weeks.

Have You a Player Piano—and No Cabinet?

IF you own a player piano, a music roll cabinet is as necessary as the music. Without it your music is forever being mislaid, the boxes broken and the rolls torn. With a cabinet you are enabled to keep each roll in its particular place. Why not call tomorrow and select one? Prices this week are exceptionally low.

When We Recently Quoted the Article By Sara Swain Adams the Noted Corset Authority

Third Floor—Center

Published a short time ago in the Chicago Daily News—we expected that many of the women who read it would want to follow out Miss Adams' suggestions, but so great was the response that we can only today find our stocks in such shape as to repeat it—and so you will find the major portion of the article quoted to the left, below, for you to read—To us there is not the slightest doubt that Miss Adams had in mind for Nemo corsets alone are made to be as helpful as the corsets Miss Adams describes. Nemo corsets are designed along latest hygienic, scientific lines that assure every woman exactly the model her particular type of figure should have and in most cases include some invention to aid the health as well.

Still, withal, Nemo corsets, if correctly chosen and properly fitted, not alone bring health and comfort, but the season's fashionable figure lines as well—for the fittings, here—and please remember our corps of corsetieres is conceded to be the best in America; no charge is made.

Chicago Daily News, Aug. 18, 1920

CORSET INFLUENCES

By Sara Swain Adams

There are very few women who even approximate physical perfection of health. An intelligently selected corset can do more to aid and even cure certain physical defects than any other one thing in the world of invention today.

For instance, the supporting features introduced in some of the corset specialties help many of the prevalent physical difficulties of women. It serves the purpose of helping, if not indeed of curing some of the unfortunate weaknesses feminine health seems heir to. And, like most good things, it communicates its good in various directions. It not only brings better health, but better style.

"But," some one objects "what is there left for me? I have been so terribly ill and I was left with an abnormal abdomen. The muscles have weakened—I suffer all the time—my corsets just kill me. I wear terribly expensive ones, but they hurt always—yet I must dress, I must wear a corset——"

And this is the very woman who should heed the signs of the time.

Find a specially trained corsetiere, a corset woman who has been trained in the hygiene of the body and corset—she will tell you that there are corsets made with devices to support and lift up such weakened organs.

No, these devices are not ugly pieces of something to spoil the look of the corset—they are merely introduced into the graceful lines of the corset without affecting its grace—but so scientifically constructed as to bring about the all important thing in a corset—hygienic help for the body.

The Nemo corset, with exclusive patented features that support the abdominal walls and keep the kidneys, intestines, stomach and liver from sagging is well named the "Wonderlift"—it helps women to help themselves, to conserve their health, and in many cases regain it when lost—made in five distinct models for every type of figure, sizes to 36, at 7.25

Nemo Corset, Style 1002—Controls and reduces excess flesh on the diaphragm and stomach; it flattens the whole front of the figure between the waist and groin sections; sizes to 36, at 9.00

Nemo Self-Reducing Corset, Style 521—is the same as the famous Style 523, only lighter in weight and made with a lower bust; its special feature is the "Bandlet" attached to the curved front steel, that removes the strain of a heavy abdomen from the nerves, muscles and blood vessels—making the wearer feel lighter on her feet. Sizes to 36, at........ 9.00

social festivities. And yet this is as much a part of the structure of our social life as anything we have inherited and developed. And nowhere are the prominent women who run society so adept at organizing great money-getting bazaars, pageants, balls, and kindred schemes as here in Chicago. It is a regular and big business transacted with all the precision of any other large financial affair. And what huge sums they go after and get!

Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank is preparing a record breaking fête for December in the "Pageant of the East" to bring in a goodly sum for the Chicago Lying-In hospital. On Tuesday afternoon the members of the women's board of the hospital are giving a tea at the hospital for the women's ball committee, the idea being to give them a realization of the importance of the institution for which they have pledged their services. A visit to the hospital is certainly enlightening to the inexperienced as to what is the latest in the line of scientific obstetrics.

Three Big Drives Coming.

But what did the aboriginal man know of the great business of philanthropy, any way? The nearest he ever came to it, probably, was when he fattened his captured enemy on the best food he could provide before eating his victim. He knew no Red Cross, no Girl Scouts, no Policlinic, so he never came under the spell of a national drive.

Here in Chicago today there are three big drives coming at this moment—the drive for a million dollar fund for the Chicago Policlinic, which opens tomorrow night at the La Salle hotel; the fourth annual roll call of the American Red Cross, which opens Armistice day, Nov. 11; and the Girl Scouts campaign for members.

Accidentally dropped from an 8th-story window

—it did not break

"IT very often happens that myself and a couple of other girls do not get time to go out for lunch, so we hit on the plan of bringing a vacuum bottle full of hot beverage to drink with a luncheon brought from home. The vacuum bottle in question was standing on the sill of an open window in the rest room of the First National Exhibitors Circuit, 6 West 48th St. (8th floor), by which firm we are employed, when one of the girls, without noticing it, leaned against the window, thereby throwing the bottle out. In its fall the bottle hit an extension one story high and from there bounced into a court which was one story below the street level—therefore, the fall really consisted of nine stories instead of eight.

"When the bottle was recovered and returned to us, although it seemed none the worse for the fall except for a slight dent in the body of the bottle and another in the cover, we expected, of course, that the inside was shattered to pieces. To test it we filled it the next day with hot chocolate, and found to our surprise that the chocolate was still hot in the middle of the day when the bottle was opened. I might mention that the bottle referred to had been in service a matter of nine months previous to its eventful fall." Miss Sadie McIntosh, 510 West 147th St., N. Y. City.

It was a Stanley Vacuum Bottle. Not even the terrific impact of a fall from an 8th-story window could break its walls of steel!

The Stanley Bottle is made entirely of steel. It eliminates for all time the expense and inconvenience of broken glass. It can never break.

Naturally the Stanley is more expensive than the ordinary vacuum bottle, but there are no expenses for repairs or replacements. The first cost is the last cost.

Every Stanley Bottle is lined with blue Amalite, a pure mineral coating which is fused into the steel—making a surface like porcelain.

Sold in one and two-quart sizes at all the better stores. An attractive gift for man or woman. Prices (East of the Rocky Mountains), black standard finish: quart size, $10.00—2-quart size, $15.00.

Slams of Life

By J. P. McEVOY

NOW THAT IT'S ALL OVER.

They tell us since we've cleaned the house,
And slipped the Dimmycrats the rause,
That all these birds who've shimmied in
Will give us something else than chin;
That living costs will hit the chute
And profiteers will get the boot—
Well, mebbe so;
I dunno.

They say they'll run this government,
And tell us how they spend each cent,
And none will go for graft and such,
And no one will be cheated (much),
And taxes will be cut in two,
And all our dearest dreams come true.
Well, mebbe so;
I dunno.

No waste, no inefficiency;
The birds will sing in every tree,
And grafters will be sent to jail,
And not a soul will go their bail.
No countries then will start a fuss,
Or if they do they won't fight us. . . .
Well, mebbe so;
I dunno.

They sketch in words that gleam and glow
A beautiful scenario;
And though it may not work so gay,
It listens pretty anyway.
No guile, no graft, no rift, no row,
No way, nowhere, no time, nohow.
We-e-e-ell, mebbe so,
Mebbe so.
But, I dunno!

Why Creams and Powder are Necessary

Science has proved that fifty per cent of all skins are too dry; Ten per cent of all skins are too oily; Twenty per cent of all skins are dingy or freckled; Ten per cent of all skins are pimpled or covered with blackheads. All skins become darker, dryer—have a tendency to wrinkle and develop age spots unless nourished by proper creams and protected by the right powder. There is a reliable beauty aid for these complexion destroying conditions. Many different creams—but each made especially for one purpose. All have been employed for years in more than 4000 beauty shops with unfailing success.

Spends Last $1,000 on "Game" Ad for Support of Play

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK. — [Special Correspondence.]—Earl Carroll is a writer of songs and plays. Also Earl Carroll, one concludes, after reading the advertisement he wrote and paid for in last Sunday's journals, is a game bird. His play, "The Lady of the Lamp," has been going along steadily at the Republic for a month or more, burning with a steady if not a brilliant flame.

Just a week or so ago it began to sputter, and last week threatened to go out. Immediately, of course, the theater buzzards began to gather; the manager to be sure of his house; the creditors to be sure of their bills; the [illegible] to be sure of their chortles.

All of which angered young Mr. Carroll. He was not yet, so the story goes, in debt to any man—and he had a thousand dollars in the bank. So he took the thousand and, as they say in the A. E. F., "shot it all" on one last plea for support.

"My Last $1,000," the advertisement is headed, and frankly it is a cry for help. There is, of course, a bit of hokum and back slapping in it. "I am spending this money in the last hope that I may reach the really fine theatergoing public of New York," Mr. Carroll starts off, "and if I don't reach you I shall at least know that I fired all my ammunition before the ship went down. . . . I believe that there are still some good, clean, sweet, wholesome, home loving people left in the world whose hearts are not so callous that they cannot appreciate any evening's entertainment that does not have a georgette nightie, a folding bed, or a semi-nude woman decorating the center of the stage."

But once past this the statement is frank and open and interesting. "I wrote and produced a play at the Republic theater," repeats Earl; "my critics and comrades acclaimed it. I received hundreds of flattering letters, appreciative phone calls, and personal commendations of the artistic merit of my play. Ninety-nine out of a hundred have said it is great. . . . I have little money to spend on advertising, and I thought this mouth-to mouth publicity would make my business jump beyond the overhead expense and that my box office would say 'success.' But it didn't!

"'The Lady' has been rocking along for weeks. Just getting by slightly, somewhat too slightly, at times. But I have hung on. Other theatrical interests of great power tried to take the theater away from me in order to house another attraction; every effort has been made to snuff out 'The Lady of the Lamp'; the ticket agencies were intimidated, my advertising limited, and my electric lights turned out. But still I hung on. Now . . . I am rolling my last thousand to try to make good. . . .

"If you have seen 'The Lady of the Lamp' and liked it, won't you please urge some others to enjoy it also? If you haven't seen it, will you take a chance on my humble say-so and come? If you don't like it, I want to do a John Wanamaker and be the first theatrical manager in America to refund the money of any dissatisfied customer. I shall keep the box office open for the play. I personally will be on hand, and I shall repay promptly the price of every ticket to every displeased purchaser."

The actor-author is a sensitive animal. He simply cannot give up his faith in the thing he has created. He is no more stubborn than the average author, but knowing the tricks of the theater and the history of those few plays that have weathered six or eight weeks of bad business and later grown into popular successes, he is less willing to admit failure.

Usually the author who sells a play to a producer stands about anxiously until the purchaser gets through doing whatever he decides to do to it, and then meekly bears his part of the onus if the production is not successful. But the actor-author insists upon his right to have a hand in the production of his own play, and he therefore comes out of the experience not only supremely sanguine as to the play's chances but so completely immersed in the venture there is no hope of his seeing it as it is.

SIDNEY BLACKMER in "NOT SO LONG AGO" at the STUDEBAKER
CAMPBELL PHOTO

Every one of them, given the chance, would risk not only his own last thousand dollars, as Mr. Carroll has done, but his best friend's last thousand, and then borrow as many more thousands from other friends as he could and risk them.

The actor-author is particularly active in New York this season, and the vote is six to nine in his favor. Gilda Varesi had a hand in the writing of "Enter, Madame," and that is one of the leading successes of the new season.

James Montgomery wrote the book and helped with the staging of "Irene," which is already in its second year.

George M. Cohan tinkered "The Meanest Man in the World" into a success, and then stepped into the name part to cinch matters, and he staged "Mary," which will undoubtedly run through the winter, and "The Tavern," which promises to last until the holidays at least.

Frank Bacon wrote the most of "Lightnin'," which threatens now to stay on Broadway for another year at least, having gone through two seasons to record receipts.

Frank Craven is responsible for "The First Year," which is good for an all-season run, and William Hodge, though his reviewers did not speak kindly of his efforts, is still doing a profitable business with "The Guest of Honor."

Alan Brooks is in the Earl Carroll class, in that he refuses to admit "Because of Helen" is lacking in the qualities that make for popular success, and is bravely announcing the second month of the play's run at the Punch and Judy.

White teeth in diseased sockets are doomed

Watch your gums and you can prevent diseased sockets

Thousands of people have wrong notions about saving their teeth. All that's necessary, they think, is to keep them white and free from decay. This is important but it isn't enough.

The vital thing is to keep the gums healthy. Because pyorrhea, the greatest tooth destroyer of all, starts under the gums. The infection that begins in the gum tissue spreads (if unchecked) to the bony root socket.

This root socket is what holds the tooth in place. When pyorrhea germs undermine and destroy the sockets, the entire supporting foundation of the teeth is gone. So they loosen and fall out or must be extracted—though they may be sound and undecayed.

That is why dentists in increasing numbers prescribe Pyorrhocide Powder to keep gums healthy and to restore health to bleeding, receding spongy or tender gums.

In addition to its ingredients which keep the teeth white and clean, Pyorrhocide Powder is medicated with Dentinol, a germicidal and healing agent widely used by the dental profession in the treatment of pyorrhea at the dentist's chair.

Pyorrhocide Powder tones up the gums, stimulates their blood circulation, maintains hardness and firmness, thereby increasing the power to resist pyorrhea infection. Its effectiveness for this purpose has been conclusively proved by thorough tests in clinics devoted exclusively to pyorrhea study and research. That is why dentists everywhere recommend it.

The economical dollar package contains six months' supply. At all druggists and dental supply houses.

Spirit of Teamwork Shown in Progress of Lincoln Highway

Artery from Great Lakes to Mississippi Ready for Use in Early Spring

BY J. L. JENKINS.

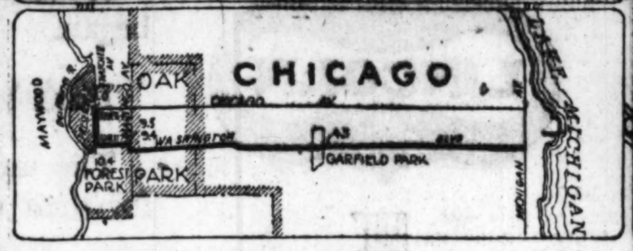
HIGHWAY teamwork, the irresistible force that is pulling Illinois out of the mud in spite of unprecedented difficulties, has laid down fifty-one miles of superfine paving this year between Chicago and the Mississippi river. The state's great western link in the continuous hard road system which, in 1921, will bind its extreme limits with more than 600 miles of permanent pavement, represents a new, coöperative movement in the highway building. It has been put through by the combined efforts of not only township, county, and state highway forces, but also by the active interest of thousands of citizens.

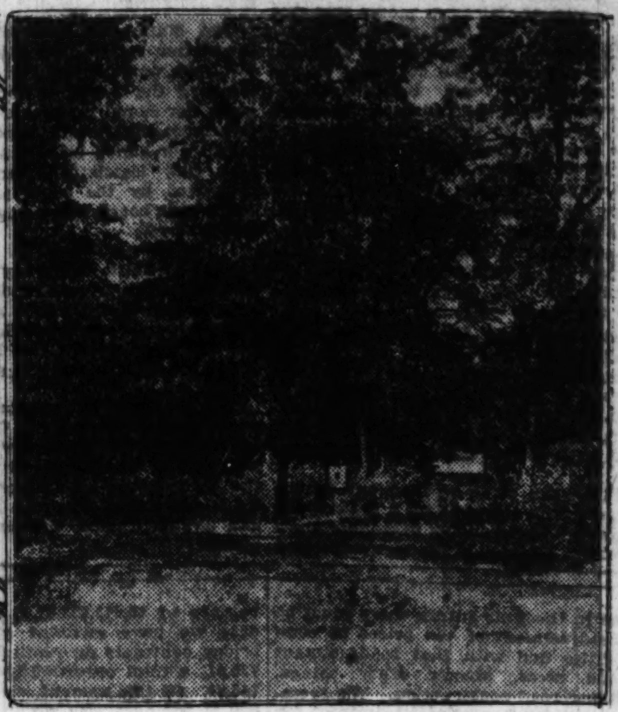
In order to bring this western link—Roosevelt road and its connection with the Lincoln highway—to meet Cook county's 200 mile highway network, a citizens' army entered the field during the summer. Business and civic leaders in practically every community touched by the important trunk line acquainted themselves early in the season with the barriers that S. E. Bradt and his state highway organization were facing. They learned that materials, costing twice and three times their price in former years, could not be brought to the road building gangs even after they had been purchased; that road contractors were going bankrupt in attempting to finish stretches of concrete bid on when material and labor was cheaper; that labor, even at record breaking prices, could be had only in limited quantities.

Wheaton led the practical attack on the state's problem. There business men, led by E. N. Hurley, gave their time and energy in order to collect railroad cars for the transportation of needed materials, battering rolling stock embargoes and enlisting official and railroad coöperation in the movement. They adjusted building problems daily and pushed the work to completion in record time. Everywhere along the line of Roosevelt road and the Lincoln highway the same type of coöperation is reported. As a result but twelve miles of uncompleted contracts now form gaps in the road between Chicago and the river in that part of the work supervised by the state highway department.

The year's program to the west has not succeeded in making the Lincoln road one to recommend for winter driving. There are still ten detours in the 141 miles across the state, including those around four new bridges. The first blocks Roosevelt road at the edge of Forest Park with a good all-weather detour marked from Maringo avenue in Oak Park to First avenue, Maywood. From Wheaton a detour is marked from Front street to West Chicago and another detour appears inside of the east city limits of Geneva, with a long detour reaching nine and one-half miles west from Geneva to pick up the new concrete. Another bridge is under construction nine miles west of De Kalb and a mile gap in the paving delays travel fourteen and one-half miles west of De Kalb. In Lee county the highway will go into the winter a hard road throughout, according to County Supt. L. B. Neighbor. At present the town of Ashton is repairing its streets. West of Franklin Grove there has been a costly relocation to avoid two grade crossing of the Northwestern railroad, and for a mile the county has made the road one of the finest stretches on the highway between lake and river. The macadam west of this point is being treated, but brick and concrete lead on to the county line west of Dixon. Three short detours remain in the highway between this point and Fulton.

ELEVEN HARD ROAD MILES CONNECT CHICAGO LOOP AND WILDERNESS





HUNDREDS of years ago patriarchs of the tribes of Oak and Maple settled on the vast plains of fertile land stretching away to the west from Lake Michigan. Like their Indian companions, they have retreated step by step through the years before the irresistible march of a monster city. It remained for the Cook county forest preserve board to rescue the finest specimens of the two great tribes and secure their best loved stronghold for them for all time.

That stronghold, hundreds of acres of virgin oak and maple forest, stretches away today for miles at the western border of the city. It is heading into another winter fully protected against further attacks from civilization. A world of wild things is tucked snugly in its depths.

For years Thatcher woods has been recognized as the city's most popular picnic grounds. Thousands have enjoyed it this season and will continue to enjoy it until December storms drive pleasure seekers indoors.

To reach this winderness go west in Washington boulevard to its end in Oak Park. Turn right one block in Marengo avenue and left in Randolph street to Thatcher road, in Forest Park. Turn right in Thatcher road to Chicago avenue and take the preserve road into and through the reservation.

THE WORLD'S WORST ROAD

You've been over it. Unburden yourself by addressing "World's Worst Road," The Sunday Tribune, Chicago. Give the exact location of the stretch you struck. The Tribune will pay $1 for each letter published.

Repudiation.

WORST ROAD artists have made an orphan of at least one highway horror. The Milan Independent, flooded with a wave of clippings carrying "E. J. R.'s" philippic against its town's main street, has issued a public announcement denying ownership of the stretch in question and transferring responsibility for its condition to Rock Island. The road, the announcements protests, "belongs to Rock Island, but is in the city limits of Milan." Rock Island, in turn, passes responsibility to Milan. Anybody want this rough orphan?

He Kept His Hammer.

It is true that one has no need to leave our own "horn-tooted" city to discover stretches of so-called pavement the negotiation of which is only comparable to Hannibal's w. k. tour through the Alps. Witness Roosevelt road from Forty-eighth avenue to the western city limits! This twentieth century nightmare has sent more automobiles to the cemetery than any other destructive factor in operation in this vicinity.
D. J. N.

King Coal's Highway.

Want to tell you about the road between Coal Valley and Moline, Ill. I've heard of "Washboard Alley," but it must be velvet compared with this one. After doing it you feel like you had just come out of a churn! When we hit one of the bumps, my daughter struck the top of the car and bumped her head twice before coming down. They use this road to haul coal over, and in summer the ruts are many feet deep. It is practically impassable now.

The motor which has revolutionized all expectations of motor service.

LIKE THE MASTERPIECE OF A GREAT ARTIST TO ART-LOVERS—
OR THE MASTER WORK OF A GREAT COMPOSER TO MUSIC-LOVERS.

The Holmes improved system of air-cooling will be the center of attraction and interest to all enthusiasts over correct motor design.

Our big special announcement showing of this motor is now on.

It will continue at our salesroom until the evening of November 13th.

Arthur Holmes, president of the Holmes Automobile Company and inventor of the new Holmes AERODUCT, the outstanding feature of this remarkable motor, will be here to explain its many advantages.

It is a development of greater importance to you as a motor car owner or as a prospective owner of a motor car than has ever before been made.

See it, if only to add to your own knowledge of automobile motor development.

It has removed the last possible source of difficulty from motor cooling.

It has revolutionized all previous ideas of road service.

It has doubled all previous conceptions of motor reliability.

It has enabled us to place an UNLIMITED GUARANTY ON MOTOR PERFORMANCE.

The first REAL guaranty ever offered with an automobile.
Demonstrations will be made.
The remarkable new invention will be shown.
You are cordially invited to be present during the week.

A startling climax to Marmon Demonstration Week

Let us loan you outright a Marmon 34 for a day

Be your own demonstrator! Use a Marmon 34 as if it were your own car—put it through the routine of your requirements—test it—compare it—decide for yourself whether it is the finest car you've ever driven or ridden in

The most conclusive evidence ever offered

This is the climax of Marmon Demonstration Week—an amazing offer to which we've looked forward for a long time.

It is final and complete proof of Marmon performance. It removes any possible hesitancy you might have towards having a demonstrator show you how the Marmon 34 performs. This remarkable car will do for you exactly what it does for him.

We send a Marmon 34 to your office or to your home. Keep it a day. Drive it yourself, or have your chauffeur drive it. Put it through every test—make any comparisons you wish.

You be the judge

With no Marmon salesman or demonstrator present, use the items shown on The Marmon Score Card as a guidance for your comparisons. Make these twelve tests: Ease of riding, acceleration, deceleration, slow speed operation in high gear, high speed operation, ease of steering, convenience of all controls, economy, weight, smoothness of motor operation, rigidity and roadability.

But this is merely suggested. Do whatever you wish in the way of tests. Drive wherever you wish. Try some stiff grades. Drive over rough spots. Take your family out, and your friends. Drive down to the theater. Use the car as if it belonged to you. See how it acts.

We loan you a stop-watch. Test acceleration and deceleration. How fast a pick-up from 10 to 50 miles per hour? How quickly a slow down? How much vibration at 45 miles per hour in "second"? How fast with comfort?

What to look for

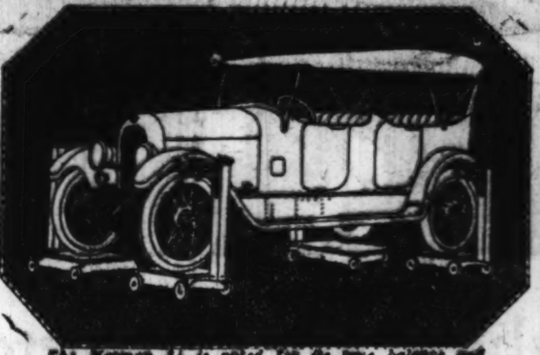
In addition to stop-watch tests of acceleration, deceleration and speed, you will want to know about gasoline mileage.

We will therefore furnish a special one-gallon test tank, so you can see for yourself what the actual Marmon record is.

You will want tire records, which we will gladly furnish—the actual records of Chicago owners, showing 15,000 mile records are an average.

You will want to compare weight, possibly. We will gladly put the Marmon 34 on four scales, or you can drive the front, then the rear, on any platform scales and note the true balance yourself.

If you desire to test rigidity, drive one wheel upon a curb. Then try all the doors. Note they remain easy to open and close. Try every test you can conceive, make any comparison you wish. Or have your chauffeur make them as you note the results.



The Marmon 34 is noted for its true balance and light weight. This brings roadability, it ends vibration, it stops sideway, minimizes skidding, saves on tires and fuel and prolongs the life of the car.

How fast with comfort?

Compare the Marmon 34 with other cars at 20, at 40, at 60 miles per hour. Compare the riding comfort and the steering ease. Note the lack of destructive vibration in the Marmon 34.

Put your hand or a paper flap over the speedometer. Note that this car moves along always at a higher mileage than you imagine. Your preconceived ideas of speed are upset. The "feel" is entirely different, both to driver and passenger.

Easy riding and easy driving are due to the Marmon principle of suspension. Examine the springs—the rear are compound cantilever cross suspension type. The front are semi-elliptic, extra long. Note the inbuilt shock absorbers.

This advanced principle of suspension, together with the improved frame, permits a lower center of gravity. Motion is vertical, sideway is eliminated, vibration is absent. Prove all this to your own satisfaction. We will abide by your findings.

Note in driving the Marmon 34 the ease of control. Everything is handy. Even the instruments are grouped together within easy visibility, both by day and by night.

Chicago's favorite fine car

There are over 2,000 of the foremost families of Chicago who are proud of their Marmon 34's.

You can now appreciate the extent of their discrimination. You can compare a Marmon 34 and their satisfaction with your present car and your satisfaction.

And you can do it without leaving a shadow of a doubt in your mind when you have completed the test. Marmon Demonstration Week has been a great success; it revolutionized many people's conceptions of what a really fine car can do.

This offer does away with all "sales talk," all highfalutin claims, all superficialities. It is a trial offer such as never was made before. Its very daring proves our faith in this car, based upon experience.

We know any man can get startling results in a Marmon demonstration and that no professional demonstration, no cleverness, no familiarity are essential.

You are not placed under the slightest obligation

To make your own demonstration of the Marmon 34, simply telephone Mr. H. A. White, Sales Manager, or call. A Marmon 34 will be placed at your disposal. Keep it for a day or over the week-end.

You will not be importuned to buy. The only limit in our offer is that it be a serious comparison made by a responsible party. Mere curiosity seekers need not apply.

To men of position in the community this is an unrestricted offer. Simply telephone Mr. White or call.

Seasonable offerings in closed cars

A visit to our new and beautiful showrooms at 2230 South Michigan Ave. will delight you with its exhibit of fine sedans, coupes, limousines, town cars and special four-passenger sedans.
Here are some exquisite examples of coach work by Kimball, Graff, Rubay and Marmon.

Road Chief Sees Better Building Conditions Ahead

Shows Maximum Mileage Has Resulted from State Policy

A BRIGHTER outlook for highway progress in Illinois in 1921 is held in an official review of the state's activities just issued by S. E. Bradt, state highway superintendent. His report follows in part:

"As we near the close of the 1920 season and take a backward view of what has been accomplished in road improvement during the last eight months by our own and other states it becomes even more apparent than it was at the beginning of the season that the action taken by Gov. Lowden and the highway officials of the state concerning road building for 1920 was correct.

"By the close of this season Illinois will have built between 325 and 350 miles of hard surfaced roads. We will carry over into 1921 uncompleted contracts involving approximately 150 miles, mainly carried over from 1919 contracts. This mileage would have been completed this year if the materials could have been brought to the work by the transportation companies.

"This situation, which was anticipated at the beginning of the season, is of itself evidence that the awarding of additional contracts this year would not have increased the completed mileage. Further evidence is found in the fact that those states which took the opposite view and acted accordingly have not increased the completed mileage thereby.

"Another consideration in restricting contracts was our belief that some time in the near future there must be a readjustment of the prices of commodities and with that readjustment would come, among other things, cheaper road construction. We therefore deemed it unwise to contract for any great mileage of roads beyond the amount we would, in our judgment, be able to complete.

A recent report on finances issued by the highway department left the impression that road building revenue in Illinois is more than sufficient to take care of the construction program. The state chief further explains the situation in the following comment:

"On Aug. 31, 1920, there were outstanding obligations on federal aid contracts of $15,898,009.29, against a cash balance of $5,672,422.37. Since that date we have awarded grading and bridge contracts amounting to $1,401,735.91, a total outstanding of $17,299,745.20. Of this amount, about $12,000,000 is for contracts awarded in 1919, which were to be completed in 1920.

"If these 1919 contracts were completed this year we would be without sufficient funds to make prompt payment, but it became apparent early in the summer that the work could not be finished. Accordingly we proceeded with the awarding of contracts involving not only the cash on hand, but the motor fees to become available April 10, 1921, as well as practically the entire reimbursement from the federal government. We have first advanced all the money for payment of contracts."

Gossip of the Auto Trade

PRELIMINARIES to the national auto shows will draw the attention of Chicago's motor row this week. The first to center interests of both trade and public will open tomorrow when the National Motorcycle, Bicycle, and Sporting Goods show begins in the Coliseum. Displays will be open to the public throughout the week. They include many novel features. Movies, banquets, and trade meetings will mark the show.

The Automotive Equipment association will open its show for the trade alone in the Coliseum, Nov. 15-20. Admission will be by ticket. Two hundred exhibitors have reserved space for the show.

The American Road Builders' association has announced a big showing of modern highway equipment and materials to be held in the Coliseum in connection with its Chicago convention, Feb. 7. Fifteen industries identified with road building will be represented.

Plans are being worked out by the larger truck concerns for a great truck show to be held during passenger show week in Chicago. No announcement has yet been made as to the place of truck displays.

The National Automobile Dealers' association has issued a blanket protest and warning against a proposal favoring the taxing of motor cars 50 cents per horse power, to be paid by owners annually, and a federal tax of 1 cent per gallon on all gasoline used. This new legislative plan has been suggested by the national industrial conference board, according to association leaders.

The Packard company has announced a 20 per cent reduction in the original price of its new six cylinder model brought out this fall. The original list price, $3,640, has been cut to $2,975 for touring car and roadster.

The Bassick Manufacturing company has contracted for the national distribution of Thomson's graphite penetrating oil. Illinois distribution of the product has been given the Alemite Distributing company, 2641 Michigan avenue, under the new arrangement.

Volunteers Given Praise for Motor Protection Work

WHOLESALE thefts of autos, while the police were busy Tuesday night handling crowds and running election returns, were prevented by members of the edpartment of constabulary, a volunteer organization, reports made public through the police and the constabulary officers revealed yesterday.

The department of constabulary was developed during the war. Under the stress of wartime needs, its members coöperated with both the police and federal officials and toward the close of the wartime period the anti-cruelty society was reorganized with a department of constabulary, under the command of Walter P. Stuart.

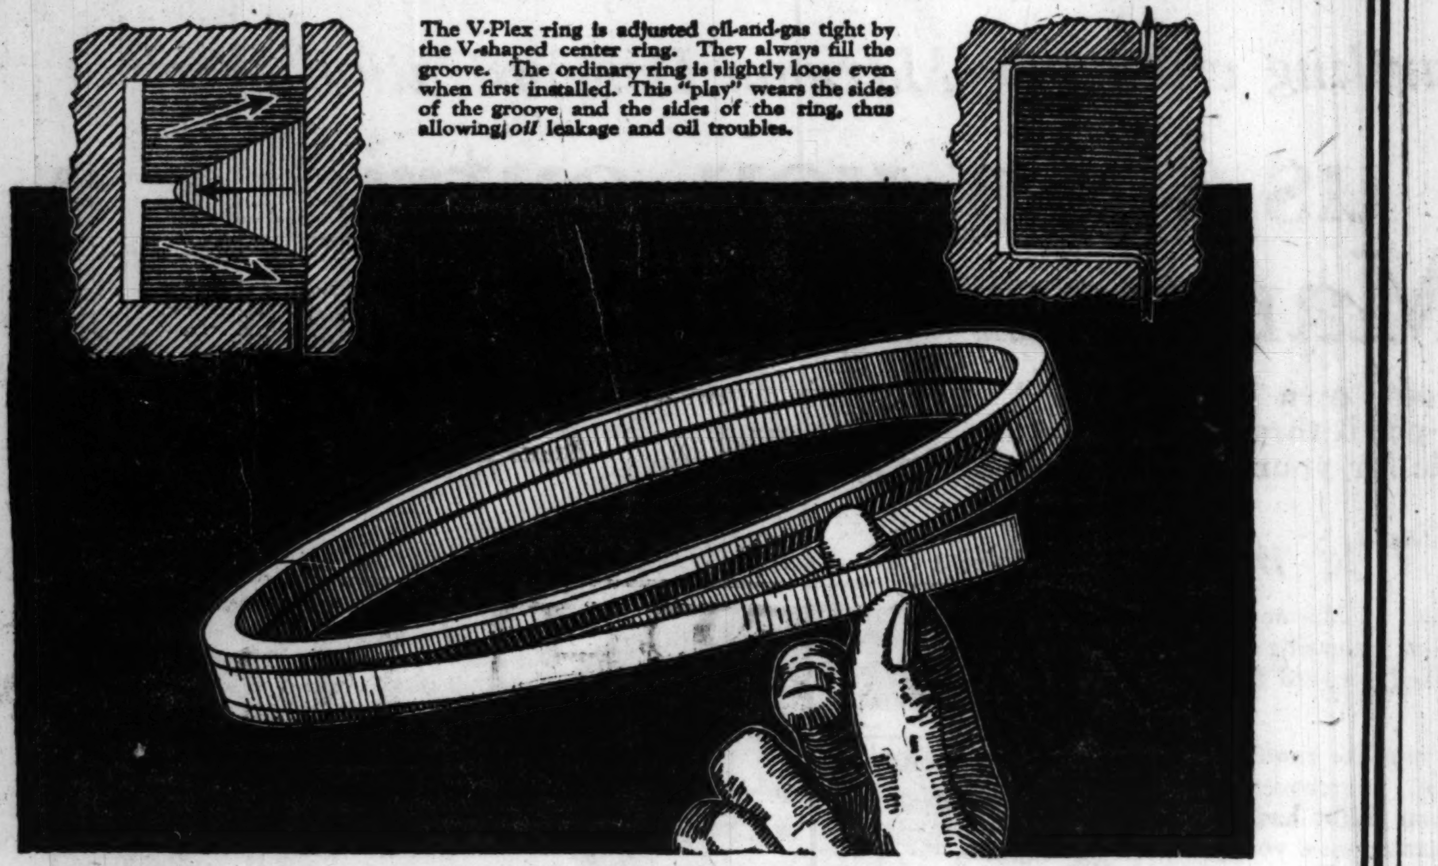
Working in close coöperation with the police, members of the constabulary have, in the last year, taken part in 500 raids on resorts known to be the hangout of thieves. They have recovered more than 500 stolen automobiles and assisted the police in the conviction of 600 violators of vehicle laws.

Its success in Illinois, in checking auto thefts, brought the attention of Indiana autoists to the organization with the result that at the request of the Hoosiers a branch of the organization, incorporated under Indiana laws, has been started in Indiana.

Call Big Meeting.

Officials of the Chicago Motor club are of the opinion that the largest crowd of motorists ever assembled in Chicago will invade the loop for the quarterly meeting, banquet, and entertainment which takes place at the Hotel Sherman, Tuesday, Nov. 9.

Judge Robert E. Crowe, Judge Mix, and S. E. Bradt will be the speakers of the evening.



The V-Plex ring is adjusted oil-and-gas tight by the V-shaped center ring. They always fill the groove. The ordinary ring is slightly loose even when first installed. This "play" wears the sides of the groove and the sides of the ring, thus allowing oil leakage and oil troubles.

How "Oil Troubles" are Corrected by V-Plex Dealers

V-Plex rings have six "pressure points" as against three in the ordinary ring. Thus pressure is properly equalized and the cylinder can't wear "egg-shaped." Reboring is unnecessary IN MOST CASES.

Sooted plugs, carbon formation, weak compression, backfiring, missing, slow pick-up, decreased power and many other motor complaints are caused by oil leaking past the piston and rings into the combustion chamber. Faulty or worn piston rings allow the oil leakage. That's easily the cause of half or more of those "unlocated" troubles that worry you.

Oil cannot leak past or behind the V-Plex Piston Ring. The V-shape center ring equalizes the wear and pressure on the entire cylinder wall. Even after V-Plex Rings have been used for years they are just as oil-and-gas tight as when first installed. The V-Plex Dealer will prove these facts to you.

LINCOLN

Leland-built Lincoln Motor Cars comprise eight body styles

It is not strange that motordom can scarce conceive it possible to excel the fine creations that you enjoy.

It has been so since the making of motor cars began.

Hark back some twenty years.

The motor cars of even then were marvels—for their day.

As passing time brought forth its new achievements, each thrilled you with its fresh sensations—then you wondered how you endured the car before.

Each new achievement seemed unsurpassable—until by genius it was surpassed.

Each seemed the great finality—yet will not each see its glory wane?

As the splendid mechanisms you have known roll on, it is only natural that they seem the ultimate in luxurious travel.

And yet, the seeming of the ultimate today is but an echo of the seeming in yesteryears.

For in the Lincoln car are revelations, new ease, new comforts, charms and fascinations which motordom has never known before.

AVIATION

U. S. Air Service Ranks Third in World Sky Forces

That Is the Opinion of Department Heads

OPERATIONS

The fourth and last of a series of articles dealing with the present condition of the United States army air service.

BY MORROW KRUM.

STANDING ready to fly from the various air stations controlled by the United States army air service at the present time are 6,765 airplanes.

There are 1,171 officers, every one of them pilots wearing the wings of the R. M. A. or better.

The enlisted men, most of them expert mechanics with M. S. E. or A. M. ranks, number 7,846, and there are 1,096 civilians employed by the air service.

There are in operation 7 flying fields, 4 balloon schools, 9 general supply depots, 13 temporary storage depots, 5 of which are in the process of abandonment; 6 aerial coast defense stations, 8 repair depots, 8 border patrol airdromes, and 1 experimental station.

These are scattered over the United States. The supply depots are located as centrally as possible. The flying fields are spread out from Long Island to California. The coast defense stations protect both of the North American coasts, the Canal Zone, and the Philippine Islands.

The officers, enlisted men, and civilian employés are scattered throughout the fields in proportion.

A list of flying fields follows:

Carlstrom Field, Arcadia, Fla.
Kelly Field, San Antonio, Tex.
Langley Field, Hampton, Va.
March Field, Riverside, Cal.
Mather Field, Sacramento, Cal.
Mitchell Field, Garden City, L. I.
Post Field, Ft. Sill, Okla.

Carlstrom and March fields maintain pilot schools. Kelly field is the seat of the border operations. Wearers of the one wing insignia learn the precious art of observation and artillery firing at Post field. Langley, Mather, and Mitchell fields come under the head of "general operations."

McCook field at Dayton should be included in the above list. There new ships are developed.

Barron, Chanute, Door, Ellington, Gerstner, Chapman, Love, Park, Rich, Scott, Taliaferro, and Selfridge fields, once so busy sending cadets through the training courses, are now acting as temporary supply depots. In event of war they could be opened for instruction in a few days.

Nine big supply depots now guard and house most of the air service equipment. The largest of these is Wilbur Wright field at Dayton.

Over 6,000 airplanes, if there were sufficient pilots to fly them, could be bouncing along the air lanes toward some concentration point within six hours. Thousands more are in storage at the various supply depots.

Over 1,000 pilots stand ready to fly at any hour of the day or night and to give instruction to students.

Approximately twenty flying fields could be operating on a war basis in three weeks, the supply depots, the repair depots, the research station, the coast defense stations all testify of America's strength in the air.

Yet a letter from the head of the air service in Washington brought the following reply last week:

"The United States air service ranks third of the world aeronautical fighting units."

IT'S EASY

Miss Jessie Bradley, a Chicago girl who learned to fly at Diggins Aviation school on Ashburn field, says flying is one of the easiest things she does. The handling of an airplane is much more simple than playing the piano and is safer than riding in a loop taxi, she says. In the picture above she is about to "swing the stick" on her Avro.

Pulitzer Trophy Attracts More Than 50 Ships

U. S. Air Classic Outshines Estampes Contest

WITH more than fifty entries assured, the Pulitzer trophy airplane race, to be flown over a Long Island course on Thanksgiving day, promises to be the most spectacular air event of the year. The response has been all the more surprising because entries are limited to planes capable of flying 100 miles an hour or better.

Among ships qualified to enter the race by reason of being able to travel 100 miles an hour are the DH, Vought, Loening, Fokker, and Larsen types. Under the rules, machines of those types will not be required to fly qualification tests.

It is hoped that one of the three American entries to the Gordon Bennett race will enter in this contest and promoters of the race are still anxiously awaiting the entrance blanks from Sadi Lecointe, who won the Bennett cup.

In addition to the Pulitzer trophy, considered by many the most beautiful yet offered in this country for any aeronautical event, gold, silver, and bronze plaques will be awarded. The plaques will go to the three piots making the best time for the Pulitzer trophy. The money award will be in the shape of Liberty bonds given under the Valentine gift to the Aero Club of America. The pilot of the winning plane will get $1,500 and the mechanic $300; of the second, $750 and $150; and of the third, $500 and $100.

The race is to be started at 11 a. m. on Thanksgiving day, thus permitting flyers and spectators to keep dinner engagements. The course is 180 miles. Mitchell field, Wantage, and Babylon are the three marking points of the closed circuit of forty miles which must be circled four times by the racing ships.

LIBERTY MOTORS IN NEW ITALIAN PLANES

BY JOHN CLAYTON.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Special Correspondence of The Tribune.]

MILAN,—[By mail.]—American Liberty motors are being used in the new Caproni commercial airplanes. The new triplanes with carrying capacity of twenty-four persons and half a ton of mail are equipped with three Liberties, while the largest plane Caproni has yet constructed, with cabin capacity for forty passengers, will have five of these power plants.

The Caproni people have adopted the Liberty for all their triplanes, only the six hundred horse power biplane retaining the Italian types. They will be operated at low speed, about 1,250 turns per minute, at which speed they develop a power of about 250 horse power. At full speed of 1,700 turns they develop more than 400 horse power, but the Caproni engineers figure they will prolong the life of the motors by several hundred per cent.

The navy type motors are used. They operate at lower cylinder pressure than the army type, which were designed for work at high altitudes.

Cadet Lost.

After being lost over desert country in the vicinity of Superstition mountain, his gasoline tank dry, and forced to land, Cadet Walter C. Roames of Perfection, Mich., returned to March field Monday noon, after three days of trying experience.

Complete stocks of genuine New Departure, Hyatt and Timken Bearings always on hand. Our service is official.

ART

Annual Exhibition of American Oils Safe, Sane, Average, and Enjoyable

By Eleanor Jewett.

THE thirty-second annual exhibition of American oil paintings and sculpture opened last Thursday afternoon in the east wing of the Art institute. It is, on the whole, an agreeable collection of pictures, suitable to the average spectator of unadventurous spirit. It is by no means catholic in tendency. It keeps strictly within the letter of the law as proclaimed by the academicians in art. Exclude the one ultra-modern note struck with cubistic impulse by Edwin W. Dickinson in his "Interior," and the isms in painting are nonexistent as far as we are concerned.

Reduced to its simplest form, the spirit of this thirty-second exhibition is ably, though a trifle sardonically, summed up in the choice of the two principal prize winning pictures. These are a portrait of Otis Skinner in "The Honor of the Family" by George B. Luks, and "Torn Lingerie," by Frederick Carl Frieseke.

I wish the two canvases hung side by side. Combined they form such an eloquent argument in favor of the theory of life exposed in so much of the literature of today—from the yellow press to W. L. George or Arnold Bennett. On the one hand you have the clubman, indifferent, blasé, cynical, a high liver, steeped in the knowledge of woman and the world, but still and forever a pursuer of woman; and on the other hand you have the girl, delicate, fresh, ignorant (maybe), serene, and unconscious at her task with the flimsy laces. But, if she looked up, would it be as the flirt that she would gain credence with the man, or as the child that she would claim his protection? Providing they were—side by side?

Similarly with the exhibition. The effect is as of a maiden with downcast eyes. What is she really? What really is the exhibition?

As for the man, his note is struck in himself. He lurks, or the atmosphere that his twinkling glance exudes lurks, as a possible menace to probing too deeply into the delicacies of his confrères. It is not clear whether, in fact, these painters are playing with us, playing up to the standard presumably set by earlier annual American exhibitions, but they may be—and with a touch of malicious insight into the native horror of properly minded people for extremes.

That devilish glint in the eyes of Mr. Luks' portrait makes one wonder.

It may be said with regret that there is nothing in the entire exhibit as powerful as "The Meeting of Antony and Cleopatra After the Battle of Actium," painted by Glyn Philpot and shown among the Carnegie pictures last August at the institute. There is nothing even as striking or as strong as the portrait of Joseph Pennell by Wayman Adams, the winner two years ago of the Logan prize at the Art institute, or as his "Conspiracy" of last fall. Nor is there a canvas as original as "The Twins, Virginia and Jane," by Joseph T. Pearson Jr., which was awarded the Potter Palmer gold medal in the thirty-first annual exhibition.

Yet in spite of all dubious praise there is much that one may enjoy in the work shown this year. Wayman Adams has a splendid portrait of Booth Tarkington; Louis Betts has a masterly portrait of James B. Forgan—this, indeed, is the most finished canvas shown; Jessie Arms Botke has a charming garden scene with two geese as chief actors; Gerald A. Frank has a mystical conception in "Mirror of Life"; Frederick M. Grant, Oliver Dennett Grover, Robert Henri, Victor Higgins, Childe Hassam, Leon Kroll, Anna Lynch, Lawrence Mazzanovich, Pauline Palmer, John F. Stacey, Walter Ufer, William Wendt, and Wallace L. De Wolf are all represented.

Space lacks today for a longer mention of the paintings by these men, but later I hope to give as satisfactory an account of these pictures as they deserve.

The prize awards are as follows:

The Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Logan medal and prize of $1,500 to the portrait of Otis Skinner in "The Honor of the Family," by George B. Luks.

The Potter Palmer gold medal and prize of $1,000 to "Torn Lingerie," by Frederick Carl Frieseke. This painting was also given the William M. R. French memorial gold medal of the Art Institute Alumni association.

The Norman Wait Harris silver medal and prize of $500 to the portrait of James B. Forgan by Louis Betts.

The Norman Wait Harris bronze medal and prize of $300 to "Midsummer Afternoon," by Robert O. Chadeayne.

The Martin B. Cahn prize of $100 to "Rugged Slopes and Tamarack," by Edgar A. Payne.

The paintings which received honorable mention are: "Old Houses, Honfleur, France—Two," by William J. Potter; "Down to the Sea," by Rockwell Kent, and "Mists of the Morning," by Cornelius Botke.

The pieces of sculpture which received honorable mention are "Bacchante," by Leo Friedlander; "Penguins," by Albert Laessle, and "Amo," by Georg Lober.

The twenty-eighth annual exhibition of the Atlan Ceramic Art club opened also on Thursday at the Art institute. The gallery where this work is ensconced has an exceedingly gay and festive appearance.

There is something appealing to every one in the warm tones of beautiful luster and in graceful forms of pottery. There are seen here about 230 pieces of porcelain, decorated in various designs and treated in various ways to further their purposes of ornament.

Among those who contribute to the success of this exhibit are Mrs. A. C. Ayer, Frances A. Barothy, Mrs. A. Berglund, Miss Minnie C. Band, Mrs. A. A. Frazee, Mrs. Miriam M. Gleason, Mrs. Frances M. Lowes, Mrs. Will B. Lathrop, Mrs. Elgin Ma Whinney, Mrs. Bertha J. Park, Mrs. Anna Senge, and Mrs. George R. Warner.

On next Thursday an interesting exhibition is to open at the institute of paintings by American artists of Swedish descent. The collection of pictures is a much traveled one. It has been shown abroad this past summer, and was everywhere received with great courtesy and kindly critical praise. The tour of the paintings opened in the Royal Academy of Fine Arts in Stockholm; from there it continued to

SWEET MUSIC

BY GUY F. LEE

I'm happy when writers sardonic
Give windy stump speakers the raz;
I'm partial to noises harmonic,
Except, perhaps, opry or jazz.
I listen to gossip and tattle
With pleasure as poignant as sin;
But sweetest of sounds is the rattle
Of coal dropping into the bin.

For years I denounced in derision
The grimy smoke shoveler's tune;
With vast detail rendered decision
To rid the earth of him quite soon.
But now I await, nerves a-tingle,
To hear his bituminous din;
For what's sleep compared to the jingle
Of coal dropping into the bin?

The trilling of Curci is thrilling,
I react to the tones of Carus';
But I get a kick really killing
When they warble those Anthracite Blues:
When Sousa slam-bams I get hazy,
My face spraddles out in a grin;
But the music that makes me go crazy
Is coal dropping into the bin.

Extraordinary Sedan Value

PRESENT conditions make the appeal of this Lex-Sedan unusually strong.

This appeal is to those who want to save money; to those who want the newest style closed car; and to those who want guarantees against price reductions!

Clearer than ever before, people now realize that the only way to judge a price, be it lowered or raised, is by what you get for it. Let us show you that you will get more for your money in the Lex-Sedan.

We hope you challenge this statement. The closer you buy and the more you demand, the more we are anxious to demonstrate what represents the greatest closed car value on the market today.

Only Lexington can offer this unusual car.

Ten factories, from foundries to expert body builders, work as one company in the production of this Lex-Sedan. A vastly better car is thus possible, together with great manufacturing economies.

This Lex-Sedan was originated to meet the need for a finer type of closed car to replace the old-style, clumsy, top-heavy, extravagant kind.

It is a lighter car, easier handled, and decidedly economical of gas and tires. There is no excess weight and no overload for the motor.

Let us show you why it is good business to get this Lex-Sedan now—and next year you will be driving the leading style type of closed car.

We urge you to investigate this at once.

We Are Delivering Now the Lexington Models that will be Current Throughout the Season of 1921

We challenge the world to produce a value to match these Moon Enclosed Cars, Sedan or Coupe, at the present price.

Not even before the war would your dollar buy so much.

We ask only this, that you compare these cars point by point, detail by detail, with the other enclosed cars you will find on display in Chicago or elsewhere. Greater luxury cannot be built into automobile bodies than you will find in these Moon custom-built models. Perfect coach building, eliminating rattles; rich harmonious fabrics; the finest of interior finish; new type windows a child can open; frosted silver hardware and lighting fixtures; Perfection heater, giving living room temperature in all weathers; unusually large doors; deep seats. These bodies mounted on the Moon Chassis of standard units means also a car light in weight, economical to operate, a car of unmatched performance and long life. These are facts known to the motoring public of this city. We ask that you verify them for yourself. Moon prices are now on a "pre-war" basis. Moon values are greater than any value of the past. The days "before the war" could show no such car as the new Moon.

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

Rabbi Schwartz to Be Installed at West Side Temple

By the Rev. Gardner MacWhorter

RABBI SAMUEL SCHWARTZ

CONGREGATION B'NAI ABRAHAM ZION, Washington boulevard and Karlov avenue, will celebrate the installation of their new rabbi, Samuel Schwartz, and dedicate their recently completed community house in a three days' program beginning next Friday evening at 8 o'clock and closing Sunday evening with a congregational banquet. In addition to prominent local rabbis who will participate in the services Dr. Louis Grossman of Cincinnati and Dr. Louis Wolsey of Cleveland will be present.

On Friday evening at 8 o'clock the new rabbi will be installed and the community house dedicated. Saturday morning at 10:30 o'clock a special consecration service will be held, and on Sunday morning the children of the Sabbath school will conduct dedicatory exercises. Sunday afternoon the laying of the cornerstone of the new temple will take place, and in the evening a congregational banquet will be given in honor of the new members and for a reunion of the old members of the congregation.

Congregation B'nai Abraham Zion, of which Mr. Max Ehrman is president, will build one of the finest reform Jewish temples in the country. The community house, costing $300,000, which has just been completed, is considered one of the best buildings of the sort in America. It has ten modern schoolrooms for the religious instruction of the children and all other conveniences that go to make it one of the most progressive institutions of the day. Mr. Isaac Marks is chairman of the building committee.

Rabbi Schwartz is a graduate of the Hebrew Union college and the University of Cincinnati and comes to his new charge from successful pastorates in Cleveland and Montreal, where he was known as a scholar and preacher of great ability.

Auburn Park Federated church, Seventy-seventh street and Normal boulevard, a federation of the Auburn Park Baptist and Congregational churches, will celebrate the thirtieth anniversary of the founding of both churches on Tuesday evening at eight o'clock. The Rev. R. L. Breed, superintendent of the Chicago Missionary society, will preach in the Auburn Park church today at 10:30 o'clock, and the Rev. Benjamin Otto, superintendent of the Chicago Baptist executive council, will preach there next Sunday morning. The Rev. Arthur R. Gay, M. A., is the pastor of the church.

Charles W. Peters, sheriff of Cook county, will give a lecture on "Society's Criminals and How They are Made" this evening at eight o'clock in the Sheridan Road Methodist church, Sunnyside and Hazel avenues, the Rev. Walter C. Scott, pastor. Sheriff Peters has an international reputation, having been elected president of the International Sheriffs' association three times. For many years he has made an intensive study of criminology, and is an acknowledged authority on the subject.

Saint James' Methodist Episcopal church, Forty-sixth street and Ellis avenue, of which the Rev. W. R. Wedderspoon, D. D., is the pastor, celebrates this week the twenty-fifth anniversary of its founding. Bishop Thomas Nicholsan, LL.D., preaches this morning at eleven o'clock, and this evening a platform meeting will be held, Mr. Roy O. West presiding, when addresses will be made by prominent members including Mr. A. W. Harris, president of the board of trustees, and Messrs. Harry A. Wheeler, James G. MacMurray, and Edward Rector, trustees. During the last year St. James' church has given two benevolences $77,380, and over two hundred people have begun the Christian life in the church.

Unity Evangelical Lutheran church, Balmoral and Magnolia avenues, the Rev. David A. Davy, pastor, is in the midst of a debt payment campaign which will be concluded Thursday, Nov. 11. "Old Home day," when Unity church will celebrate her fifteenth anniversary will be marked by a special service on Friday, Nov. 12, at which time a memorial tablet will be unveiled of the honor roll of men who have been in service on the church council and building committees during the last fifteen years. This tablet is to be a companion tablet to the one unveiled in honor of the young men who were in the national service during the war, one representing the church, the other the state. The anniversary services will be concluded next Sunday morning, when the Rev. Marion J. Kline, D. D., pastor of the First Lutheran church, Altoona, Pa., which through the board of home missions and church extension sponsored Unity church during her first four years, will be the special preacher.

The Christian Endeavor society of the Englewood Presbyterian church, Sixty-fourth street and Yale avenue, will hold its twenty-fifth annual banquet in the church parlors on Thursday evening. The banquet this year is of particular significance and interest because of the fact that the Rev. Albert C. Dudley, who begins his pastorate of the church at this time, will be one of the speakers of the evening. William Collin is president of the society.

Evanston First Presbyterian church is entitled to inclusion in the list of local Presbyterian churches, with a membership of over 1,000, as the official membership is recorded at 1,330 in the Presbyterian weekly the Continent, making it the ninth on the list.

The Seamen's Church Institute of America asks observance on Nov. 14 of the annual Sailors' Day, provision for which was made by resolution at the last general convention of the Episcopal church.

It is conservatively estimated that there are over a million seamen in American ports each year, and the institute is trying to establish its local branches in every port. Offerings on Sailors' Day will be devoted to this purpose, and will help to establish wholesome resorts for the sailor off duty.

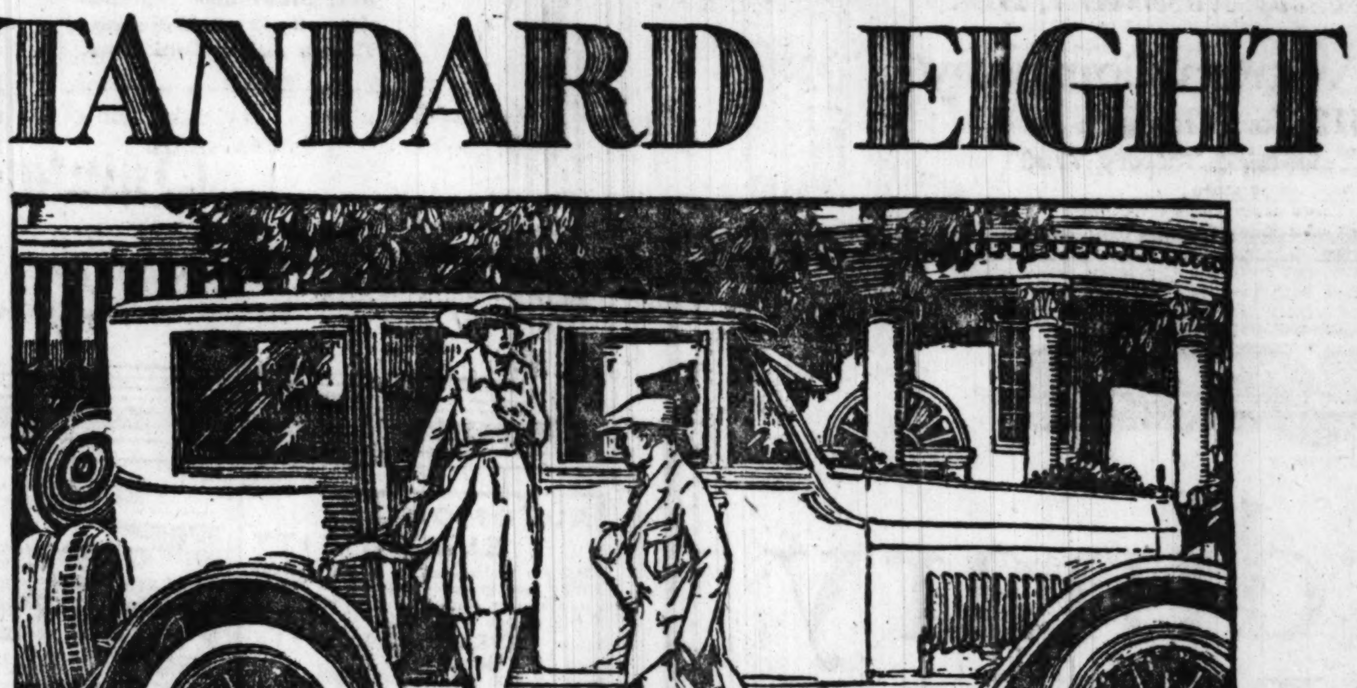
STANDARD EIGHT



A POWERFUL CAR

To have all the power you are likely to need is like having all the money you are likely to spend—you would feel more secure if you had just a little bit more.

The power of the Standard Eight is a little more power than any driving condition is likely to warrant.

Spare power, like a spare tire, is something seldom used, but its mere presence is a blessing. To the beauty of line and appointments of the Standard Eight we have added the feature of extra power. No one who rides in a Standard Eight need ever fear inadequate power.

Proper Hog Yard Equipment Boosts Breeders' Profits

By Frank Ridgway.

"FIFTY-SEVEN dead hogs hauled to the bone yard in a single month is enough to make a man feel like quitting. That is what happened to me last fall after I had fed almost all of my corn crop," remarked a Cook county farmer, who is a breeder of pure bred red hogs, as he walked across the lot where his crop of squealers was comfortably housed for the winter.

"When our veterinarian came out to make a search for the cause of my hogs dying, he said: 'Jim, you cannot expect to have much luck raising hogs when you keep them in a muddy lot and allow them to sleep piled up in that drafty shed.'

"I resented his advice at first, but I figured it out later that Doc was about right. I tore down the old shed and built enough individual houses out of the scrap lumber to house every one of my hogs in a comfortable place. The loss of my hogs was an expensive lesson, but a good one, costing me more than $2,000 at one time."

Right Housing Not Expensive.

Not every farmer is able to make all of the hog yard improvements that are necessary. A comparatively small percentage of hogs are fortunate enough to be housed in the large, cozy, community houses. Yet there are comparatively few of the 5,000,000 or more hogs in Illinois that could not be comfortably housed at a small cost.

There are three types of individual hog houses that could be built from new lumber for a few dollars. On most farms there is enough scrap lumber that could be made into substantial hog houses, costing the farmer only a few cents for nails and hinges.

Because of its simplicity, cheapness, and serviceability, the A-type individual hog house is probably the most commonly used in Iowa, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, and Missouri, the five leading hog producing states, ranking in the order named. Both the gable and shed types are now being used. Most of these small houses are built with separate floors, so that they may be easily taken apart for cleaning.

Hogs Are Money Makers.

This state takes second place in the production of hogs, and with the porkers taking high rank as money makers they deserve to be housed as well as any animal on the farm; but they are usually given the poorest sleeping quarters and feeding equipment of all live stock.

Along with the development and building of the large community hog houses, breeders have come to a realization of the importance of the small individual portable houses and other conveniences, such as the self-feeder, concrete feeding floors and wallows, and numerous tricks to simplify the managing and feeding of their herds.

Even where they have large houses, the small ones are being used in handling sows and their litters at farrowing time. They are also used extensively to protect feeding hogs where they are being shifted from one part of the farm to another, especially where the hogging down of corn is practiced.

With the small houses the sow and pigs may be taken to a field and left there with little care until weaning time. These houses are almost indispensable at farrowing time in the fall, when it is best not to have the hogs around the barnyard.

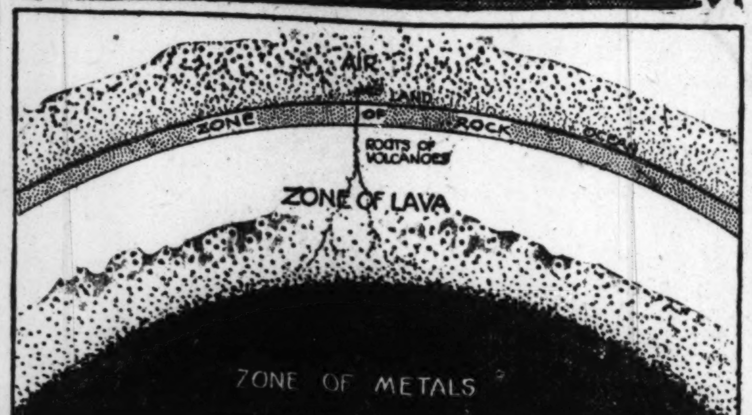
ASTRONOMY



INSIDE THE EARTH

BY [illegible] R. MAXWELL

HOW WOULD you like to take a trip to the center of the earth? Of course you could not go there in fact, but your fancy can take you if you will let astronomy be your guide.

We live on the surface of a great ball, whose diameter is almost 8,000 miles. On its surface are air and water, green plants, and all manner of living things. The air presses closely down upon it, and makes a warm blanket, which holds the sun's radiations for a time, and keeps the earth from ever experiencing the cold of outer space, a cold so intense that the bleakest polar night would seem a furious heat by comparison.

The temperature of the earth's surface varies little as temperatures go. Most of the time it is above the freezing point of water, and the seas never boil and steam the way they do on some neighboring planets of ours.

Three-quarters of the earth's face is covered by water. We call those regions oceans, and they seem exceedingly deep to us, but in proportion to the size of the earth they are but the merest film of moisture. Figure it yourself. What part of 4,000 miles, the radius of the earth, does six miles make?

The rocks and soil which cover the ground are but the merest shell as well. As we pass downward, we reach the limit of the "zone of fracture" at about six miles, below which the pressure of the rocks above is so great as to prohibit cavities, cracks, or fissures from ever forming.

The rock down here is hot, and grows hotter as we descend. On the surface the rocks are made of various kinds of sediments, below come lavas and rocks which were once melted, which gradually merge into rocks which would melt if they were on the surface, and these in turn merge into a central sphere of metal which, astronomers think, is mostly made of iron.

The center of the earth is as hot as a star. The pressure there is measured in millions of pounds per square inch, and yet the globe is not molten, but is as solid and rigid as a ball of steel. This is the reason: Every object assumes the form it does because of forces acting on it. The force which mainly shapes the earth is gravity, and gravity is concentration at the center. It pulls every portion down, and thus assures the earth's smoothly spherical shape.

In pulling, it also squeezes itself, and by so doing forces the lavas and light rocks to the surface, like slag is squeezed out of hot iron, and also heats the metal in the core by direct compression. Stars and planets keep the heat they do mainly by self-compression. The sun is white hot because it has sufficient gravity to compress even the surface white hot, but the earth, being smaller, compresses itself less, and so maintains a lower temperature.

There are various hypotheses which tell of a time when the earth and sun were different from what they are now, but so far as any direct evidence goes, both have been much as they are today back to the dimmest period of time.

Vaudeville Wit

RIALTO.

Vine and Temple:

"Well, if it isn't my old love, Jim."

"Yep, that's me."

"You're not looking well. What has been happening to you?"

"Since I left you I became a soldier."

"And did you get shot?"

"O, yes; and I've had stitches in my side ever since."

"Well, why didn't you go and see a doctor?"

"I did."

"What did he say about you?"

"He said it was all right; it's just the bones knitting."

"Were you ever in battle?"

"Of course, I was, and the first battle I was in—that's when I got shot."

"O, the first battle you were shot in?"

"Of course."

"Then you must have been shot below the boundary."

"Didn't I just tell you I was shot in the side?"

"After you captured the hill, were there many dead left on the hill?"

"Dead? Why the whole hillside was simply alive with dead soldiers."

"And when you were shot were you attended by a nurse?"

"Yes, indeed, and a pretty nurse, too. And what do you think?"

"I don't know."

"I asked her to marry me."

"And did she say yes?"

"Yes, and she promised to marry me when I got well."

"Then why didn't she?"

"She said that was only part of her treatment."

REO

This Reo Speed Wagon Fits Every Business

In its proven range of usefulness and its great degree of adaptability, as well as in its wonderful efficiency and Low Upkeep, this Reo Speed Wagon has surprised even its creators.

Its influence on the truck business in general has been tremendous. It has rendered many other types obsolete.

Designed originally, in the belief that it would meet a specific need in a limited field, this pneumatic tired truck has found its way into innumerable industries, the very existence of which were previously unknown to us.

Realizing that only through greater speeds than were possible to trucks mounted on "solids" could greater economy of operation and upkeep be attained, the Reo engineers designed and built this Speed Wagon.

Results were immeasurably beyond their fondest expectations.

Not only was the efficiency multiplied, the fuel consumption divided, but even tire mileage was greatly added to.

And—most important of all—it was found the same chassis would live three times as long when cushioned from road shocks, power and brake stresses by the resilient air-filled tires.

In a word, this pneumatic tired Reo Truck, which we thereupon named "Speed Wagon" showed the way in the greatest single advance made in automotive engineering since the inception of the industry.

Lest you have forgotten:—

This Reo was the original of its type as well as of its title.

"Speed Wagon" is a copyrighted Reo trade mark.

That's proof of its pioneering

This was the first motor vehicle designed expressly for heavy trucking service that was mounted on pneumatics, and equipped with electric starter and electric lights.

From the day of its advent it was received with enthusiasm by users.

In five years it has found its way into every part of the world, doing wonderful work in war as well as in peace service.

It is as often seen on the farm as in the city. Seems as if its range of usefulness is as broad as the range of human activity itself.

Manufacturers, wholesalers, jobbers and retailers in every line, find this Speed Wagon ideally suited to their widely diversified needs.

Crowley-Milner Company—Detroit's largest department store—has a fleet of 38 Reo Speed Wagons, and we could name similar cases in almost every city and town.

Farmers in the east; grain growers and stockmen in the middle states; ranchers in the west; cotton planters in the south—dairymen everywhere—look upon this Speed Wagon as the standard, because the best adapted, type for their work.

Passenger busses in Alaska and in South Africa—in California and in the Atlantic States (400 Reos running in this service in Newark, N. J. alone!)—

No matter what the business or the delivery problems peculiar to it; no matter what the climate or the condition of roads—still this Speed Wagon proves its capacity to do the work, and its superiority, by all tests.

Because of its proven quality, its economy and its broad sphere of usefulness, demand always has been in excess of possible output.

Demand of the last three months has determined Reo leadership.

So the only way to be at all sure of getting delivery of a Speed Wagon when you'll need it is—to order now—at once. Today won't be a minute too soon.

4 DOOR SEDAN

It attracts especially those who are inclined to look for beauty combined with comfort and economy.

This is evidenced by the astonishing number of women who own and drive Dodge Brothers 4 Door Sedan.

The gasoline consumption is unusually low.
The tire mileage is unusually high.

A NEW NAME THAT IS OLD

The name Dunlop is new as the name of an American-built automobile tire but in almost every other sense it is the oldest name in pneumatic tire history.

Do you know, that the first successful pneumatic tire was invented by a man named John Boyd Dunlop, thirty-two years ago; that he was the real founder of the pneumatic tire industry, that the history of Dunlop tires extends from that time to the present through the successive developments of tricycle and bicycle, as well as automobile, motor truck and motorcycle?

The original idea for a pneumatic tire was first advanced in 1845, but it was unappreciated, neglected and forgotten. Dunlop, forty-three years later, knew nothing of it, and his tire, which was his own original invention, led to the immediate establishment of the pneumatic tire industry.

Dunlop made that first tire for his boy's tricycle because he thought the vehicle's solid tires were too hard both on the ground and on the rider. He quickly realized what his invention would mean to the bicycle—but its real significance was far greater, as we know who have witnessed the spectacular progress of the automobile—then undreamed of.

The way in which the Dunlop idea and the Dunlop tire have circled the globe parallels in rapidity and intense interest the extraordinary industrial achievements of the builders of the American automotive industry.

Few Americans realize just what the growth of this Dunlop institution has been. Over in England there is, near Birmingham, a great tire-building city which in size and output ranks among the large tire-building plants of the world.

The Dunlop Tire and Rubber Corporation of America, therefore, enters upon its business as an American corporation in a somewhat unusual way—in that it has an established name to uphold and a clear title to its place in one of America's greatest industries—which Dunlop has in fact served from the beginning by the invention, improvement and production of the pneumatic tire.

Dunlop has also started operations on a scale equal to the task of turning out over 12,000 tires a day, with land and resources for great expansion and with all the major assets of adequate facilities, modern machines, proven methods and ample finances.

The Dunlop factories are rapidly nearing completion and will be producing tires soon after the first of the New Year. They will be Dunlop Cord Tires—the best we can build and worthy of their name—the new name in America that is old in tire history.

Dunlop distribution will be through retail channels. It will be national in scope and effected as rapidly as is consistent with the best interests of tire users and Dunlop dealers. We will welcome the opportunity to discuss distribution plans with retail tire merchants who are interested.

AMBITIOUS MEN AS GENERAL SALES REPRESENTATIVE WANTED.

We are organizing a sales force to take the field the first of the year with a new article for which there has been a constant demand for years by all lines of business; practically none excepted. Retail, wholesale, manufacturing, etc.

We require as general sales representative men of the highest caliber, who have had experience as salesmen or as merchants, or in any other line that would qualify them, with our co-operation, to build a sales force, supervise the same, and sell this product personally. To make our quota of business demanded will give you an income in excess of $20,000 per year, and if we cannot convince you that this quota is more than reasonable we will not want you to join our sales force. This is a strictly commission proposition, no advances. We want men of determination and strong character, whose records will stand the acid test.

The article referred to is a patented one and possibly the most unusual, most useful, and necessary one you have ever seen. Side line men representing you with this article, which will in no way interfere with their own line, can make from $250 to $400 per month. Salesmen under you handling this as a straight specialty line can make $200 per week. Our business is all cash on delivery. No book accounts, no notes. All commissions are paid in full on delivery of goods.

We are now contracting for territory in all sections of the United States. The proposition is too big and too unusual for us to explain in a letter. Personal interview positively necessary. Write in strict confidence, giving enough information to justify an interview. Address E T 502, Tribune.

YOUR EARNING CAPACITY

largely determined by the demand for the thing you are selling. Our line is in demand by at least 75% of the people of Chicago today. Each sale nets you not less than $50. Every man working for us makes from $500 to $1000 a month, not on paper but in cash. If you are a hustler and will go out and work you cannot help but reap a golden harvest. It's not a job to make just a good living at but an opportunity to place yourself in a position of independence for life in the next two or three years. If you can stand prosperity and want to clean up in the next few years, come in and talk. We want aggressive fellows who are forceful, convincing talkers. STAR SALESMEN—This is to men who have made good in a big way; men who want a larger opportunity. I want 4 city salesmen far above the average in ability. It calls for maximum courage, perseverance, industry, confidence, intelligence, personality, punch and squareness. The right men who deliver can earn at least $10,000 a year with me. Mere card carriers or ordinary salesmen won't do. Don't waste my time unless your record, which will be investigated, proves you a star merchandiser, and unless you can stand prosperity. If you can qualify there is an unusual opportunity here. Address D F 426, Tribune.

REAL ESTATE—FARM LANDS.

Louisiana.

NEW PLAN.

Dairy farm, cattle, sheep, goat, and hog ranches of all sizes in the fine cutover lands of the rich states of Louisiana and Mississippi, contiguous to N. O. G. N. Ry., and carefully selected under expert advice with reference to flowing streams, ranch headquarters, feeding, herding, and breeding grounds, farming lands, and shipping facilities. Land at extremely low prices and payments extending over long period of years, so that payments per year per acre amount to little more than interest on purchase price and on ordinary leasing charges for grazing purposes, and yet at end of payments you own the land. Write WALTER S. AYERS, Industrial Commissioner, N. O. G. N. Ry., 1060 McCormick Bldg., Chicago, Ill., for dependable information.

Michigan.

FOLLOW THE RULE

A prosperous farmer said that land, to be of interest to him, had to combine three main features—productive soil, a good location in a progressive community, and at a price that would assure him of a steady rise in value. When a one hundred per cent combination like that is available, made even more desirable by favorable climate, a plentiful water supply, and good roads, it is time for the shrewd farm buyer to start investigating. Apply these rules to the Swigart Tracts in Michigan.

FIRST.

PRODUCTIVE SOIL. The land which we are able to offer at the present time in tracts of 10 to 160 acres comprises some of the best land we have ever put on the market in our many years of colonization work, and includes a fine new tract of 20,000 acres just added to our holdings. Formerly covered with hardwood timber these lands will grow most any crop that can be produced in the North Central States, and will show returns equal to most of the high priced land in Ohio, Illinois, Indiana, and Iowa. Many satisfied settlers have proven the question of productivity beyond the point of argument.

SECOND.

GOOD LOCOTION. This district was selected with an eye not only to the local markets but with the idea of bringing the larger markets within easy reach. Located close to a main line railroad furnishing direct connections with Chicago, Detroit, Toledo, and Cleveland, the settler in this district need have no fear of finding himself with bumper crops and no outlet. There are good schools, churches, towns, and villages, beautiful lakes and streams, all of which combine to make this an ideal location for a farm home.

THIRD.

AT A PRICE that would assure you a steady rise in value. There was a time not so many years ago that you could buy Illinoise farm land at $10 to $15 an acre. The other day an Illinois farm of 160 acres sold for $96,000. We are offering the land in our district at $15 to $35 an acre and on terms that are within the reach of most any man. We do all we can—free insurance protection, free advice of practical farmer, Warranty Deed and Abstract of Title to protect your ownership, are just a few of our practical "helps." But you are the one who must MAKE THE START.

OTHER ADVANTAGES

of our district are explained and illustrated in our big booklet which will be mailed to you free upon request and without obligation on your part. Don't make the mistake of putting it off. Write for it TODAY.

QUESTIONS

AND ANSWERS.

Have your customers had success?
They certainly have. Go and see for yourself; talk with farmers to whom we have sold; we will be glad to give you names.

Do all who buy from you succeed?
Certainly not. Farming is a business. It takes brains, good management, industry and enough capital to go ahead. Where these elements are present success goes with them.

Do you make trades?
We do; we take in property in part payment of farms, taking mortgage back for balance. We want property only in live towns, and income producing.

Do you advise getting in touch with the Wisconsin State Immigration Commissioner's office?
Certainly; they will give you complete, accurate dope on soil, climate, etc.

How about live stock?
We sell on terms of one-third down, balance over a period of two years. We have horses and cows on hand all the year round.
These are a few of the questions put to us every day; there are many others.

FINEST MATTRESSES MADE TO ORDER

AND SOLD DIRECT AT FACTORY PRICES.

If the careful person could see what is inside the average mattress we believe he would prefer to sleep on a clean floor.

But no one can see what the average ticking is stuffed with. The cheap mattressmaker knows this and trades on that fact.

The retail dealer sometimes cares, but his main interest is in the difference between a low cost price and a high selling price.

Our sole business is to make Restgood Mattresses, Box Springs, and Pillows the highest quality possible, not just fancy ticking to help the dealer "put it over."

Dealers in Chicago say they cannot buy our quality and sell it in competition with cheap goods. Therefore we have no local dealers—But—if you live in Chicago and want bedding of the highest quality, purest materials, and finest workmanship, we will sell you direct at factory prices and save you fully 50%.

Come and select your own materials and have your mattresses made to order at the same price the retailer pays for best quality. We also make upholstered Davenports and Chairs of Restgood Quality.

Take any Archer-av. car to 35th and Archer, or write or phone for samples and prices.

Also a quality line of brass beds, steel beds, and cribs at a great saving.

Used Cars with an 8 Months' Guarantee

Glaser's policy has established a new era in the used car business. Under the old method each buyer took his chances. The paint and upholstery looked good, but he knew little about the engine, transmission, or other vital parts of the mechanism.

TODAY it is different.

CHICAGO'S LARGEST USED CAR DEALER

JOSEPH G. GLASER

positively GUARANTEES every car—GUARANTEES that you get a REAL CAR. You are absolutely protected against defects for 8 months after your purchase.

How It Is Done

Doubtless you wonder HOW this is possible. The answer is simple. Joseph G. Glaser is the LARGEST dealer in used cars in Chicago. He buys cars outright for spot cash and puts them in his own mechanical shop, through his own trimming and paint shops. If necessary he REBUILDS the cars under his own roof. When finished his own mechanical experts pronounce each car PERFECT.

Lowest Prices

Perhaps you think this service means higher prices. On the other hand Joseph G. Glaser's prices are always the LOWEST in Chicago because he buys only for SPOT CASH—he handles no cars on consignment. Since he owns every car outright he handles all of his own time paper. This eliminates the ridiculous and unreasonable charges made by brokers. Here's the PROOF—look at the prices. Come, see the cars for yourself.

HOUSING BODY HAS HARD TIME TO GET HOUSED

Senate Committee Finds City Shy on Rooms.

BY AL CHASE.

United States Senator William M. Calder and his senate committee on reconstruction, who are to make Chicago the housing investigation center of the nation this week, learned a thing or two about local conditions before they got here. Thinking the housing shortage was mostly in flats, the committee delayed getting hotel accommodations for its sessions until last week.

And then the senatorial investigators discovered they should have done a little investigating along hotel lines. Not a hotel could accommodate them. Telegrams to all the well known hostelries brought the reply "no rooms."

Then a pitiful plea was wired Senator Medill McCormick by Senator Calder and after long and diligent search and much senatorial pleading rooms for the sessions were secured at the Auditorium hotel and living quarters for the committee and staff at the Blackstone. Senator Calder will be the personal guest of Senator McCormick while in Chicago.

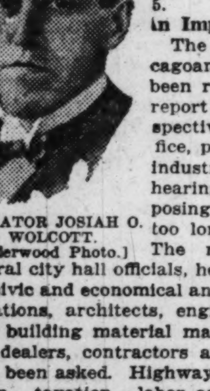
SENATOR WALTER E. EDGE. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

First Session on Wednesday.

So for two days, next Wednesday and Thursday, the Calder committee will hold sessions on Boul. Mich. and listen to what Chicago has to say about reconstruction in general and housing in particular.

The first hearing will be at the Auditorium hotel Wednesday morning from 9:30 to 11:30. At noon there will be a reception at the Traffic club at the Hotel La Salle, followed by a luncheon given by the ways and means committee of the Association of Commerce, at which Senator Calder will be the principal speaker. The hearing will be resumed at 2:15 and continue until 5 o'clock. There will be a dinner at 6:30 at the Chicago Athletic association, followed by a theater party.

On Thursday, Nov. 11, the morning hearing will be from 9:30 to noon. At 12:15 p. m. there will be a reception and luncheon at the Engineers' club. The afternoon hearing will be from 2 to 5.

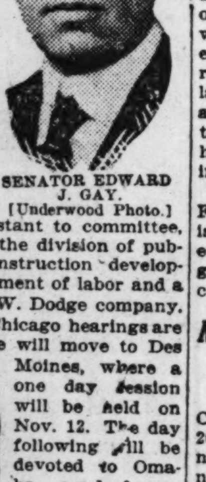


SENATOR JOSIAH O. WOLCOTT. [Underwood Photo.]

An Imposing List.

The list of Chicagoans who have been requested to report for their respective public office, profession or industry at the hearings is an imposing one and too long to print. The mayor and several city hall officials, heads of leading civic and economical and tenant associations, architects, engineers, realtors, building material manufacturers and dealers, contractors and bankers have been asked. Highways, transportation, taxation, labor and women's clubs will be represented.

The personnel of the committee is as follows: Senators Caldwell, William S. Kenyon of Iowa; William E. Edge of New Jersey; Josiah O. Wolcott of Delaware, and Edward J. Gay of Louisiana; Charles Hall Jr., private secretary to Senator Calder; John L. Parish, New York real estate expert; Eugene Meyer Jr., financial expert, formerly manager of the war finance corporation during the war, and Franklin T. Miller of New York, assistant to committee, former director of the division of public works and construction development in the department of labor and a member of the F. W. Dodge company.



SENATOR EDWARD J. GAY. [Underwood Photo.]

As soon as the Chicago hearings are over the committee will move to Des Moines, where a one day session will be held on Nov. 12. The day following will be devoted to Omaha, and from there Denver, Kansas City, New Orleans and Birmingham will be visited. The Chicago hearing is supposed to cover Michigan, Indiana, Wisconsin, Minnesota and Illinois. The committee already has visited New York, Boston, Philadelphia, and Baltimore. It will be in Cleveland tomorrow.

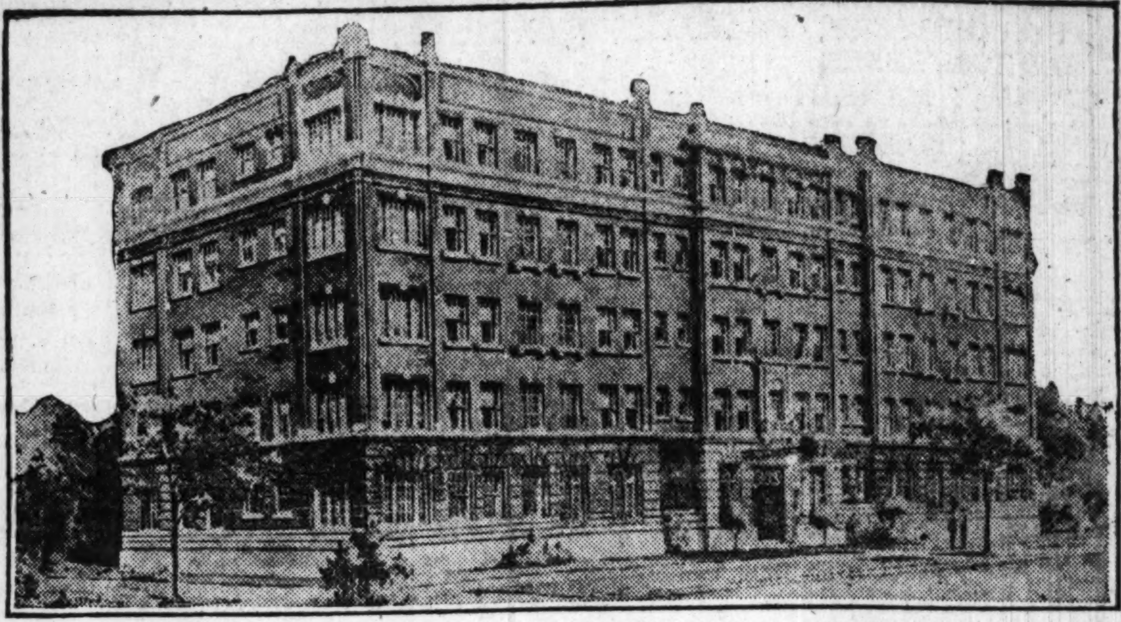
$300,000 Betterments for Bowman Dairy Co. Plant

Three hundred thousand dollars' worth of new work and remodeling is planned by the Bowman Dairy company at 6610 Wentworth avenue. A three story concrete addition has been designed by Architect Frank B. Gray of Aurora.



O Min! Here's a new flat building actually under construction. It's not called that, of course. It's an "apartment hotel," but the big feature about it is that it's being built. It will cost a reported $400,000, and is at the northeast corner of Winthrop avenue and Ainslie street, and is 50x150. It will be called the Ainslie hotel. Roy F. France is architect. Sidney Smith, M. A. Howell, and Harold D. Huszagh are owners.

The five story fireproof building will cost $330,000, with $50,000 in furnishings. The site cost $30,000. There will be fifty-seven apartments, with one, two, three, and four rooms each, all with kitchenettes.

> "The United States senate special committee on reconstruction and production was created as a result of a resolution passed in the senate toward the close of the last session. Its purpose is to recommend measures at the approaching session of congress which may encourage the coöperation of persons and corporations engaged in transportation, finance, etc., with the building industry, to the end that construction work of all kinds may be fostered and encouraged."—Excerpt from statement by Senator William M. Calder.

Says He Was First

Chicago, Nov. 6.—[Real Estate Editor.]—In your issue of Sunday, Oct. 31, an article appeared on the real estate page entitled "Moving Realty by Movies Is Newest Method." The writer begs to state that the movies have been used for the sale of real estate almost since the beginning of the moving picture industry. Many reality concerns of this city have, in years past, run advertisements on the various screens offering property for sale.

Selling real estate through the movies with a minimum of visible advertising is a method which was employed by the undersigned in May, 1918, which statement can be verified by an examination of the copyright records at Washington, D. C. A scenario was written in which we contrasted a family living amidst unsanitary surroundings with modern bungalow life.

The writer believes that without doubt we were the first concern in Chicago to give an exhibition of this kind to the public as part of the regular performance in a large list of moving picture theaters in this city, and so far as we know, the first in the United States.

CHICAGO CLEARING LAND ASSOCIATION,
T. P. Oster, Exclusive Agent.

Beg Your Pardon

The $1,000,000 theater and office building to be erected by Soren T. Corydon and Architect John C. Christensen will be at the southeast corner of California and North avenues, and not the southwest as reported in Friday's real estate department.

GET RID OF ALL UNDESIRABLES NOW, WARNING

Chicago landlords never had a better time than now to get rid of immoral tenants and undesirables of various sorts, declares President Adolph F. Kramer of the Chicago real estate board in the last number of the Real Estate Board Bulletin.

"The lack of housing facilities is a great blessing in one respect," he says. "Heretofore the renting agent or owner of apartment buildings and houses took chances on selecting his tenants for fear he might carry over a vacancy.

"Now is the time to clean out undesirable tenants, particularly people of immoral character. Organized and well directed efforts of real estate owners and agents should be made to get rid of this class of tenant without delay. Respectable and desirable tenants are clamoring at your offices for places to live. This is the time to clean house. Get rid of undesirables and put in the deserving.

"If you need help, the Committee of Fifteen, of which Simon P. Thrasher is superintendent, will assist you in every way possible. They are doing good work and it is good business to coöperate with them."

Membership Drive Nets 79 Real Estate Board

Harry Goldstine, in charge of the Chicago Real Estate board's drive for 200 active members and also a goodly number of associate members, announces the total secured up to last night as 79.

"We want every active real estate broker in Chicago a member of the board," he said. "President Kramer will be in the board's dining room every day around 12:30 and will be glad to meet every one who is contemplating joining the board."

BUILDING COSTS SLUMP AS LABOR SNAPS INTO IT

Comments by the president of one of the largest engineering firms in the country in a personal letter to a client who asked his views on the building situation throw considerable illumination on the present two outstanding features of the building situation—labor, which is putting more pep into its work, and materials, which are costing less.

The letter is by Frank D. Chase, president of Frank D. Chase, Inc., of this city, and was not written for publication. Permission, however, has been obtained to print the following excerpts:

Labor Efficiency Cuts Costs.

"Figures we have taken in this office, most of which we are not at liberty to quote, covering a large volume of building operations, prove conclusively that costs have decreased from 20 to 30 per cent. I will say of this average 15 to 25 per cent can be attributed to the increased efficiency of labor.

"I make this statement with the full knowledge of conditions as they exist in the northeast and southeast states and in the central states, based on reports of operations which we are handling from Boston to Atlanta, and including Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Cleveland, and points in Michigan and Wisconsin.

"Material prices in many of the staple articles entering into building construction are stationary. There is, however, in some lines, including the specialties, an appreciable decrease. These factors (labor and material) bring the costs of buildings, on bids which we have received, to a level which I have stated.

From $45,000 to $25,000.

"I am not at liberty to give many of the figures which we have, as they concern the clients whom we are serving, but a few examples will suffice: Bids were taken in April on a small building to be erected in Chicago—the figure was $45,000. In August the contractor offered to do the work for $35,000, and last week he offered to take the contract and put up the building for $25,000.

"His explanation of the reduction in price was that while only a few items of material were cheaper his labor was much more efficient—bricklayers laying 1,300 brick per day, as against 500; in other words, back on a pre-war basis of honest endeavor.

"On a large plant in Indiana bids totaled $750,000 four months ago. A recheck of this proposition this month indicated that the plant could be built for $600,000.

"A Michigan factory was recently refigured and the cost of last spring reduced from $225,000 to $175,000. These are typical, and the list, both of buildings and specific materials, could be extended.

Sees Big Building Program.

"Some of the largest corporations which supply building materials of one sort or another have given to the writer confidential summaries of investigations which they have made, and these surveys all point to a building program, beginning soon, which varies in length from five to eight years before this country is caught up on its building operations.

"There are some four or five billion dollars' worth of buildings to be constructed in this country, plans for which have been made. In our office alone we have several million dollars' worth of building operations in project, which will be started as soon as prices are stabilized and regardless of the price level which may be reached."

The condition outlined in the last few lines of the previous paragraph exists in practically every architect's office in Chicago—hundreds of hotel, office building, factory, theater, and flat building projects are filed away waiting for right conditions. Meanwhile our well known old adjuster—supply and demand—is working hard and fast to get conditions right.

Oak Park Bank to Have Real Estate Loan Dept.

Arrangements are being completed by the Avenue State bank of Oak Park to acquire on Jan. 1 the real estate loan and insurance business of the old established Oak Park concern of Dunlop & Co. This department will be operated by a new corporation, to be known as the Avenue Loan and Agency corporation and a portion of the Dunlop & Co. organization will be chosen as officers. O. C. Braese, who has charge of the sales of real estate and renting, is to retain that portion of the Dunlop & Co. business.

$465,000 Leases Signed in the Consumers Building

J. L. Kesner reports $465,000 in new leases in the Consumers building, State and Quincy, with the Pullman company, Liberty Mutual Insurance company, Carnation Milk Products company, Integrity Mutual Insurance company, Swan, Finch & Co., the Koppers company, Scharwhaupt & Co., and the Coöperative stores.

PRELATE'S IDEAS CHANGE STRUCTURE OF CATHOLIC CHURCH

Catholic church architecture in Chicago and vicinity is expected to develop along different lines as the result of Archbishop Mundelein's decision that broad and low religious edifices are more practical than tall and narrow ones. He points out that a maximum of light and safety and a minimum of cost and operation is attained in the lower buildings.

Consequently, the $100,000 St. Carthage's church and school at 7320-32 Yale avenue now being built from plans by Architect Joseph W. McCarthy call for a one-story building 142 feet wide and only 124 feet deep. It is in the Italian renaissance style of architecture, of brick and stone and will have 600 seats and eight class rooms—a combination of church and school.

The lot is 250x124. There already is a priests' house and convent on the grounds. The new church will be ready about Christmas. The Rev. D. H. Riordan is pastor.

Architect McCarthy also has designed the $80,000 St. Bartholomew's school now building at the northeast corner of Addison street and La Vergne avenue. It is two stories and 108x59. The Rev. William J. O'Shea is pastor.

Perkins will tell of recent work by Perkins, Fellows & Hamilton. Dinner will be served at the Art institute at six o'clock.

CLOTHING, FURS, ETC.

A TIMELY SUGGESTION.

IN THESE DAYS of unsettled conditions it is well in making your purchase to be certain of your store, sure of its honesty and integrity, and sure of the quality of merchandise sold.

While we are not prophets, we question the possibility of GOOD FURS, such as MILLER & CO.'S, being sold for less than present prices; rather there is now a shortage of DEPENDABLE furs, due to the unsettled furriers' strike, which tends to stabilize prices and make good furs so much harder to get later.

MILLER & CO. FURS ARE ALL THAT GOOD FURS CAN BE—AND THEY COST NO MORE.

FOUR MONTH CHARGE ACCOUNTS INVITED.

We realize that labor and materials are high, but it pays to bring your old furs to Miller & Co. and let us do your remodeling and repairing. You might think that it isn't worth bothering with them, but after you take them back we assure you that you will not recognize them.
